Don't Sell Unprofitable Wheat Cereals

Every grocer must sell at least one wheat cereal. Some wheat cereals actually cost him money to sell, instead of paying a profit.

Wheatena is the best wheat cereal made—the most carefully made—and has always paid the retailer a good profit. Merchandise which is at the same time good and profitable is the only kind to sell.

Look at These Shelves

Here is a store fitted with Baines' Brackets. Our word for it, there are at least 25 per cent. more goods on the shelves here than there can possibly be on the shelves of any similar store using the old style shelves. No crowding either.

The point about Baines' Brackets is that they hold up the shelves without uprights. That gives you the use of the whole unobstructed shelf length, and not only greatly improves the appearance of your stock, but gives you a place for at least one-fourth more goods.

Our sensational, nation-wide educational campaign in "Saturday Evening Post" full pages, "Ladies' Home Journal" colored pages, and newspapers, is creating a lively demand for Sun-Maid Raisins with people who seldom bought raisins before. This campaign is putting new life into a department of the grocery business. Raisins have never before been advertised like this.

SUN-MAID Raisins

Sun-Maid Raisins are the best raisins that can be grown. They are the pick of 8000 California vineyards—deep-juiced, full flavored grapes, sun-cured in the vineyards, and sent fresh throughout the country in pound cartons.

Three Varieties—Sun-Maid Raisins come in three varieties: Seeded (seeds extracted), seedless (from seedless grapes), and cluster (on stem, not seeded).

Pending New Laws Affecting Grocers and General Storekeepers

Congress and Many Legislatures Are Considering Measures Vitally Affecting the Trade. An Interesting Summary Showing the Trend of Laymen's Thoughts as to Trade Needs.

The "Modern Merchant and Grocery World" presents here a complete summary of new legislation affecting grocers and general storekeepers which is pending not only in Congress but also in the various States. It is compiled from the report of the Pure Food and Legislative Committee of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association, which was presented at the recent convention in Boston:—

CONGRESS.

Pending Legislation.

Among the more important measures now pending are the following:—

Eight that require the branding of the manufacturer's name. Some of these bills relate to clothing and commodities other than food.

A bill requiring a statement of ingredients on mixtures and compounds.

Two bills require the date of packing on the label. One of these requires canned meat products to be labeled with the date of inspection and packing or canning. The other is a cold storage measure that would require the date of production, killing, packing or manufacture and period of time in cold storage to appear upon the label.

Three bills propose to amend the Food and Drugs Act. One of these exempts certain containers of cheese from the weight or measure branding requirements. The other two relate to drugs.

Three bills relate to misbranding generally.

Three bills require all articles manufactured in the United States and entering into interstate commerce to be branded "Made in America."

Several measures propose to amend the law relating to bills of lading. Among these is Senate Bill No. 19, which is based on the uniform statute which has been enacted in about one-third of the States. This bill has passed the Senate and is now in the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Two bills propose to fix the size of containers of berries and fruits, and two prescribe standard boxes for apples.

A bill would make the weights and measures of the metric system the sole standard of weights and measures in the United States on and after July 1, 1920. In the meantime, the metric system is to be permissive.

The manufacture, sale or transportation of such alimentary pastes as macaroni, spaghetti, vermicelli and noodles containing added artificial coloring matter, is prohibited in a pending bill.

Three bills relate to oleomargarine. One of these permits coloration of oleomargarine to look like butter, and removes all taxes therefrom. Another proposes to change the name of oleomargarine to "margarine," and the third bill seeks to repeal the tax on oleomargarine.

A pending bills seeks to repeal the Mixed Flour Law. It also proposes to amend the Food and Drugs Act by adding new provisions requiring, among other things, packages of mixed flour to be branded with the words "mixed flour," and also with the names of the percentages or relative proportions of all ingredients contained therein.

A proposed law appropriates $100,000 to enable the Post Office Department to experiment with a plan for direct dealing between the producer and the consumer through parcel post service, employing mail order methods.

There are several price maintenance bills pending.

Several bills propose to amend the Federal Trade Commission Act, and it is also proposed to amend the Clayton Act.

KENTUCKY.

A law was enacted prohibiting false or misleading advertisements.

Laws relating to sanitation in food establishments and the sale of agricultural seeds were also enacted.

A law was enacted relating to the analysis and examination of foods by the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station. It provides that the Experiment Station may fix reasonable fees for examination of samples of food or drugs or labels submitted by manufacturers or dealers for the purpose of determining whether such products or labels comply with the law. Whenever a sample has been found adulterated or misbranded, the Experiment Station shall collect a fee not to exceed $15 to cover costs of investigation or analysis and to be taxed as costs in court proceedings.

The grading, packing, marking and shipping of apples is regulated by a new law. Standard grades or classes are established for apples grown in the State when packed in closed packages.

MARYLAND.

Chapter 375 amends the law establishing a standard barrel for green peas or beans in the hull.

Chapter 163 is a cold storage measure applying to fresh meat, fresh meat products and all fish, game, poultry, eggs and butter.

Chapter 208 provides that chicory mixed with coffee may lawfully be sold if the chicory does not exceed 15 per cent .of the mixture and the package bears the words in letters of the same size and style, but not less than one-half-inch high, "coffee and chicory." The label may also contain the name and address of the manufacturer and distributor, a non-descriptive brand name and the statement of the net weight of the package contents, but no other printed matter. The mixture shall contain no cereal in any form. Effective June 1, 1916.

Chapter 667 amends the general food law providing that food in package form shall be labeled with a statement of the quantity of the contents in terms of weight, measure or numerical count and provides that reasonable variations shall be permitted and tolerances and also exemptions as to small packages shall be established by rules and regulations made by the State Board of Health. Contains a provision allowing one year for the disposal of goods on hand that are not labeled with the weight or measure, i. e., April 18, 1917.

Chapter 704 provides, among other things, that every person, firm or corporation, other than manufacturers or packers, who shall sell or deliver any stamps, coupons, tickets, certificates or other similar devices which are or may be redeemable for merchandise, shall take out and pay an annual license fee of $1,500, and every manufacturer or packer who shall sell or deliver any such stamps, coupons, tickets, certificates, etc., in connection with the sale of its own manufactured or processed products shall take out a license and pay an annual license fee of $50.

Chapter 627 establishes various grades or classes for apples when packed in barrels or other closed packages and provides for the packing, marking and shipment thereof. Apples packed and branded in accordance with the United States law approved August 3, 1912, are exempt from the provisions of the act.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Chapter 157 amends the existing law by exempting bread sold in wrapped or package form from the provision requiring the net quantity of the contents marked thereon.

Chapter 58 is an amendment of the existing law and prohibits the false labeling of the word "kosher" on food products.

Chapter 63 amends the existing law relating to the packing, grading and sale of apples.

Chapter 149 prohibits false and misleading advertisements.

Chapter 189 amends the existing law relating to vinegar standards, by making the law in some respects more uniform with the National statute.

The Legislature at this writing is still in session. Bills on the following subjects, some of which have been withdrawn, defeated or vetoed, were also introduced:—

Sale of evaporated eggs, general food and drug law, sale of goods in bulk, branding of agricultural products, sale of unwholesome food, cold storage, trading stamps, dating of spring water, prohibiting the use of saccharine and the licensing of wholesale dealers in confectionery and tobacco.

MISSISSIPPI.

The uniform negotiable instruments law and also two liquor laws were enacted.

Bills on the following subjects were introduced, but failed of passage:—

Establishing a market bureau, weights and measures law amendment, mail order houses—tax on, trading stamps and coca-cola.

NEW JERSEY.

Chapter 181 amends the existing weight or measure branding law. The enforcement of the statute is placed upon the Superintendent of Weights and Measures instead of upon the State Board of Health. This bill does not amend the General Food Law, but is an independent act.

Chapter 101 is a cold storage measure and applies to fresh meat and fresh meat products (except in the process of manufacture), fresh food fish, game, poultry, eggs, milk and milk products and edible fats and oils. Articles placed in cold storage must be plainly marked with the date of entry and date of removal from the warehouse. Among other things, the act requires the display of placards in connection with the sale of cold storage food. Takes effect July 1, 1916.

Bills which would prohibit the sale by retail grocers and other general merchants of ordinary household remedies were introduced, but failed of passage.

Bills to prohibit the use of saponin and to regulate the use of trading stamps were also introduced, but failed of passage.

NEW YORK.

Chapter 228 amends the Agricultural Law relating to the sale of farm prpoduce on commission by including live stock within the definition of "farm produce."

Chapter 125 amends the Agricultural Law in relation to vinegar. Standards are established for various vinegars. Packages containing mixtures of two or more vinegars shall be plainly marked or branded with the word "compound," together with the proportions of the vinegars so mixed in addition to other requirements. Packages containing vinegars made from wine or fruits which have been reduced with water, must be plainly marked or branded "reduced to — percentum acid strength," indicating the acidity to which they have been so reduced, or words equivalent thereto.

Chapter 144 amends the Agricultural Law relating to evaporated and condensed milk.

Many ill-considered measures were introduced this year, but they were either defeated or amended satisfactorily before passage. Among the bills of interest that failed of passage, were those which would vest the Commissioner of Agriculture with power to publish notice before court proceedings of any food product which, in his personal judgment, is deemed adulterated or misbranded; containing unusual and onerous requirements with reference to the sale of products containing preservatives and coloring matter without reference to their harmlessness and the motive of their use; prohibiting the sale by retail grocers and general merchants of ordinary household remedies; prohibiting the use of saccharine; requiring canned foods to be labeled with the date of packing, and a bill requiring baking powder to be branded with the names of ingredients.

Bills relating to oleomargarine, cold storage, trading stamps and other subjects of interest were also introduced, but failed of passage.

RHODE ISLAND.

The factory inspection law relating to food establishments was amended by requiring food to be properly protected from dust, flies, etc.

The food law was amended by striking therefrom the portions which provide that the definition of "food" shall not include milk, cream or skimmed milk.

The present law relating to the sale of butter, potatoes, onions, berries, nuts and shelled beans was amended by placing the enforcement thereof upon the board of food and drug commissioners.

Among the bills which failed of passage was a measure which proposed to amend the food law by striking out the provision requiring food inspectors to deliver one of the sealed samples taken for examination to the person from whom taken.

This bill passed the House, but failed of passage in the Senate.

Bills relating to bushel weights, poisonous fly paper, trading stamps and restraint of food were introduced, but also failed of passage.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Bills relating to false advertising, warehouse receipts, the sale of coca-cola and near beer, poultry tonics and cottonseed meal were introduced, but failed of passage.

VIRGINIA.

Chapter 409 prohibits the fraudulent sale of merchandise in bulk.

Chapter 9 makes it unlawful to sell, or offer or expose for sale as human food, articles which have been prepared or kept in such manner as to render them unfit for food. The Dairy and Food Commissioner is given power to seize articles which are exposed for sale or which have been prepared, handled or kept where the sanitary conditions are such that the articles are rendered unfit for food. The law gives the Dairy and Food Commissioner the right to enter and inspect all places in which articles of food are stored, offered or exposed for sale.

Chapter 12 makes it unlawful to permit unsanitary conditions to exist in the transportation or storage of any article of food.

Chapter 18 relates to the sale of oleomargarine and process or renovated butter.

Chapter 42 prohibits false or misleading advertisements.

Chapter 50 relates to sanitation in establishments producing meat food products.

Chapter 69 relates to the sale of feeding stuffs.

Chapter 77 relates to the sale of farm produce on commission.

Chapter 391 established a Bureau of Markets for the purpose of promoting the economical handling, packing, storage, distribution and sale of agricultural products, and for the further purpose of assisting producers and consumers in selling and purchasing agricultural products at a fair and reasonable price.

Chapter 422 amends the food law so as to require food in package form to be labeled with the weight, measure or numerical count of the contents. The act provides "that such reasonable variations shall be permitted, and tolerances and also exemptions as to small packages as shall be or are established by rules and regulations made * * *" by State Dairy and Food Commissioner. The act is now in effect.

Chapter 454 amends the existing law which establishes standards for condensed milk and evaporated milk by including a standard for concentrated milk.

Bills relating to trading stamps, negotiable instruments, fertilizers and bills of lading were introduced, but failed of passage.

A Hard Bang at Free Deals

Southern Jobber Says They Aren't Free Except in Name, That They Involve a Bad Overloading Principle, and That They Do Not Yield the Expected Extra Profit Until the Last Package is Sold.

For a good many years past there has been a plan put up to the trade, as a wholesaler, known as the "Free Goods Deal," in which you are to be given something for nothing. You no doubt are better qualified to analyze and judge for yourselves the true meaning of the term "free goods deal," as no doubt each and every one of you has had experience with this plan. The "free goods" can be in the nature of "one case free with ten," an extra discount for buying a certain quantity of goods, or a premium placed upon a purchase of certain quantity of goods.

The "free goods" plan carries with it an overloading principle that is not right. A good many merchants, in order to reap a so-called five, ten or twenty per cent. additional free goods, will carry more load than they can afford or should have. Each jobber has had experience with his customers, and in a great many cases their line of credit has been very deeply cut into by their purchasing on a "free deal" that would give them from twelve to twenty-four months' supply, when they should have from thirty to sixty days' supply.

This is also a day and age when a great many deep thinkers and good merchants believe in smaller stocks, a little closer margin of profit, better known goods, a high quality, and more especially a quick "turn-over." This eliminates entirely an overloading principle and places a merchant in the bounds of securing, by quick "turn-over," a return of cash upon which to discount his bills and make a profit on which to put himself on a solid rock foundation among high-class commercial interests.

A great many manufacturers will say that the "free goods" plan is an advertising plan. So it might be; but who pays the advertising expenses if the retailer overloads his stock? He pays the advertising when he buys ten cases with one case free, when he does not reap the benefit of this profit on the "free goods" only when the last package of the "free goods" is sold. This may be twelve months hence.

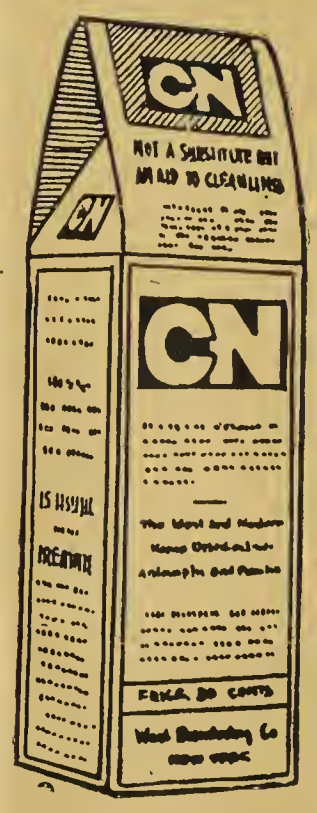
Does the merchant when making this purchase consider the interest involved in carrying the investment for twelve months, in order to secure this additional ten per cent. "free goods"? In a great many instances we do not believe he does. The jobber also suffers in that a great many times these "free deals" cause a merchant to strain his credit and notes have to be taken, which in some instances have to be renewed several times. The jobber then, instead of getting a prompt return of cash on the sale, is forced to lose some of his profit in the interest on the notes, as in some cases we know that the retailer cannot and does not pay this interest.

I believe that the "free deal" is a selfish motive in a great many instances of the manufacturer in getting his goods in the hands of the retailer regardless of whether he is able to dispose of them or not. There are a great many times that goods without merit are sold by a smooth, oily-tongued salesman putting a very attractive 20 per cent. "free goods" deal before a retailer and persuading him to make the purchase, when he knows that he has ten or twenty times more goods than he should carry and which this retailer will never be able to successfully sell. He is perfectly satisfied, for his house has paid him a commission on the sale, and the jobber may in the end be forced, as a matter of policy, to take up the unsold portion of these goods, in order to come to the assistance of this retailer on the stock that he was lured into buying on account of the apparently attractive proposition offered.

A great many manufacturers will say they are only putting this attractive advertising deal in effect for a few days or weeks, as the case may be, and they make the proposition appear to be so bright and attractive that it seems the chance of the retailer in a lifetime to take on these goods, as the offer will never present itself again, and the retailer is shipped by the jobber about five times the quantity that he would have purchased under ordinary circumstances through the jobber's salesman, who has more consideration for his friend, the retailer, than the factory salesman. The factory salesman is one who probably gets into the territory once or twice a year and he feels that in order to retain his position with his company, it is necessary for him to load up as heavily as it is possible for his ability as a salesman to do, the retail trade, to hold them on his goods until he comes again, which will keep his competitor out of the field. Again the evil of the overloading principle.

The jobber's salesman would sell this retailer just as much of this product in the same length of time, the retailer would be much better pleased, less capital invested, a quicker "turn-over"; hence, more profit.

A great many times, if the goods are of a perishable nature, the contents of the case of "free goods" is spoiled or bad. In cases of canned goods, where the factory guarantee is only six months, and the retailer finds at the end of twelve months he has gotten down to the "free case" that the goods are spoiled and unsalable, his entire ten or twenty per cent. profit that he was going to have, which was so attractively illuminated by this salesman, has gone to the "spoiled goods dump," in which the retailer reaps no benefit but a dead loss. This is another evil of the "free deal."



Remember, the profit on the "free goods" is never realized until the last package is sold.

Some may say, "What is your solution of this advertising offer or proposition to the retailer which is now in force, known as the 'free deal'?" I believe that if manufacturers will use every means available to popularize their brand of goods to the consumer, eliminating all "free goods" principles and making the lowest possible flat prices to the jobber, who will in turn pass it on to the retail merchant, who can then give to the ultimate consumer the benefit of all the principles of the "free deal" that is claimed for, as the consumer is the final court for the adjudging of this principle.

Federal Trade Commission's Bookkeeping Plan for Retailers About Ready.

Will Be Mailed to Every Retailer in the United States Within Thirty Days. Commission's Ideas as to How Accounts Should Be Kept.

Special Correspondence of "Modern Merchant and Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
June 29, 1916.

Within the next month the Federal Trade Commission will issue to every retail merchant in the United States a plan of keeping store accounts correctly. The method is being completed now, and is said to be as useful for the large retailer as for the small.

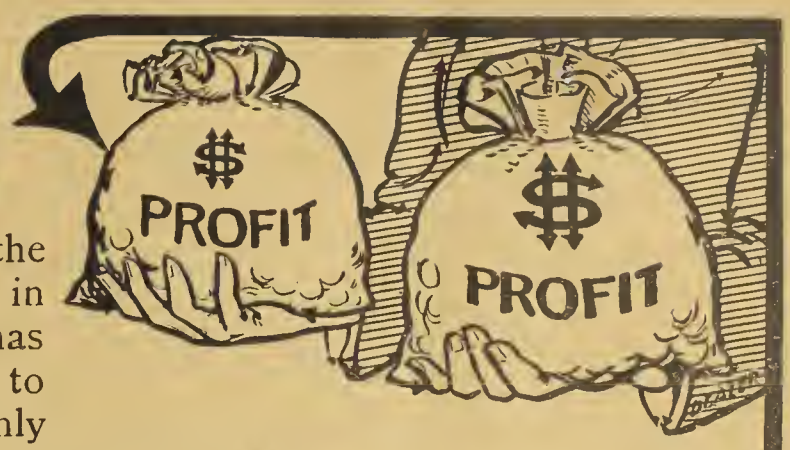
The Commission has authorized the following statement regarding bookkeeping among retailers:—

The distribution of our food products, particularly by the retailer, has an important bearing on the high cost of living and any effort that is put forth to work out this problem in an economic way will benefit the people as a whole.

In co-operation with your organization, the Federal Trade Commission will mail within the next thirty days to every retail merchant in the United States a booklet outlining the correct way of keeping his accounts. If the suggestions of the Commission are followed, the retailer will know what it costs him to sell his goods.

One of the difficulties with merchants to-day is that they may be selling, say, six different products and making a profit on three of them, but on the other three losing money. Every article sold should share its percentage of overhead, executive, accounting and selling expenses. It is the only safe way to conduct a business. To reduce your overhead per unit of sales by handling a large volume of goods, on a part of which you are losing money, is not good business practice.

This method of doing business causes competitors to fail, particularly small merchants, who have to compete with those who are making a substantial percentage of profit on part of their line and are competing unfairly with another line by cutting and demoralizing prices.



Each article should bear its proportionate expense and yield a reasonable profit. The enormous financial death rate of retail merchants shows the necessity for something helpful to this large class of our business men. Competition in merchandising is becoming more and more keen. Practically no retailer can remain in business for a long time if his business is not conducted efficiently.

DO YOU USE PREMIUMS?

If you do, don't fail to consult the directory of premium manufacturers which is regularly published in this paper. You can get anything in the premium line from them at manufacturers' prices.

A POINTER

WRIGLEY'S spear—the sign of the perfect gum in the perfect package—has pointed a way of happiness to millions of people; not only those who have bought and enjoyed the best chewing gum made—but those who have sold it—the Retail Merchants.

The wonderful WRIGLEY distribution—so complete that any person in any corner of the United States has but to step into the nearest store to find WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT or WRIGLEY'S DOUBLEMINT DOUBLE STRENGTH—is convincing proof of the necessity and value of dealer co-operation—without which, one of the heaviest advertising expenditures in the world would fail to secure maximum results.

Through the Pennsylvania Plan we hope to show the merchants of Pennsylvania not only that we believe in them, but that real co-operation between manufacturer and merchant means better stores, increased sales and greater profits.

Don't forget that the more prominently you display it, the more benefits and profits you will get from this most widely advertised product in the world.

WITH THE EDITOR

Connolly's Admission That He Is a Liar.

Mr. F. B. Connolly, former president of the National Retail Grocers' Association, has admitted in writing that he is a contemptible liar. I once regarded Connolly as a man of ability and expected him to do something with the National Association. He actually did something with it, but not what I expected; he merely used it to exploit himself.

But I never believed him to be a contemptible liar until he himself said he was.

During the summer of 1915 Connolly got into a dispute with George J. Schulte, publisher of the "Interstate Grocer." In the paper controlled by him, the "Retail Grocers' Advocate" of San Francisco—an official organ of the California Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association—and in personal letters to various trade papers, Connolly made the following specific charges against Schulte, who up to then had been of good repute:—

1—That Schulte left San Francisco leaving an unpaid board bill.

2—That he obtained convention credentials "by hook or crook."

3—That he had lied in his convention reports; that it was almost impossible for him to tell the truth; and that his attacks were "reeking with lies and misstatements which were characteristic of him."

There were several other charges, none of them libellous, but all disagreeable. Schulte sued Connolly for libel, but mutual friends got together in New Orleans last month and settled the matter. Connolly was to make a complete retraction and pay all of Schulte's costs to date, and Schulte was then to drop his suit.

Connolly's retraction has been duly made, and a copy of it sent to this office. Part of it is as follows:—

> The charges above referred to, which were the subject matter of this suit, are untrue, and I now wish to fully retract what was stated in the newspaper articles and in the letters addressed to various publishers which in any way reflect upon Mr. Schulte's character, integrity or standing.
> In order that justice may be done and the reading public advised regarding the situation, this signed retraction is published in full in the "Retail Grocers' Advocate" and also a typewritten copy has been forwarded to the trade papers to which the letter of August 9, 1915, was sent.
> F. B. CONNOLLY.

Not even a shadow of an excuse for making the charges—not even a statement that he thought they were true when he made them. Just a flat confession that they were lies and had always been lies!

Connolly is getting off easy. A man who seeks to blacken the reputation of another by absolute lies, ought to go to jail.

Let This Be Done by All Means.

The Federal Trade Commission is about to work a miracle. It has in preparation a plan of bookkeeping for retailers, which will be announced within a few weeks. In another column the Commission expresses some perfectly sound views about doing a retail business. After discussing the prevalent practice of making money on one thing while losing it on another—every jobber and retailer in the United States is following this practice—the Commission says: "Each article should bear its proportionate share of expense and yield a reasonable profit." Of course it should. Everybody knows that. But how are you going to make every article do it? Merchants who have spent their lives in the business can't do it; perhaps the Federal Trade Commission can. There is one way to do it and only one—eliminate the competition that has hitherto made it impossible. But if that were tried, the Federal Trade Commission would be the first to get up on its hind legs.

Street Car Advertising for Foods.

In a bulletin on advertising, the National Biscuit Co. says this:—

> The faithful reproduction of our packages and products in street car advertising creates the desires of possession and makes sales for our goods.

I wonder if it does. The National Biscuit Co. does considerable street car advertising, and many of the cards used are exceedingly artistic and attractive, but I should like to wager that they could cut out every card without seeing the slightest difference in their sales.

I have never yet heard anybody say that he got traceable results from street car advertising.

The Falling Off in Magazine Food Advertising.

What has happened to the food and grocery advertising in the magazines? The bottom seems to have completely dropped out of it. Where formerly there was page after page of this kind of advertising, it is not unusual now for an issue of a periodical like "Collier's" to appear without one food or grocery advertisement. That happened in one of "Collier's" issues for the past month, and it happened with one issue of the "Saturday Evening Post" for the past month.

There appears below a statement of the number of food and grocery advertisers in a group of the larger magazines for the month of June. Two of them, "Collier's" and the "Saturday Evening Post," had four issues in the month, and the number set opposite their names represents all the advertisers of this class that they had in all four:—

	No. of Food and Grocery Advertisers
Everybody's Magazine	4
Scribner's	8
Saturday Evening Post (four issues)	25
Ladies' Home Journal	21
Collier's (four issues)	10
American	4
McClure's	7

This is indeed a cataclysm. More of these products are selling to-day than ever before, and few if any manufacturers are complaining that stopping their magazine advertising has stopped their business. They have simply substituted other methods of advertising. One method is to do advertising in the local newspapers of various markets which they wish to cultivate. Then many manufacturers are spending much less for consumer advertising than they used to spend. Why? Because they formerly did too much. They are doing much less now with apparently just as good aggregate results.

The magazines are partly responsible, in my judgment, for the falling off in their food and grocery advertising. They have pushed so for circulation that the result has been enormous duplication in circulation. One family has been induced to subscribe for three or four magazines, therefore the waste in advertising has increased, and the advertiser has seen that and cut a lot of it off.

A Good Advertisement Never Dies

Kingston, Pa., June 23, 1916.

To the Editor.

Dear Sir:—At one time you ran an ad. for the manufacturers of "Peerless" compartment counters. Do you know, or can you find out the address of these people?

As a regular reader of your valuable paper I would thank you for any information you can give me.

Inclosed find stamp for postage.

Yours truly,
THE KINGSTON MARKET,
S. A. Boyd.

This doesn't look remarkable, but it is. It is remarkable because the Peerless counter has not been advertised in this paper since July, 1910!

It is also remarkable because this paper received another inquiry exactly like it about the Peerless counter on May 9, 1911, ten months after the advertising had stopped.

An advertisement that can get results six years after it was published, is some advertisement. Or perhaps more accurately, it must have been published in some paper.

Unlawful and Contemptible.

Readers of newspapers know that Wilkes-Barre, Pa., has been having a trolley strike, which is still on. From what I hear, the strikers are doing the same unlawful things which strikers almost always do the minute they realize that it isn't going to be as easy to win as they expected. They are spotting the street cars which are running, and when they see a traveling salesman riding on one, they trail him to the stores where he expects to get an order, and threaten to boycott any merchant who gives him one. This is grossly illegal and any court would grant an injunction against it the minute it was appealed to. It is not only illegal, it is contemptibly mean. A salesman from another city, perhaps from another State, comes into Wilkes-Barre knowing nothing and caring nothing about the strike. Time is an object and he takes a street car. From that minute any merchant who gives him an order is on the labor union's black list and is in for all sorts of trouble. What a low-down, un-American thing to do!

No Good News.

In the last issue of "The Optimist," the little house organ of the Campbell's soup people, the concern announces a heavy increase in its advertising, and suggests that dealers should enlarge their stocks so as to be ready for the demand. Here is the statement:—

In the July 1st issue of "The Saturday Evening Post" and continuing in every issue, fifty-two times a year, we will use full page space. We are the first advertisers who have ever taken page space every week in the "Post." This periodical has a circulation of 1,900,000 copies weekly. Full page space will also be used each issue in the following publications, commencing with the August number:—

Magazine.	Monthly Circulation.
"Ladies Home Journal"	1,650,000
"Delineator"	900,000
"Designer"	375,000
"Woman's Magazine"	275,000

Under the new schedule our advertisement will have a monthly circulation in full page space in fourteen magazines of 14,423,900, and in addition to this, it will have a circulation in half page (or more) space, in fourteen other magazines of 10,675,000. Total monthly circulation in twenty-eight magazines —25,098,900. It will thus be seen that our advertisement appears in the almost incredible number of 301,-186,800 copies of magazines in a year.

To the wholesale and retail dealers who have been handling Campbell's Soups regularly for many years it will not be necessary to outline the progress we have made in marketing our product and the part which advertising—backed by the quality of our soups—has played in the ever increasing sales. To them, the announcement of this very material increase in the advertising forces placed at their disposal in the marketing of Campbell's Soups will simply mean that they will have to gear up their order blanks a little higher to have the proper amount of stock on hand.

The Joseph Campbell Co. is selling the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co.—as indeed it has a perfect right to do—and is permitting that concern to cut Campbell's soups to 8 cents at all of its 1,200 stores, which it has no moral right to do. The effect of this price cut in 1,200 centers is such that the company can not expect any enthusiasm from dealers on account of its increased advertising. The fact that the Campbell concern proposes to increase its advertising efforts to make grocers sell what many of them lose money by selling is not an especially pleasant thing to hear.

Changes in Maryland Canned Goods Freight Weights.

The Baltimore Canned Goods Exchange announces that beginning with Saturday, July 1st, the schedule of estimated weights on canned fish, fish roe, fruits and vegetables from the Maryland canning territory will become as follows:—

No. 1 cans, 2 dozen per case, 25 pounds.
No. 1 cans, 4 dozen per case, 47 pounds.
No. 1 cans, 6 dozen per case, 72 pounds.
No. 1½ cans, 4 dozen per case, 72 pounds.
No. 2 cans, 2 dozen per case, 43 pounds.
No. 2½ cans, 2 dozen per case, 62 pounds.
No. 3 cans, 2 dozen per case, 68 pounds.
No. 9 cans, 4 dozen per case, 60 pounds.
No. 10 cans, ½ dozen per case, 52 pounds.
No. 10 cans, 1 dozen per case, 100 pounds.
No. 1 tall cans, 2 dozen per case, 26 pounds.
No. 1 tall cans, 4 dozen per case, 48 pounds.
No. 2 tall cans, 2 dozen per case, 46 pounds.
No. 3 tall cans, 2 dozen per case, 80 pounds.
Flat No. 1 cans, 2 dozen per case, 21 pounds.
Flat No. 1½ cans, 2 dozen per case, 38 pounds.
Sanitary cans, No. 5½, 2 dozen per case, 75 pounds.
Six-pound cans, 1 dozen to case, 67 pounds.

These represent the average weights obtained by weighing a large number of cases of the different commodities in different sized cans. Note reductions in the weights of No. 2 cans from 44 to 43 pounds, of No. 9 cans from 61 to 60 pounds and an increase in the weight of No. 3 from 67 to 68 pounds. These weights are all for wooden cases.

What Are YOU After?

THE biggest asset in your business or any business, is the good-will of the customers who make your profits. Their friendship means loyalty to your store.

¶ What you want is a maximum volume of sales, a maximum average of sales and that is what the "Sperry" Service is producing for nearly 30,000 wide-awake merchandisers in the United States.

¶ The wise owner of a store, or the wise buyer for a store does not experiment. He profits by experience, he makes comparisons, he keeps his finger on the public pulse.

¶ The big group, the important group of regular buyers are those thrifty money earning people who trade every day and pay for what they buy. This group saves "S. H." Green Stamps and is loyal to the stores that give them.

¶ Give the people what they want and the advertising that tells them you have it will invariably produce results, and, better still, you will know the reason why.

Now is the time for merchants to make more money

Factories are busier than ever, many working overtime.

Labor is in greater demand at higher wages.

People are spending money more freely than ever before.

Billions of dollars are passing over the merchants' counters.

This year you should make more money than ever before.

You cannot make all you should unless you have up-to-date methods.

A man should never do a thing which a machine can do for him.

You should have our complete 1916 model register that prints the amount of each transaction on receipt or sales-slip.

It forces a correct record of all transactions between clerks and customers.

If you are using an old register, it will pay you to exchange it for a complete 1916 model.

Considering the material, workmanship, and the work it does, it is the lowest priced piece of machinery sold in the world.

Goods That Are Being Advertised to Your Customers

"Modern Merchant and Grocery World" Makes Compilation of Products for Which Demand is Being Created Through Leading Periodicals. Papers and Magazines Used as Basis Cover Entire Country.

[The compilation which appears below is the result of more thinking along a line which was given some discussion several months ago, viz., the advantage to the retailer of keeping posted as to what products are being advertised to his customers, so that he may get the benefit of such advertising, if the product is for other reasons a desirable one to sell. The list here presented includes practically every leading magazine and periodical, and products that are not advertised in at least some of them are hardly advertised in this way at all, although they may be in newspapers or in direct ways, such as sampling, demonstrating, etc.]

As to One Phase of the Stevens Bill

Representative Stephens Discusses the Provisions Requiring Retailers to Notify Manufacturer Before They Cut the Price of a Trademarked Article. Says Retailer Has Everything to Gain and Nothing to Lose By It.

One of the provisions of the pending Stevens bill about which retailers are most puzzled, is that which tells what a retailer must do before he can cut the price of a trademarked product. The bill requires the retailer to first serve notice on the manufacturer and give the latter a chance to buy the goods back. If the manufacturer will not take the goods back, then the retailer can cut them.

Representative Dan V. Stephens, who is helping to push the Stevens bill through Congress, has issued the following statement regarding this phase of the bill:—

> Some of the opponents of the bill refer to a trivial provision in the bill which was placed there in behalf of the retailers of the country and which should appeal to him tremendously rather than be a source of criticism. He complains because a retailer finding himself overloaded with some classes of goods, under the provisions of this bill would be compelled to write to the manufacturer and get his permission before he could offer these goods at a sacrifice. Let us examine this objection in detail. Mr. Merchant finds himself stocked with trade-marked articles sold at a standard price by a manufacturer. He wants to get rid of the goods on his shelves, as they are not moving satisfactorily. Under the Stephens Bill he can dictate a two or three line letter to the manufacturer of those goods advising him that at the end of thirty days he wants to return those goods to the manufacturer and receive full credit in cash for them at the original price. This is the extent of his obligation under this bill. Now if the manufacturer desires to maintain the price it will be necessary for him to accept the return of the goods and refund the purchase price. If on the other hand the manufacturer does not desire to do so, Mr. Merchant is at liberty to sell the goods at any price he pleases.
> Suppose now that the manufacturer does not attempt to maintain the price and permits the retailer to sell the goods at a sacrifice. What is the effect on the dealer. Nothing different from the effect that would have existed had the provisions of this bill not operated, excepting that he would be a good deal longer getting his money out of the goods that he is selling at a marked down price than he would have been had the manufacturer taken them back under the provisions of this act. It will be very apparent that the provisions of the Stephens Bill under this clause would be very satisfactory to him unless he desires to secure as leaders trade-marked articles that are sold at known prices in order that he may cut the price and thereby deceive the people who come to his store to buy goods by leading them to believe that his store is full of such bargains.

This Tells the Tale

¶ A product which has been on the market fifty-eight years is a product which has stood the hardest of all tests—the test of time. "Knight's Cooking Extracts" is a phrase familiar to man, woman and child, from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Lakes to the Gulf. It is easy to tell why; no housewife ever had a bottle go back on her and no housewife ever will. Good extracts must be on your shelves. Grocers, if you sell Knight's Extracts we need say nothing more to you; if you don't, we want one order from you—we are sure of more. You are certain of their absolute purity and a good profit.

Mexican War's Effect on Shipment of Mexican Coffees. New Yiddish Trade Paper Established, the First in America. American Fair Trade League in Squabble With Marshall Field & Co. Market Summary.

New York, June 30, 1916.

The coffee men here are discussing the probable effect of the Mexican situation on the supply, both present and future, of Mexican coffees. The difficulty has already been experienced in getting shipments of Mexican coffee, due partly to labor strikes in Mexico. If war breaks out it is generally believed that no more coffee will come out of Mexico, partly because of the internal situation and partly because of the inevitable shortage in ships. If all this comes to pass high prices may be expected for spot Mexicans.

The American Fair Trade League of this city is considerably exercised over the fact that Marshall Field & Co., of Chicago, one of the largest and most influential department stores in the United States, has flooded the country with a circular letter during the past week attacking the Stevens bill. The league has issued one of its long statements, in which it seeks to answer Field & Co.'s letter, and, as is the league's custom where anybody differs with its views on the Stevens bill, it attacks Field & Co.'s motives and generally abuses them in the most virulent way.

Mr. J. J. Keane, of the American Fair Trade League, made an address during the week before the Business Men's Association of Bayonne, N. J., in which he denied that the Stevens bill would give the manufacturer of trade-marked merchandise a monopoly. The Stevens bill is now pending in Congress. It would give manufacturers of trade-marked goods the right to fix the wholesale and retail selling prices. Mr. Keane emphasized the fact that no manufacturer would have to come in under the Stevens bill if he did not wish to; that it was merely a permission given to a manufacturer to sell his goods in that way. He said that the backers of the Stevens bill did not expect more than a small percentage of the brand of goods now on the market to be registered under the Stevens act.

The "Grocers' Guide and Modern Businessman," a unique trade paper, has been established in this city. It is printed in Yiddish and is intended for the Jewish retailer only. It will seek to educate the Jewish retailer along the lines of pure food, sanitation, honest weights and measures, modern methods in merchandising, co-operation, organization, etc. The headquarters are at 89 Delancey street, this city, and the paper claims to be the only Yiddish trade paper in the United States.

Charlie Thorpe, secretary of the New York State Retail Grocers' Association and editor of the "Retail Grocers' Advocate," is seriously ill with heart trouble. Everybody in New York trade circles knows the genial Charlie and will regret to hear of his illness.

The strained condition of the bean market is attracting much attention here. Beans have advanced from 1 to 2 cents a pound, and prediction of 10 cents is heard in many quarters. The cause appears to be lack of supply and the fact that Michigan bean holders have sold very heavily to Canadian buyers, who, of course, have bought for foreign consumption. In addition to this large quantities of our beans have been recently shipped to Greece, Belgium, Norway and Sweden and as a result of it it is said that there is not enough of a supply to satisfy our own trade until September, when new beans will be available. Last year's bean crop was quite short, which has been responsible for the comparatively high prices of the last six months.

A committee of the leading jobbing and brokerage houses of this city has issued an appeal for the American Ambulance Hospital in Paris, which is serving the wounded of all countries. This institution is making an emergency call for split peas, lima beans, canned vegetables, dried fruits, condensed or evaporated milk, dried white beans, granulated sugar, canned fruits, rolled oats, rice and milk powder.

Summarized Market Conditions.

Tea quiet and inclined to be easy. —Coffee dull with weaker tendency, particularly in all grades of Rio and Santos. Milds also dull and heavy with concessions possible.—Sugar steady on last week's basis, both as to raw and refined.—Most dried fruits firm, including prunes and peaches. The trade are holding off from apricots, believing prices to be excessive.—Salmon firm, particularly pink brands. All sardines unchanged.—Canned fruits all unchanged and in light demand. No change in canned vegetables, tomatoes particularly weak. Peas firm. —Wheat inclined to be bearish on reports of large carry over and increased crop prospects. Market closes, however, slightly firmer.—Flour about 15 cents cheaper than a week ago.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Manufacturers of Stamping Machinery.

Wyoming, Pa., June 15, 1916.

To the Editor.

Dear Sir:—If you can do so I wish you would give me the names and addresses of firms manufacturing machines for stamping letters on sheets of metal and also the manufacturers of ovens for baking bicycle enamel on iron.

Thanking you for the information, I remain,

Yours very truly,
GEO. W. ESGAR.

The Twenty-five Leading Grocery Articles.

Nanticoke, Pa., June 27, 1916.

To the Editor.

Dear Sir:—I send a list of twenty-five leading articles sold in a grocery store located in a coal mining town as requested in the letter of Grammes & Sons. The coal miner as a rule uses meat three times a day, or its equivalent, such as cheese, eggs, fish. Then the next best sellers are: Flour, sugar, butter, vegetables, canned goods, soaps, dried fruits, tobacco, coffee, tea, beans, peas, rice, molasses, vinegar, fruits, cakes, cereals, chocolates, preserves, salt, oil.

The demand varies. During the months of August, September and October the sale of sugar, vinegar, fruits and preserve specialties are about one-third of the total grocery sales.

During the various seasons of the year other staple articles show a like increase. Dried fruits and fancy groceries are the sellers during holiday time.

At Easter time eggs are at their best and cheapest, but later on he takes on that hyphenated, haughty, 5-cent attitude which allows his near affinity, the cold storage, 2-cent brother to occupy the roost.

At present his majesty, the 28-cent smoked ham makes a low salaam, and his nibs, the meek and lowly 15-cent marrow bean, smirks about it, which the dear public resents with acrimonious acclaim.

Until recently the grocer could tell his customers that every thing was cheap but meat and its products.

The present price of sugar and the record price of the past season potato crop and other staples are such that your subscribers are not answering questions but asking the same query as Messrs. L. F. Grammes & Sons: How in Pennsylvania can the grocer increase trade instead of chasing it away from his store by nearly prohibitive prices on an ever-increasing list of staple articles?

Very truly,
J. V. Daly.

AMONG THE TRADE.

Director of Public Safety Wilson in a general order sent out through the police on Tuesday called the attention of storekeepers to an ordinance approved June 19th for the protection of food from contamination by dust, flies and promiscuous handling. The ordinance carries a penalty of $10 for violation of its provisions. Among the articles enumerated which must be screened when offered for sale are baking products, confectionery, shelled nuts, dried fruits, pickled products, meat or fish products, cheese or any foodstuffs prepared for eating. The ordinance also prohibits the wrapping of food articles in newspaper.

Sell Her a Whole Container of Franklin Carton Sugar

When you sell a woman a whole CONTAINER of 24 or 30 CARTONS of FRANKLIN CARTON SUGAR, instead of selling her one CARTON, you prevent her buying the other 23 or 29 CARTONS from a competitor. She's your customer; nobody else can sell her any sugar for some time. She has a supply instead of a sample. You have only one delivery to make, instead of perhaps dozens. You make the profit on every carton in one sale without even having to open the container, although you can do that in five seconds with a pocket knife. You can see that this is the right way to sell sugar because your customers expect to go on eating it all their lives and don't have to "try" it to "see what it's like."

CAPACITIES OF CONTAINERS

You can buy FRANKLIN CARTON SUGAR in the original CONTAINERS of 24, 48, 60 and 120 pounds, according to the grade. CUBE, GRANULATED, and DESSERT & TABLE are packed in CONTAINERS that do not hold too much for a family to buy at one time. POWDERED and CONFECTIONERS' XXXX are also packed in CONTAINERS of small capacity to suit your convenience in buying. Full information on weights of both CARTONS and CONTAINERS can be had from your jobber.

These Manufacturers Will Gratuitously Send Retailers Advertising and Display Matter

In various ways the "Modern Merchant and Grocery World" has always directed the especial attention of its readers to the question of pushing nationally advertised products to the front. Monthly Contests have been held on the subject, and a half-page advertisement published weekly contains arguments by nationally-known manufacturers for featuring nationally advertised products in order to get the benefit of the extensive advertising which these manufacturers are doing for them. In connection with this, retailers will want to know what manufacturers will supply advertising and display matter free of charge, hence the following list:—

The A. Colburn Co., Philadelphia. Furnishes recipe booklets, advertising envelopes, blotters, printed matter with dealer's name and address thereon, upon receipt of introductory order; particulars on application. To dealers carrying the line, supplies metallic signs, large muslin display signs for salesrooms and printed matter. Spices.

The Grocery Markets

Tea.

The tea market is sluggish and holders are pressing for sale. On some lines, notably cheap blacks, the concession, as compared with a month ago, is from 1 to 1½ cent a pound. On other lines the decline is not so much. Demand for tea is comparatively small.

Coffee.

The coffee market is weak and shows a decline in Rio and Santos coffees of about ¼ cent for the week. The situation at the present time is very dull, as buyers are still waiting for new crop coffees which will now be along shortly. Milds are also weaker. Some grades show a decline of ½ cent. Java and Mocha are unchanged, although there is some reason to believe that a good order for Java could be placed at a concession.

Sugar.

The sugar market is steady to firm and unchanged for the week. Raws have sold up to 6.52, but refined remains unchanged on the basis of 7.65 for granulated. Some of the New York refiners will shade soft sugars only. The demand for refined sugar is a little better than it was, but is still not heavy.

Syrup and Molasses.

There is some fluctuation in glucose, but it is having no important effect upon compound syrup owing to the seasonably small demand. Sugar syrup and molasses are both unchanged and dull.

Canned Goods.

Tomatoes are weak and very dull. Maryland 3s are now quoted in a large way f. o. b. factory at 90 cents, which is a full 10 cents a dozen lower than the price ruling only a short time ago. Futures are unchanged. The new crop season is now going along fairly, and there is no reason to expect any shortage unless something happens to the weather. Corn is tending upward. Prices are unchanged for the week. Peas show firm outlook on account of bad weather conditions and poor crop prospects. Many packers in various pea packing sections have withdrawn prices. Old apples are very weak and dull. Holders are forcing them for sale at weak prices. California canned goods are unchanged; quiet demand. Small Eastern staple canned goods show no change for the wek except that the crop of cherries has been seriously injured on account of the unfavorable weather, and the pack promises to be considerably less than last year.

Dried Fruits.

Practically all dried fruits are firm, although the demand is fair, as it always is at this season. Prunes are probably ½ cent higher for the week. Peaches are particularly firm and the newly formed combination is standing out for the high prices announced sometime ago. No sales have been made at that price as yet in this market. Apricots, raisins, currants and the balance of the line are all steady to firm, but quiet.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans are in a sensational condition. Sales have been made in Michigan during the week at $6.50 a bushel, which is an unprecedented price. Marrows are more abundant and are not bringing as much, but have advanced 60 cents a bushel since pea beans started upward. Scarcity and large demand for foreign trade are responsible for present bean situation. California limas have also taken advantage of the situation and advanced probably ½ cent during the week. Green and Scotch peas unchanged and dull.

Fish.

There is practically no change in the mackerel situation for the week. Spot Norway mackerel are very scarce indeed and correspondingly high. Shore mackerel are going forward in very small lots, price being around $3 higher than normal. Some Irish mackerel are also available at the high price recorded some weeks ago. What little chance there was of obtaining new Norway mackerel seems to have been killed by the placing of an embargo by the Norwegian Government. Cod, hake and haddock are not figuring. Salmon shows no change for the week, but good demand. The pack of domestic sardines has been quiet up to date; the price shows no change from previous reports. Imported sardines very scarce and very high.

Butter.

There is an active demand for all grades of creamery butter, both for consumptive and storage demand. The quality is running very fine owing to the ideal weather, and the make is fully up to its usual volume at this season. The market is healthy throughout without indication of material change.

Eggs.

The egg market is firm at an advance of 2 cents per dozen on the better grades. Consumptive demand is very good, and the supply is somewhat lighter than usual, although the quality is now averaging somewhat better. The market is healthy on the present basis.

Cheese.

The cheese market is steady with a good supply and prices are unchanged from last week. The weather is very good for the making of fancy cheese, and the average receipts are running high. The consumptive demand is good, but on account of the lack of export demand at the moment, plenty of cheese is going into storage.

Provisions.

Everything in smoked meats is steady and unchanged with a fair consumptive demand. Stocks are reported light and there is no particular change indicated. Pure lard is firm and unchanged with a fair consumptive demand. Compound is steady at a decline of about ¼ cent, due to the light demand. Cottonseed oil is perhaps ½ cent lower than the top, but is still very much above normal. Barreled pork, canned meats and dried beef are all unchanged.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Wheat and Flour.

In the last twenty years 9.6 per cent. of the crop harvested is the greatest quantity of wheat remaining on the farms on July 1st. This was on July 1, 1899, when the farm reserves were 65,000,000 bushels from a harvest of 675,000,000, the record crop up to that time. On that date contract wheat was under 70 cents per bushel in Chicago. If the forthcoming report of farm reserves is to be consistent with the Government's estimate of the crop harvested it will show that 10 per cent. to 11 per cent. of the 1915 crop remained on the farms on July 1st, namely from 100,000,000 to 113,000,000 bushels, as compared with only 29,000,000 bushels last year and 32,000,000 bushels two years ago.

The weather during June has been highly favorable to the growth of both winter and spring wheat, and in addition to showing an unprecedented quantity on the farm, the Government will very probably raise its estimate of the crop of winter wheat. You will recall that the Government reported the condition on June 1st as 73.2 per cent. on a par yield of 15.4 bushels per acre. The July 1st par yield is 16.8 bushels per acre, hence an estimated condition of 67.1 per cent on July 1st would indicate the same quantity of wheat as 73.2 per cent. on June 1st.

We feel satisfied that the Government will increase its estimate on winter wheat, therefore the forthcoming report will in all probability be very bearish in that it will show from three to four times as much wheat on the farms as last year, and in addition indicate an increased yield of wheat.

Last year at this time the stocks of flour and wheat in jobbers' and retailers' hands had been reduced to the minimum because of the high prices and the prospect of replacing for much less money with the advent of the new crop. The enormous demands made upon mills to replenish these stocks caused them to operate to their maximum capacity for several months, and buyers who waited too long to make their contracts found themselves paying a considerable premium for immediate delivery. This year the situation is altogether different, and in analyzing the figures we are appending, showing the prospective supply for the next year, due allowance must be made for it. In other words, the carry-over shown represents only the stock of wheat in the public elevators and farms, which of itself is not conclusive.

For the sake of comparison we have estimated the carry-over from the 1915 crop as 153,000,000 bushels, namely, 113,000,000 bushels, in farmers' hands and 40,000,000 in the visible supply. To this we add the Government's estimate of the 1916 crop, so you will find that (even including a huge and unprecedented carry-over) the total supply of wheat for the next twelve months will be 868,000,000 bushels, or 128,000,000 bushels less than last year. Out of this we will need 650,000,000 for food and seed, which will leave 218,000,000 bushels for export and for carry-over on July 1, 1917.

Broomhall estimates the present stock of wheat in Australia, Canada, India and Argentina as 280,000,000 bushels, which he says will supply all of the requirements of the United Kingdom for another twelve months without drawing on the United States for a single bushel. This leaves the Continental and non-European demand to be supplied by the growing crops in the United States and Canada until Argentina harvests another crop next December.

The wheat market for the four countries identified with the Central Powers is 30 per cent. short. The eight wheat growing countries identified with the Allies show a decrease in area of 9 per cent.

If, after allowing for small carry-over on July 1, 1916, we are to have available for export no more than 150,000,000 bushels of wheat for the whole of the ensuing twelve months, some very materially higher prices are to be seen, and we feel confident, notwithstanding the pressure at the moment of the abundant stocks, that the market is at or near bottom.

Sugar.

Refined Sugar.—All refiners' quotations are unchanged basis fine granulated 7.65 cents, regular terms, except Federal, who quote basis 7.75 cents. Arbuckle, Warner and McCahan will shade "soft sugars only" 25 points for prompt shipment, but are firm basis 7.65 cents for all other sugars. All refiners are firm basis 7.65 cents for all grades New business is increasing from day to day as contracts are becoming depleted. Next week the trade generally will be compelled to make new purchases to cover their requirements. The withdrawal demand has been very good this week and with more seasonable weather an increased distribution and consumption can be looked for.

Raw Sugar.—The market has ruled very quiet, with no sales reported. Moderate offerings of Cuba sugars nearby at equal 6.40, duty paid, with buyers showing little or no interest. Holders generally are asking equal 6.52 cents for July shipment. Sale reported cargo Porto Rico sugars for prompt shipment at 6.08 cents landed at Arbuckle.

J. H. HUSTON CO.
Philadelphia, Pa.

Imported Fish Specialties.

There is so little change in the market situation that it is hardly worth while sending out a new letter this week. New Scotch herrings are arriving rather freely, in fact, too freely, because the demand is rather restricted, owing to unfavorable weather conditions and most of the arrivals had to be put into cold storage awaiting a better market. We have had some shipments of splendidly cured and beautiful Newfoundland herrings which compare very favorably with the Scotch herrings, but even for those the demand is limited just now, and most of the shipments go into cold storage. They will be in good demand before long and fetch good prices.

Norway has prohibited the export of mackerel, salted as well as canned, and holders of mackerel here have taken advantage of this fact to advance their prices, but without stimulating the demand. Of course this embargo upon the export mackerel from Norway is not likely to last very long, and we expect that shipments will be permitted when the season comes for new Norway fat mackerel, and we expect to have the mackerel as usual.

The packing of Norwegian summer sardines, the best grade, has not started yet, because the fish are not large enough and the packers have agreed not to pack any of these Norwegian summer sardines until they are of a certain

Selling Talks With Clerks

BY A MAN WHO HAS BEEN ONE

Conducted by W. E. SWEENEY, Manager for L. Lehman & Co.'s Department Food Store, Dover, N. J.

The Human Side of Business.—Maybe some of you will say when you read the heading for this week's "Talks," "What is the human side of business anyway?" It's just that side that appeals to the simple things and simple courtesies of life.

And the first principle of this human side is to show a personal heart interest in the people with whom you come in contact. You know, kind, generous thoughts react. We get back that which we can give out. Such is the law.

Many a clerk sits tight on a distorted viewpoint regarding his employer. He sees big orders going out, big money coming in; he sees a beautiful home and handsome car, and he sees, or thinks he sees, a bad condition of inequality. A sore spot is created and the cause of this self-creation is the lack of looking at the human side.

For instance, in all probability you couldn't handle, without years of training, the propositions that he has to handle. The "law" has placed you in the position of a cog, and a very important cog at that, and the more strength and more vitality and more real service that that cog administers, the less sense of inequality will it demonstrate.

Respect and admiration and love, even for the big driving wheel always appeals to us as a very important factor in developing this human side.

That cold, severe business air that some clerks assume comes from a failure to enter into the sympathies of the customer. They sometimes unload their troubles on us because perhaps we may be the only responsive individual in sight. Should we give a deaf ear to her troubles? Not at all. We must dispense with our severity for a few moments and assume the brotherly attitude.

Aren't we a big family—ourselves and our customers banded together for mutual welfare? No one to take advantage of the other more than you would of your own sisters and brothers.

And let me say that the more of that family spirit that is imbued into our business the more of a permanent success we will make it.

The days of trickery have passed. It is no longer smart to "get your wages on the weight." On the contrary, it is the height of stupidity.

Be careful that the children of this "family" get your implicit confidence and you theirs. Wait on them patiently and politely, and give them prompt service and a happy smile and a good-natured "Good morning." They're the discriminators. They're the ones that pass the sullen clerk for the sunny one.

The other day it was rumored that a three-year-old had, to human sense, the measles. The mother seldom came to this particular store, yet the busiest man in the store called the mother on the phone to inquire about Elsie.

Simple thing to do, wasn't it? Yet that mother talked about the act in the most loving manner just because it had a touch of the size, so as to insure a uniform and fine quality. Of course, prices continue sky high, because they seem to be able to dispose of their packing easily and at enormous prices to European markets.

All reports from Norway indicate that there is going to be a great shortage of stockfish this coming season, because most of the fish is being salted owing to the enormous prices which saltfish is selling at now to the European countries. Consequently, prices for stockfish this coming season will be extraordinarily high, probably higher than they have ever been before. This is of course likely to restrict the consumption to some extent.

The market for imported oil sardines is unchanged. French sardines are scarce, of course, and very high in price, and bought only by those who want the very best without caring for the price. Portuguese are in only fair supply. Prices are steady and demand fair. Norwegian sardines are in fairly good supply, but prices are so high that the trade is not interested in them to any large extent.

Foreign Grocery Specialties.

First shipments of new Naples Italian garlic are now arriving, and show fair quality, although, of course, these goods must be sold quickly, as they are likely to spoil very shortly. The market in Naples is comparatively much higher than the market for garlic is here, so the importers of these first shipments of new Italian garlic are rather disappointed, as they cannot get their cost out of these shipments.

Spanish pimentos are scarce and high. Offers are being made already to book orders for delivery upon arrival of new goods, but as the new peppers have not even been planted yet, and as new goods cannot arrive here before the end of the year, we are not quoting prices on the new goods and prefer to await developments before entering into any large commitments, and we are advising our trade to await developments in the pimento market before booking up on futures.

Olive oil continues to sell freely, shipments are arriving regularly, although packers continue to have difficulty in securing supplies of tin, colors for lithographing, empty barrels and all raw materials, besides labor being very, very scarce. Prices, if anything, are even firmer, and there is no chance of lower prices for olive oil in the near future.

Evaporated Apples, Etc.

The evaporated apple market is firmer here, with higher prices on both spot and futures. The crop conditions seem to be getting poorer instead of better, and this has stimulated speculation especially. There are more inquiries for spot goods, at 5 to 5½ cents for carload lots, but it is becoming harder to buy.

New crop prime is held in 50-pound boxes at 5¾ to 6 cents, with 5½ cents bid.

The raspberry situation is also unsettled. Growers fear that present weather conditions will do some damage. The market is quotable at 25 cents per pound, f. o. b. in barrels.

The Blamed Movies.

If you ask me, I believe these blamed movies are the biggest darned nuisance to the retail dealer that's ever happened.

They may be good things to Charlie Chaplin and Mamie Pickford or whatever her name is, but to the grocer and all the other storekeepers, specially in the little towns, they're a big curse.

I don't know whether you fellows have any idea how much money people spend on movies, but if I told you you'd call me a liar, and I couldn't stand that, so I ain't going to tell you.

I ain't ever been called a liar yet—not more than once in the same five minutes, anyway.

It ain't anything new—people taking money for the movies that they ought to spend for bread and butter, but the thing ain't ever come so close to me as it did last week, when a customer of mine told me some of the things he'd found out.

He was kicking about some of his collections. Said he had more money on his books than he'd ever had before since he started in eighteen years ago.

"And the people here are making more money, too," he said.

"Well, where in thunder does it go, then?" I asked him.

"Some of it goes to buy gasoline for Ford cars," he said, "but a lot of it goes for movies. Here's a town of 6,000 people, and there are four movies here, three of them anyway making money. Every one of the men that run the three have got cars. Making more money than anybody else in the place. I've been trying to collect an account from one of my customers. It's over a hundred dollars now and it hasn't been cleaned up for two years. Understand, they deal with me right along, and every once in a while they'll pay something on the old account, but the next week they'll drop behind on that week's bill, so the back part just runs along about the same. When I ask for something on account they hand over a lot of promises that never get anywhere. There's six in the family—father, mother, three children and the mother's sister. He's a shoe cutter and makes good money. Every night they take the whole family to a movie show. If there's no new pictures here, they trolley over to Smithtown and go to one there. I figured up the other day and I'll bet they spend pretty near $4 a week on the movies. If they paid that on my bill they'd have it paid off in six months. If they'd only pay a dollar a week on it I'd be satisfied if they'd keep up the weekly bill too."

"Why don't you hand this line of talk to them?" I said.

"I started in to do it once," he said, "and she asked me if I'd rather see her boys hanging around the pool rooms. Said she thanked God the movies gave a family some place to go together that way. She was quite worked up. I felt like telling her the movies were all right, but she hadn't any right to take her whole family to them at my expense."

"Why didn't you say it?" I said. "It was the thing to say."

"Oh! what's the use! It would only have made her mad. I couldn't have made her see it my way."

I suppose Charlie Chaplin thanks God for the movies too. I thank God I don't have to see Charlie more than once in three years.

"That isn't the only case I have by a great deal," he said. "I'll bet I can pick up twelve people who have been on my books for months, who always have money enough to go to the movies. Why the other day one of these women gave a movie party—took twelve other women That cost her $1.20 right there. She owes me over $30 I've been trying to get for three months."

"Are the other storekeepers here up against it the same way?" I asked.

"Of course they are—all except the chain store." (I told the printer to put that about the chain store in Italics because it's important.)

"Well why in thunder don't you all get together and smoke these dead beats out?" I said. "Make 'em come across! No one of you can do it alone but it's a cinch to do i together."

"Oh, that wouldn't work," h said. "These fellows here wouldn' go into a thing like that."

"All right, if they wouldn't the they oughtn't to kick over what hap pens to 'em," I said. And I say i right here, loud, too. If people ain' willing to turn in and fix the thing they kick about, why then the ought to shut up and take thei medicine. THE STROLLER.

And Now a Canned Goods Combine

George W. Drake, secretary of th Western Canners' Association, is ou with a scheme for merging a hundre or more of the canneries of the countr into one big corporation, to be know as the "American Consolidated Can neries," capitalized at from $5,000,000 t $10,000,000. In a circular letter he ha mailed the various canners of the Mid dle West, Mr. Drake lays out th scheme in substance, as follows:—

After several years of careful, conscientious, persistent investigation of our business, I am convinced that the present enormous

Weekly Window Display Suggestions

Milk Display.

As a number of people make their own ice cream, a display like this is very good. To arrange: Cover the bottom of the window with any shade crepe paper you desire. Along the front arrange flavoring extracts in groups and place the name of each kind on top. At each side, and in the center of the window, place a small freezer, which any hardware dealer would lend you on account of the advertising. Between these place three bags of ice cream salt and at each side a pyramid of chocolate. At the rear arrange pyramids of the different sizes and brands of milk. Suspend a large sign card as shown.

hazards in connection with the same are due solely to the disorganization, lack of uniformity and unbusinesslike practices of the so-called smaller canner.

A plan I have in mind is to merge as many as possible (100 or more, none being barred) under one general head with one office where all buying and selling will be conducted and from which the quality of pack will be dictated and all possible assistance given to bring the products of the merged plant to an absolutely uniform quality.

The object of this plan thus far made known is almost too obvious to require extended explanation on my part, but in passing will say:—

First.—It will give you the advantage of volume buying, which in event of, say, 100 to 200 canners joining, would mean a saving of a great many thousands of dollars annually.

Second.—It would give you a perfect sales organization, which would be in a position to market your product at a profit and at the same time hold inviolate the most modern ideas of distributing in saving to the trade uncalled for, unreasonable, excessive freights.

Third.—This would give you an organization that would make uniformity of product a fact. By the judicious expenditure in advertising of the saving alone that would be made in the purchase of supplies, we could almost double the consumptive demand for our products every year.

This would, of course, result in the fiscal valuation of the plants going into a corporation as capital stock and would be represented by common stock, on which would be made an issue of preferred stock, which would be about equal to one preferred to two common, making a total capitalization of from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 dollars, which would forever put an end to the multitudinous signatures now appearing on the back of the average canner's paper (notes).

No. 370.—Collecting Debts Barred by Bankruptcy Proceedings.

This bears upon the legal effect which bankruptcy proceedings have on a man's debts, particularly upon the question of collecting an old debt after the debtor has gone through bankruptcy:—

Baltimore, Md.

We have a customer who, before he got mixed up in some mining deals, did a large business and used to buy large quantities of goods from us. For several years he paid promptly, usually discounting. A year ago he became involved and finally went into bankruptcy, owing us about $1,500. It was a bad failure, we only getting about 13 per cent. His bankruptcy case is closed and he has been doing business again in his own name for several months. When he again went into business he came to us and asked for credit. Naturally we were not very desirous of extending it to him, after having been mulcted by that large sum, but the man had good backing and some chance of inheriting a large sum of money, so we agreed to give him a small line, provided he would agree to pay off the balance of the old account. It was his own proposition to do this, and he agreed to do it before two witnesses beside myself. The promise was to do it within six months, and on the strength of this we extended him the credit. The six months expired last week and we made demand on him for the money. He paid no attention, and after repeated letters he came to our office and said that when he made the promise he did not know that his bankruptcy excused him from the debt. He said he could not pay and had no intention of paying, as his bankruptcy closed everything up. Please advise whether we have any chance of getting anything.

E. K. Mullenow & Bro.

You have an exceedingly good chance, if the man has anything. If he has nothing now, but is likely to have, I should get judgment against him and wait till something comes into his hands.

A bankrupt can always make himself responsible for his old debts, after he has been discharged in bankruptcy, if he chooses to. If he does choose to, he is just as liable as if he had never gone through bankruptcy.

Ordinarily bankruptcy proceedings operate to relieve a bankrupt debtor from liability from all debts which are provable against him, even though they were not proved against him during the bankruptcy proceedings. It is the place of the creditors of a bankrupt to come forward and file their claims. If they fail to do it, they are out.

Bankruptcy proceedings do not wipe off all classes of debts, however. For example, an obligation to pay alimony; or the lien of a recorded judgment, or attachment, or mechanic's lien, or mortgage; or a vendor's lien; or debts incurred by fraud; or liability to pay somebody damages. Debts of these classes are left alive by bankruptcy and can be collected just the same after as before. But the ordinary commercial debt such as money due for goods sold and delivered, is wiped out, whether the creditor comes forward and puts in a claim or not.

But it can be revived again if the debtor wants to revive it. Bankruptcy proceedings don't extinguish the debt; I was a little inaccurate when I said it was "wiped out." Bankruptcy merely prevents a creditor from collecting the debt. The debt still exists as a moral obligation. It is the same with a debt outlawed by time—it is not dead, b sleepeth, and it can be revived. T creditor is simply deprived of l remedy.

How can such a debt be revive By a new promise. The promi which this Baltimore correspon ent's customer gave is precisely t sort of promise that revives an o debt. Although in this particul case it did have consideration—t agreement to grant new credit— needed no new consideration at a The existence of the old debt as moral obligation supplied the co sideration.

The promise need only be e press, positive and unconditiona "I guess I'll pay that off," is n enough. "I know I owe it," is n enough. "I'll fix you up some time is not enough. "I'll pay that old de as soon as I'm able," is enough you can prove that the debtor h become able.

Except in a few States the pron ise does not even have to be in wri ing. It does have to be in writin in the following: Arkansas, Geo gia, Kentucky, Maine, Massachu setts, Michigan, New York, Nort Carolina, Pennsylvania, Sout Carolina, Texas and Vermont. I all States it is always better t get it in writing, but very often tha is not practicable. It would put th debtor on his guard. Often formo bankrupts will make such promise in the belief that they won't hol To ask them to put them in writin would spoil the whole thing.

So that this Baltimore corre spondent can collect his money—i

The First Gun in the National Coffee Campaign.

There is now in course of preparation by a committee of the National Coffee Roasters Association, an educational school exhibit consisting of a glass covered box containing samples of coffee in cherry, parchment, peaberry, natural green and washed green, and five samples of different granulations, colored pictures of the coffee branch and of various green coffees and photographs of coffee culture, etc., also a domestic science exhibit, consisting of five charts (9½ x 11 inches) illustrating the various points on grinding and brewing, reported by the association's Better Coffee Making Committee.

These charts are described as follows:—

No. 1.—Microscopic enlargement of a grain of coffee.
No. 2.—Comparative efficiency of granulations.
No. 3.—Comparative water temperature efficiency.
No. 4.—Comparative extraction efficiency.
No. 5.—Seven primary principles of coffee grinding and brewing.

Booklets containing a summary and detailed explanation of the several reports submitted by the association's Committee on Better Methods of Coffee Making, on grinding and brewing, as authorized by the last convention, are also now in course of preparation. This booklet will be called "The Blue Book on Coffee Grinding and Brewing" and the cost will depend on the quantity ordered. It is hoped to produce these booklets at from $3.50 to $5 per thousand, according to quantity. They will, of course, be distributed to consumers.

Fiction and Friction

It doesn't take much to change one into the other—and that's as true in business as in anything else, Mr. Grocer.

FICTION is all right in story books, but it has no place in the dealings between a manufacturer and the men who are to pass his goods along to the consumers. Same way with FRICTION. It's a good thing to light matches with—in the right way and at the right time—but mighty bad in our business relations. F. K. Sutton, of New Milford, Pa., sends me a copy of the "New Milford Advertiser," containing a 5-inch double column advertisement of his. I reproduce it below. I am constrained to say in all frankness that the "New Milford Advertiser" is one of the poorest printed papers that I have seen in a long time. Cheapest possible paper, so poor it crumbles in the hands, all smudgy with too much ink, and altogether presenting a distinctly third-class appearance. Such a paper doesn't reflect credit either on the town or on itself. It is exactly as if the publisher of it went around with the bottoms of his trousers frayed and a filthy collar. It is not possible that the townspeople could look on him in the same way as if he was sprucely and neatly dressed. Clothes make the man and the dress makes the newspaper to a very large degree. I know something of the troubles of a country newspaper publisher, for I have been there. Very often there isn't money enough to buy the right kind of paper and to fix up other defects. But nevertheless the appearance of this paper can without doubt be improved. A little more attention to the press-work would give a cleaner appearance and raise its quality one hundred per cent. It would make it a better advertising medium, too, for its present sloppy appearance of course extends to every advertisement in it.

I am reproducing Mr. Sutton's advertisement here, about the original size:—

F. K. SUTTON

This is not very much more than an announcement, is it? I have often thought that a good way to advertise seeds would be to hunt up somebody who bought them from you last year, and find out what luck he had. Use his experience to make an advertisement. Of course it would have to be somebody who had had good luck—it wouldn't be hard to find such a person in a small community. You can see the idea from this suggestion for the heading: "John Stokes and His Tomatoes," the point being the results that your seeds gave. A little human interest injected into a seed advertisement—most seed ads. are woefully tame and uninteresting—ought to sell seeds every time. Even if you don't want to go to the trouble of looking up your last year's customer, there must be some special thing about the kind of seeds you sell that would enable you to write an interesting advertisement.

As to Brenning's paints and varnishes, the people of New Milford may know all about them. If they do, then the mere mention of the name is enough, like Royal Baking Powder, but if they don't know all about them, it would have been better to say in a few words just what the particular point about them is.

NOTE.—This department is devoted to the criticism of advertising matter sent in, to the devising of new advertising ideas for special occasions, upon request, and to the suggesting of original advertisements when data is supplied. All communications sent for this Department should be addressed to the Editor of Science of Advertising. They will be taken up in strict rotation.

Pennsylvania Organization Notes.

The next meeting of the Lancaster Retail Grocers' Association will be held on July 11th. Mr. Smedley will be there.

The Pottsville Association has arranged for a monster celebration of the "Glorious Fourth." Over $2,000 will be spent to make the day a success. The will be lots of music, a parade, fire works, a big programme of sports an other attractions.

Barnesboro is reorganizing. The new association now has forty-seven members. Louis Lutenburg is temporar chairman and Y. H. Rue temporary secretary.

At Montrose on June 21st, the Business Men's Association of Susquehanna County was organized and steps taken to enroll every business man in the county. Mr. Smedley was present and assisted in the organization. Officers were elected as follows: President, H. H. Craver, Brooklyn, Pa.; vice-president, S. B. McClain, Rush, Pa.; secretary, Geo. H. Terry, Brooklyn, Pa. treasurer, O. F. Maynard, Harford, Pa. Executive Committee, H. E. Cooley Montrose; Jno. G. Hand, New Milford C. W. Lel, Springville; Committe on By-Laws, Messrs. C. S. Gambill and H. E. Cooley; Membership Committee W. H. Warner, cashier First National Bank; C. F. Pross, cashier Farmers National Bank, both of Montrose; V. D. Hand, Hallstead. In the evening dinner was served at the Tarbell House and some inspiring addresses made.

The Bradford Association has a business boosters' association for a bigger, better, busier Bradford. It has perfected plans for trade expansion and its slogan is "Let us work together for a bigger and better community."

Every merchant in the State is invited to the annual convention of the Pennsylvania Retail Merchants' Association to be held at Bradford on August 22, 23 and 24, 1916. Every privilege of the convention (except the right to vote) will be accorded the visitors. A splendid programme is being arranged and every effort being made to make the convention a big success.

The Subscribers' Bargain List

Have you got any goods you don't want? Anything—canned goods, groceries, hardware, dry goods, anything at all that's in good condition, but won't sell for you.

If you will make a price on it we can possibly sell it for you in a hurry. Write us about it, stating the quantity, condition and your best price. You might give the original cost, too. We will give it a key number and offer it to our 4,000 subscribers. Your name will not appear unless you want it to. All sales ought to be on a cash basis.

The point is that what won't sell for you may be in everday demand for somebody else, who will be glad to get your stock of it at a bargain.

There will be no charge for this service anywhere—we do it to help along.

THE VALUE OF BRIGHT STORES

¶ The difficulty of making a sale—whether it be dry goods or vegetables, jewelry or shoes is increased tenfold in a poorly lighted store. Other things being equal, the Electrically lighted shop will do more business than the store which uses other illuminants. "Indoor Daylight" can only be obtained by the use of Mazda Electric lamps.

Wholesale Coffee Man Tells Retailers They Are Handling Too Many Brands

Another Reason They Are Losing Their Coffee Business is That They Pay Far Too Little Attention to Quality.

My experience has proven that there are too many men in the retail grocery business that buy coffee simply because it is coffee, without respect to quality at all. I want to say to you that conditions to-day make the wholesale coffee roaster himself as much responsible as the retail grocer; and I say that advisedly because salesmen go out and, instead of talking quality, are always inducing the grocery men to buy something cheaper on which he can make a greater profit. We don't need competition amongst the wholesale coffee roasters, but instead, we need competition among salesmen to get results. When we get into a grocery store and talk coffee, and talk a little higher price than the grocer has been paying, he tells us that it is too high; and if we talk quality to him he hasn't got time—he has to make a certain amount of profit, and the coffee he is using is paying him two or three cents a pound more than what we are trying to sell him, and he doesn't want to think about it.

On the question of quality, there are lots of 50-cent shirts sold, and yet a Manhattan shirt costs $2.50, $3, $4.50 and $5, and they haven't found it necessary to reduce the price, because there are cheaper shirts sold. Dunlaps get $5 for their hats, and there are lots of hats which you can buy cheaper. I will say on this question of quality, that if any one was to walk along the principal street in his home town and a fellow unfortunate lost control of himself by having imbibed too freely, and his hat would roll off, you would go out and pick it up, and seeing the name Dunlap in it, you would say: "He is no bum; he is a good man if he wears a hat like that," and you would assist him.

What is going to become of us, we wholesale coffee roasters, if the retailers let the business get away from them? That's a very, very grave question with us, because the roasters of the United States have upward of $60,000,000 invested in the business. We, of course, could do like some of the gentlemen who are getting the business from us, due largely to your efforts, but we don't believe that's the right business. We believe that the coffee business belongs to the retailer—the retail grocer, just as much as condensed milk or anything else sold in your stores, and that's where it belongs, with you people. We are told that 60 per cent. of the coffee business goes to peddlers and mail-order houses. At the recent convention, by actual canvass made in some of the States of the gentlemen attending, I was advised that these figures were absolutely correct. We were also told that one of the firms that was going direct to the family business increased their sales the first three months of this year 54 per cent. Who did they take it from? They took it from the retail grocer.

We go into a retail grocery store and try to get the grocer to make a special effort on quality. He tells us: "I am selling too many articles; go out and create a demand for your stuff and I will sell it." Think of it! He will sell it if the quality is no good, simply because we create a demand for it. There is $135,000,000 worth of roasted coffee sold a year. Do you mean to tell me that you are too busy to get your share of that amount? I think you are too good business men to tell us so.

What about the method of handling cheap coffees and asking a large profit? We have some men in the grocery business that I know that all the persuasions on our part have not been able to change. They will pay 14 or 15 cents for a coffee that they will sell for 25 cents. Don't you know that those very men that are doing that thing are the best advertising medium that the mail-order and premium houses have? They drive the business away from them into the tea store, and I say to you, that to-day there are no longer any tea or coffee stores. Most of them carry a well-regulated and displayed line of groceries, and when you lose that pound of coffee and let it go in that store you lose other things as well; extracts, spices and other profitable articles are lost to you. You not only lose the tea and coffee business, but you lose many other things also. How long is that to continue?

In the South we advance 5 cents a pound or decline it at a time. If we could only get the retail grocer, when his goods advance or decrease 1 cent a pound, to go up a cent or decline, there would be lots of business you would retain—that we would retain for the retail grocer; but we hold out down here—it has to be 5 cents a pound, because our grandfathers did that one hundred years ago. If I was to go in the store of either one of you gentlemen and tell you that I wanted to sell you a cheap lot of flour or butter you would laugh at me and say, no. Cheap flour? Cheap butter? If it applies to flour and applies to butter, why doesn't it apply to coffee? Why do you want to drive your coffee business away and save the others? I say to you that your coffee and tea are the best profit-producers in your grocery business, but for God's sake, don't expect your coffee and tea to pay all your expenses, and try and sell them for a long profit, but instead, increase your profit on other articles that you now sell practically at cost, thereby striking a happy average. That's what you want to do.

I think a good thing to do in trying to get your coffee business back is to start a little campaign with your clerks one day in the week. Go over your books and see the people who are buying goods from you, and I will wager that a very small percentage are buying coffee. Say to your clerks: "We are going to start a campaign amongst you fellows, and to the fellow who gets the greatest increase we are going to give a little something for his trouble." See if you cannot get it back. I know that human nature is so consistent that any man can do what he wants if he has the nerve to stick long enough; I want to say to you that your greatest and main source of trouble—and I am here talking against myself by saying so—you are handling too many brands of coffee. The jobbers that try to make you buy 500 pounds at a time make you buy five times as much as you need, with the result that when you get to the last one hundred pounds your coffee is unsatisfactory and does not do you or the man who sold it to you any good.

Learn something about the coffee business, study and find out what your customers want, then take up some good house that you have confidence in and believe in, and give your customers the same grade of coffee at all times, and stick to that house. Cut out carrying twelve fourteen or fifteen different brands of coffee, because you have not a sufficient number of customers for each brand to buy that many—it becomes unsatisfactory and helps you to lose your coffee business and drive it into the premium stores. Quit it, handle one brand of coffee. Cut out fifteen or twenty of them.

I just desire to remind you of the old story of the lady who was bragging to her friend that she always bought her husband's cigars. "How in the name of goodness can you buy his cigars and select ones that will please him?" "I get one of the old stumps and match the color." That's the trouble with the retail grocer; too many are matching the color.

Why Meats Are So High.

The Production, While Increasing, Has Not Increased Fast Enough for the Increase in Demand. No Much Relief in Sight. One Factor is Loss of Cattle and Hogs by Disease.

Special Correspondence of "Modern Merchant and Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,

July 7, 1916.

That meat production has not kept pace with the increase in population and that its failure to do so combined with increased cost of production and diminished purchasing power of the money unit, has contributed to higher prices not only in the United States but all over the world is stated in Part I of the exhaustive report on the meat situation in the preparation of which specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture have been engaged for some time. This country, it is said, is participating in a world-wide movement and it is not expected that the situation will undergo any radical change in the immediate future.

In America this gradual expansion appears to have begun already. Between 1907 and 1913 there was a marked decline in the number of attle in the country, but in the last wo years this has not only stopped ut has given way to a perceptible ıcrease. The estimated number of attle on farms and ranges on Janury 1, 1916, 61,441,000, is, however, till much below the corresponding gure for 1907, 72,534,000.

With the exception of temporary hecks due to losses from hog holera, there has been in recent ears a persistent increase in the roduction of swine. On January 1, 916, the number in the country was stimated at 68,000,000, as compared with 58,200,000 in April, 910.

On the other hand, the number of heep declined during this period rom 52,500,000 in 1910 to 49,200,000 in 1916. As the decrease, however, is not sufficient to offset the increase in cattle and swine, it may be aid that the total production of neat in the United States is increasing but that this increase is not et proportionate to the growth in opulation.

The available supply of meat would be much greater if it were not for the enormous losses caused by disease and exposure. Since 1900 it is estimated that from 1,100,000 to 1,475,000 cattle have died each year from disease and from 600,000 to 1,500,000 from exposure. With sheep the losses from disease have been about the same, but from exposure much larger. With swine the relative prevalence of hog cholera is perhaps the determining factor in the annual loss. In 1894 this was as low as 2,200,000, but in 1914 it amounted to 7,000,000. If these 7,000,000 hogs had been saved, it is said, they would have produced enough meat to furnish every family in the United States with 40 pounds of pork.

Our exports now consist largely of pork and pork products and these are derived to a great extent from corn. In the fiscal years 1914 and 1915 we imported more fresh, chilled and frozen beef and mutton than we exported, and more beef of all descriptions was imported in 1914 than was exported.

General Misbranding Bill Introduced in Congress and Likely to Pass

It Is the Barkley Bill and the Commerce Committee Will Favorably Report It. Does for All Other Merchandise What Food and Drugs Act Does for Products Within Its Scope.

Written for the "Modern Merchant and Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
July 6, 1916.

A new bill is looming up in Congress which is expected to help the campaign against misbranding. It seeks to do for merchandise generally, outside of food, drink and drugs, what the Federal Food and Drugs Act does to prevent misbranding of those products.

The bill in question is known as the Barkley bill, and it is now before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, which body is expected to favorably recommend it. Members say it will probably be pushed through as there is no opposition to it. The text is as follows:—

An article shall be deemed to be misbranded:—

First, if it be an imitation of, or offered for sale, under the name of another article.

Second, if the contents of the package, as originally put up shall have been removed in whole or in part, and other contents shall have been placed therein.

Third, if in package form, and the contents are stated in terms of weight, measure, numerical count or quality, they are not plaintly and correctly stated on the outside of the package.

Fourth, if there is stamped, stenciled, branded, engraved, printed, embossed or otherwise marked upon such article or commodity, or upon any label, tag, card or other appendage attached thereto, or upon any box, barrel, package, cover, wrapper or other receptacle, inclosing or encasing the same, any word, statement, symbol, design, device or indication which is false, fraudulent, deceptive or misleading, as to its weight or measure, or as to the State, District, Territory possession or country in which it is manufactured or produced, as to the materials or substances of which it is composed, as to the mode of its manufacture or production, as to being the subject of an existing patent or copyright, as to its being the manufacture, product or merchandise of any person other than the person whose manufacture, product or merchandise it is in fact or which indicates or is designed, intended, or calculated to indicate that the article or commodity is of a character or quality superior to or otherwise different from its real character or quality, or that it is an article or commodity known by some other distinct name, or if there is applied thereto the name or initials of any person in any false, inaccurate, misleading or deceptive manner, or which is false, misleading or deceptive in any other particular.

Fifth, or if there be published, issued or circulated concerning, regarding, or in any manner pertaining to said article, in any newspaper, magazine, book, pamphlet, circular or other printed publication or advertisement, any false, fraudulent, misleading or deceptive word, statement, representation, symbol or device as to any of the matters or things stipulated in the foregoing sub-sections of this section.

WITH THE EDITOR

And now it appears that the chain-store idea is to be extended to the retail dry goods business. So far as I know, this has not been done up to this time. Read the following advertisement, which appeared in some Eastern daily papers during the week:—

Chain Stores and Dry Goods.

CHAIN STORES OFFER OPPORTUNITY.

This company is starting dry goods stores in towns of 3,000 to 30,000 throughout Nebraska, Minnesota, Arkansas, Kentucky, Ohio, New Jersey, Kansas, Iowa, Wisconsin, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Oklahoma, Missouri, Illinois, Michigan, New York and the New England States. Will also consider propositions to take over established stores in some localities. Its 7 per cent. preferred stock, with a liberal bonus of common, may be acquired NOW on the original subscription basis. Write Financial Division, Suite 503, 217 Broadway, New York.

Up to now, the chain-store idea has been extended to groceries, tobacco, confectionery, drugs, 5-and-10-cent articles and 25-cent articles. Now that it is to get into dry goods, it means the application of the idea to practically every staple line with the possible exception of hardware. Well, the grocer should worry. He has gotten his, why shouldn't some of his brethren in other lines enjoy the same great blessing?

I have always preached learning from anybody under the shining sun, if what could be learned was useful. That means from chain-stores, from mail-order houses—from anybody who has anything good. Some merchants have an idea they would be doing a mail-order house a favor if they took one of its bright ideas!

A Fine Guarantee.

Here is the standing guarantee which Sears, Roebuck & Co., the Chicago mail-order house, uses in selling groceries by mail. No guarantee can go further, and few go as far. I reproduce it as worthy of the emulation of every retailer, particularly those who have to compete with the mail-order houses:—

> You may return at our expense any groceries you buy of us which are not satisfactory in every way, or on which you think you have not saved money. We will then exchange them for exactly what you want or return your money, together with any transportation charges you paid.
> SEARS, ROEBUCK & Co.
> Chicago.

Many merchants advertise "Money Back on Request," and they will give the money back, but the cheerfulness with which they do it would make an undertaker seem like a monument of mirth. I have never seen a more complete guarantee than that reproduced above, or one more likely to create confidence.

Honesty in Branding General Merchandise.

At last Congress seems about to do another thing which this paper has long advocated—pass a bill penalizing the misbranding of all products not covered by the Federal Food and Drugs Act. It is known as the Barkley bill and it is expected to come out of the House Commerce Committee shortly with a favorable recommendation.

The bill contains one radical departure, or rather, addition, as compared with the Federal Food and Drugs Act. The latter law only penalizes false representations when made on the label or on literature accompanying the package. The Barkley bill penalizes it even if done in advertising, quite separate from the article, as for instance, in a magazine.

The Barkley bill is good and when it is a law it will help immensely. It will be to honest merchandising even more of a boon than the Federal Food and Drugs Act, for while the latter covers but two classes of products, the Barkley bill covers them all.

The American Congress can usually be depended upon, sooner or later, to awaken to the absurdity of a situation which that body has itself created, but it often takes an incredible time. Ten years ago Congress passed a bill preventing the adulteration of food, drink and drugs, but only now has it seriously contemplated the passage of legislation similarly guarding the other lines of merchandise.

The Barkley bill will not be pleasant reading for some of the mail-order houses.

Written for the "Modern Merchant and Grocery World."

Some Ways of Avoiding Chain Store Competition

A Brooklyn (N. Y.) Retailer Says Chain Stores Have a Right to Buy Cheaper Than the Small Buyer and That It Would Be Unfair to Expect Manufacturers to Hold the Umbrella for Small Buyers. Suggests Several Ways of Meeting Chain Stores.

Concerning the article in the "Modern Merchant and Grocery World" as to the Campbell soup people, I am going to tell you of some of my experiences.

I was in South Africa between the years of 1896 and 1901. I traveled among the farmers (Boers). I'll call them peddlers. I used to eat, drink, sleep and absolutely live among them. That made me acquainted with all their ways, habits and their business.

There was one farmer named Powell Kruger. He was an expressman. He had a route between Johannesburg and Standerton. He did this work in the winter, because in the summer he has his farm to take care of and then he has to give the oxen the rest they need and fatten them up. In the summer, too, there is a great deal of rain.

From Johannesburg to Standerton is fifteen hours to travel with a horse, but with his oxen it would take thirty days to go and return.

Once a bank clerk had to make this trip, and as there was no train, he had to make the trip in thirty days—eat, drink and sleep in the field. The whole voyage cost him about £50.

After that a post wagon covered the route in about seven days, that is, made the round trip. Now with an automobile you can eat supper in Johannesburg and go to Standerton to see a show, and get back in Johannesburg that same night. On the train, round trip, it would cost thirty shillings and you make it in a couple of hours.

Of course, my friend Kruger lost all his chances of doing business. Do you think there would be any use of his trying to talk it over with his customers in order not to lose his trade? I hardly think it would be of any use, because with him it would cost five times as much for the expressing—it takes thirty times as long to get the goods there, while with the new way (train) shippers had the comforts and were safe in every way, which they did not have with my old friend Kruger.

"Yes, my friend, we have nothing against you personally, if you would only do business by the new way (train) and give us all the comfort, etc., we would rather go to you than to the new people, but if you still conduct your business with the oxen, 'nothing doing.' Friend Powell, you are working hard all right, and trying your best to come in on time, but with you the cost is 5 times 1, time 30 times 1, responsibility none, comfort none."

Now my friends, brothers, grocerymen, what do you want? The chain store people are buying direct; no salesmen, no jobber, and no other expense between the manufacturer and the chain store. For instance, the Great Atlantic and Pacific; they may have a standing order with the Joseph Campbell Co. for 1,000 boxes of all their products every week, and if the orders have to be increased or decreased, the only expense is a letter and a two cent stamp. If you will take all this expense into consideration, then without discussing it further, you will have to admit that it costs them a great deal less than you, with their stock of goods—from 10 to 50 per cent.

Now, again, do you want the Campbell Company to charge the A. & P. people the same price as they do you, who do not use as much in a year as the A. & P. do in a day? Just to protect you? It would be the same as expecting the train to charge the same as the oxen, just to protect Kruger.

Or, do you want the chain store to charge the same price as you—just be pleased with the extra profit and not lower the price, to protect you? Would you think it right for the train to charge for a half day's work what Kruger charges for a month's work? Do you think that people should patronize you and pay you from 5 to 50 per cent. higher because you are on a par with Kruger? Would you do that? I am sure you would not.

Now I do not see any reason for complaining about the manufacturer or the chain store. But if you like to be within the line and get along, there is two remedies.

One sure thing, do away with your big stores, a lot of junk in your stores, a great deal of the stock; do away with your deliveries, your telephone; do away with the foolish idea of going out for your orders, and, above all, do away with the books. Do not trust anybody.

First, turn your store into a fancy delicatessen and groceries. Buy a little at a time, pay the full price, and charge the full price. Make your own salads, put up your own pickles, your own preserves, buy your eggs in the market, your butter in the market. You can get one case of eggs and ten pounds of butter very reasonable. You may do $100 to $200 business per week, but you will make more than you are to-day doing $500 to $600. You will surely save money, but do not work outside of your store, and be sure to keep moving all the time inside of your store.

Or second, have your store turned into a fruit and vegetable store only, no groceries at all. Buy fresh goods in the market every day; display everything, have everything, charge a profit on everything you sell, but don't overcharge, the same as above, with the exception of delivery. Deliver such orders as are worth while, but follow all the other don'ts in the delicatessen business. You might add to the fruit and vegetables butter and eggs, but only if you have a large place to display, and you understand how to buy right and how to candle.

Lastly, if you like the grocery business, then turn your store into an Economy store. It calls for a lot more than the first two, but there is a possibility. Here it is:

Ten grocerymen in a given vicinity should form a corporation. Out of the ten two stores should be closed up completely. One store should be used for the headquarters and three men should operate that—one as buyer, another his assistant, and the third should be "boss," sort of general manager of all the other stores. The buyer and his assistant should go in the other stores and help as much as they have time to. The general manager should also act as inspector or, I should say, criticise everything. He should see that every store is spotless and every manager is doing the same work. The store should be closed one afternoon a week and that afternoon meetings should be held and the managers should be compelled to go to school. There should also be a strict supervisor and fines should be imposed. It would be well to change the managers from store to store.

This would help you to compete with the chain stores, and even get the best of them, because then you will get goods as cheap as any of them; and another thing, you will have more interest and be better than the chain stores. Your manager will do his best for the good of the business, while the chain store manager is taking care of his own pocket. He will go on until he is caught, then he will be discharged, but no man will cheat himself.

The Grocery Markets

Tea.

The tea market shows no change for the week. The situation is fair considering that June is usually a dull month. Some holders are pressing for sale and are willing to make slight concessions, but the undertone is steady. The consumptive demand for tea is quiet. Apparently the supply of spot tea is small, and new tea has not yet begun to come forward in very large quantities.

Coffee.

Actual Rio and Santos coffee is unchanged from a week ago. The demand is very light. Prices are certainly no more than steady. Mild coffees are dull and heavy, buyers taking only for immediate wants. Java and Mocha unchanged.

Sugar.

The sugar market shows no change from last week. Practically all refiners are still selling granulated at 7.65. Raws have sold a shade off, but not enough to affect the situation. The consumptive demand for refined sugar is not quite as large as one would expect with so much fruit about.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose is up 10 points for the week. Compound syrup is quite dull at ruling quotations. Sugar syrup and molasses very quiet and unchanged.

Fish.

Shore mackerel are beginning to come in and seem to be wanted, but in a small way only. Prices are above normal, as is the case with all mackerel. Norway mackerel are pretty well cleaned up and what there are left are being offered at very high prices. Cod, hake and haddock unchanged and seasonably dull. Salmon shows no change from a week ago; demand is rather quiet. Imported sardines in the same condition that they have been in for several months, scarce and very high. Domestic sardines unchanged and in light demand.

Canned Goods.

Some time ago the tomato market without any apparent reason made a sudden slump of about 10 cents per dozen. During the past week, equally without any apparent reason, it has recovered about 7½ cents of this, and the market at the present writing is 97½ cents in a large way f. o. b. factory. The only reason which can be given is better demand and small supply. Futures are being bought to some extent at steady to firm prices, with some holders asking 2½ cents advance. Corn is working up and the situation and the outlook are firm. No official statement as to the probable delivery of Maine corn, but information points to 50 to 60 per cent. Peas are looking badly almost everywhere. The Southern pack is about over and has been sold at about 7½ cents advance over the opening. Western growing situation and the New York situation are both poor owing to late and unfavorable weather. As to price the outlook is firm. Apples are very dull and heavy. California canned goods show no change for the week and only moderate demand. Small Eastern staple canned goods show no change and light demand. The pack of white Eastern cherries is almost nothing on account of bad weather. The pack of pitted sour cherries has been cut down very decidedly from the same cause.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes remain unchanged from last week. The large way basis price of 5½ cents f. o. b. coast is still maintained. Demand is small. Peaches continue firm, but with a small demand. Apricots quiet and unchanged. Prices on new Sultana and Thompson seedless raisins were made during the week from 1 to 1½ cents higher than last year. The raisin outlook is firm. Currants are very high on account of scarcity.

Beans and Peas.

Dried beans appear to be in an almost insane condition in Michigan, where the large way price is from $6.70 to $6.75 a bushel. Some can be bought in Eastern markets in a large way at $6.15 owing to holders being willing to take profits. Marrows have advanced to about $6.50 in a large way. California limas, which are simply taking advantage of the situation as to other beans, are quoted at 7½ to 7¾ cents a pound. Futures unchanged. Yellow split peas have advanced about 35 cents a bushel during the week. Green and Scotch peas unchanged.

Butter.

The butter market has shown a decline of about ½ cent during the week, owing to the fact that the make is about 20 per cent. above normal, and the receipts have been rather heavy. The market is only steady at this writing, and further declines are not unlikely. More butter has been stored this year than last.

Eggs.

The egg market is firmer and shows an advance of from ½ to 1 cent per dozen from last week. This is due to the light receipts and the very heavy consumptive demand. Very likely the market may advance further in a few days. The receipts are falling off as usual at this season, but the heavy consumptive demand is the main explanation of the fact that prices are from 4 to 5 cents a dozen above a year ago.

Cheese.

The cheese market is steady with a decline of ¼ to ½ cent indicated. Receipts are heavier than last year and the make appears to be large. The export demand is small. Quality of the present receipts is very fine.

Provisions.

All cuts of smoked meats, including regular, skinback and picnic hams, bellies and bacon are firm at unchanged prices, with a good consumptive demand. The prices are from 1 to 1½ cents above last year. Pure lard is unchanged and is selling fairly. Compound lard declined ½ cent during the week, but recovered it again and the outlook is steady. Dried beef shows an advance of 1 cent per pound; fair demand. Barreled pork unchanged and quiet. Canned meats up about 10 per cent.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Imported Fish Specialties.

New Scotch herrings continue to arrive rather freely and so do Newfoundland cured herrings, and they are of particularly fine quality this season. Most of these arrivals are being put into cold storage to await better demand and a better market. Just now, owing to the hot weather, we are restricted to dispose of our herrings in the local market and in its vicinity, as it is too risky to ship these new herrings any distance, particularly where they cannot be transported in iced refrigerator cars. These Newfoundland herrings are of such particularly fine quality this season that they are sure to find an excellent market when the real herring demand sets in in the fall.

Letters from our friends in Holland state that there will be no Holland herrings coming over this season, but they state no reason, and we are rather at a loss to understand what they mean. We do not know whether owing to the dangerous proximity of mines the fishermen will not go out to fish, or whether there is an embargo upon the export of herrings in Holland—our people merely say that they do not expect to ship any herrings to us this season.

There is absolutely no change in the imported sardine situation since our report last week.

Foreign Grocery Specialties.

Olive Oil.—The splendid demand for imported olive oil which we have reported regularly of late continues, and in fact, the trade is even better in olive oil, but unfortunately, prices, and particularly for Italian olive oil, which is so highly appreciated in the American markets, continue to climb, not only on account of the scarcity of real fine edible qualities, and the good demand for this product from all over the world, but also because the prices for raw materials continue to advance steadily.

Pimentos (Spanish red peppers) continue scarce in this market, particularly the small tins, of which stocks in Spain seem to be entirely exhausted. The new crop cannot be expected to arrive here before the end of the year.

Further shipments of new Italian garlic have reached us and show somewhat better quality than the first arrivals, but of course these goods cannot be shipped far away, as they are still too damp to insure perfect keeping. Mexican garlic continues to arrive in small lots, but buyers naturally prefer the Italian product, so this Mexican garlic is selling at prices which will be very much of a disappointment to the Mexican shippers.

Wheat and Flour.

On Friday the Government will issue its report on farm reserves and the condition of the growing wheat crops. Superficially, this should be very bearish, as it will undoubtedly disclose a huge quantity on the farms as well as increase the estimates of the growing crops. We have fully discussed this in our previous letters so will not dwell upon it here, except in passing, to suggest to those in the trade who are anticipating much lower prices to bear in mind that wheat on the farms and wheat in commercial channels are two altogether different propositions.

While the price of wheat is being marked down the farmer is an interested spectator. It remains to be seen what will be the attitude toward the market at this level of prices. Never forget, for a moment that he is a shrewd trader, and is a close student of market conditions. A Government bulletin recently issued shows that in the short space of fifteen years farm lands have tripled in value—in 1900 it was $15.57 per acre, in 1910, $32.49, and to-day $45.55. In the Middle States, such as Iowa, Illinois, Ohio and Michigan, the average is about $100 an acre. Figuring interest on the value of the land, as well as all labor costs, what will the grower of wheat have to show for his efforts if he sells for, say, 85 cents per bushel, which would be an average farm price on to-day's basis? If he contrasts the present outlook with that of a year ago, he will readily see hat the prospects for higher prices is ven better.

Consider for a moment that twelve onths ago we had in prospect in the nited States and Canada what has nce materialized in a harvest of 1,387, 00,000 bushels, as against an estimated rop of 940,000,000 bushels this year, et in the face of this we had a bull arket. On September 4th Chicago De- mber closed at 90⅝ cents and May 4⅝ cents, and before Christmas De- mber wheat advanced 37 cents a ushel and on January 26th May wheat old at $1.37, an advance of 43 cents a ushel in less than twenty-one weeks.

The lowest prices of last year came August, when the winter wheat farm- rs felt satisfied that spring wheat ould go through to harvest without ishap. To-day they see that the area short in Canada and our own North- est and the condition much lower, with ie labor problem still to be solved.

Unless there is some great change in ie present outlook, we doubt if grow- rs will be free sellers under $1 per ushel. If the war continues we see o reason why a farmer should not ob- in as good prices for his wheat this ear as he did last.

Spices.

The market is steadier, with fair outine demand. Peppers are slightly igher.

Pepper.—Is now higher in all the arkets of the world. There is a short- ge of all kinds of Malabar pepper and e now hear of short crops of Lam- ong. Higher prices are probable. White peppers in fair demand at un- hanged prices.

Red Peppers.—Firm and in fairly ac- ve demand.

Cloves.—In better demand at un- hanged prices. We do not believe hat we will see lower prices this eason.

Pimento (Allspice).—Slightly easier, ith moderate demand.

Mace.—Rather quiet at present and steady in price. Demand should in- crease from now on.

Nutmegs.—Are unsettled and in fair average demand. Prices have declined recently, but we believe nutmegs are a safe buy at present values.

Cassias.—Demand is fair. Prices are easier. The demand is usually active during late summer and early fall.

Gingers.—Have declined recently, but are fairly steady at present. Further declines unlikely.

Green Ginger Root.—Very little has come in so far. There has been an active demand and high prices are probable during the summer and early fall.

Tapiocas.—Firmer and in much bet- ter demand.

Paprikas.—Demand is better and prices continue steady, with upward tendency.

Seeds, Herbs, Etc.—Show very little change during the week. Mustards are in moderate demand at steady prices. Celery declined. It is hard to predict the future. Herbs are in better request and many kinds will be sharply higher before fall.

Evaporated Apples, Etc.

The evaporated apple market holds firm, but sellers have put their prices a little too high to interest buyers, es- pecially the speculative traders.

There is a good movement in spot apples, at 5½ cents per pound up, ac- cording to quality. Futures are held on the basis of 5¾ cents to 6 cents for prime, with ¼ cent per pound less bid.

The raspberry situation continues un- settled, it being very difficult to get any line on the quantity expected to be dried. Shippers are quoting 25 cents per pound, f. o. b. in barrels, and in some instances slightly lower bids have been accepted.

ean Situation, Both as to Old and New, Growing Critical on Account of Scarcity. Important Decision Upholds Ruling That Saccharine is Harmful. Market Summary.

pecial Correspondence of "Modern Merchant and Grocery World."

New York, July 7, 1916.

Some of the dealers here are pre- icting a very pronounced and in- onvenient shortage in beans. The tuation in spot dried beans is well nown. The price of pea beans has lready reached $7 per bushel, hich is double what it was only a ew weeks ago. To make matters orse, the outlook for the coming rop is poor. There have been rains or sixty days in the bean growing ections and this has prevented rowers from planting. If a radical hange in the weather does not ap- ear almost immediately, it is said hat growers will not plant beans at ll.

The trade did not realize until the nports of dried beans from France, Russia, Austria, Japan and Man- churia stopped, what an important factor dried beans had become. Great Britain has stripped Man- churia and Japan of beans; Austria cannot ship to us on account of the war, and Russia and France are consuming all of their own beans. Some of the local authorities on the subject predict that while the Cali- fornia crop of limas will probably be full, the New York and Michigan production will at the outside not be more than 50 per cent. of normal. In the meantime anybody who has beans for sale is on "easy street."

A most important decision was handed down last week by the Court of Special Sessions of the City of New York. It was in the sac- charin test case. Some time ago the Health Department prohibited the use of saccharin in food as a substi- tute for sugar. Concerns using sac- charin decided to make a test and the case was therefore brought against the Excelsior Bottling Works, which admitted using sac- charin in its soft drinks. The court now decides by a vote of two to one that the regulation is valid and that the use of saccharin is illegal. One judge filed a minority decision sup- porting the use of saccharin. The case will be immediately appealed and probably carried even to the United States Supreme Court.

SUMMARIZED MARKET CON- DITIONS.

Tea quiet, with buying for actual wants. Here and there holders will make concessions.—Coffee has been very dull, but is feeling a trifle bet- ter as the week closes owing to firmer feeling in Brazil. Prices for Brazils about unchanged. Milds quiet and heavy.—Sugar unchanged as to refined, but raws slightly easier for the week; demand only fair.—New seedless raisins opened at 1½ cents per pound above last year. Prunes and other dried fruits practically all firm with advancing tendency but dull.—Pink salmon firmer and tending higher. Red Alaska also in same position. Gov- ernment buying salmon. Domestic sardines are facing an advance of 10 cents per case, particularly on car- ton goods.—Tomatoes 5 to 7½ cents higher than a week ago on increased demand and Government buying. Peas and corn both firm. All canned fruits unchanged, al- though California pears, peaches, cherries and plums have been with- drawn by many packers on new pack goods.—Wheat bearish on re- ports of large carry over.—Flour easier and in small demand.

Twenty Per Cent. Saved.

You are all interested in knowing how to save, and the Howe Scale Co., of 508 Market street, Philadelphia, tells you that by the use of their refrigera- tors you can save at least twenty per cent. of your ice bill, it should awaken considerable interest, as the reliability of this firm is beyond question—what they say has weight.—Advt.

A New Scheme for Retailers.

Allentown, Pa., June 22, 1916.
To the Editor.

Dear Sir:—Can you give me any information in regard to the Albert Nelson Co., resident buyers for retail groceries. They are located in the Bourse Building, Room 447? Any information you can give me will be greatly appreciated by me.

Thanking you in advance, I remain, Yours truly,
HARRY F. MILLER.

The only information we have been able to obtain about the Albert Nelson scheme is that Nelson was formerly in the retail grocery business, first at Fifteenth and Venango streets, Philadelphia, and later in Darby, Pa. He retired from this in 1909, and since that time has been variously employed. For a while he was buyer for the United Economy Grocers of Buffalo, a co-operative buying association. He says that there are others interested with him in his present enterprise, but declines to give the names. It is not believed that he has any capital, but his answer to this is that he does not require any, because all that he does is to turn your order into jobbers. The essence of the plan is that he will shop around and place your order in such a way, possibly by combining it with other orders, so that you can save money. He asks you to pay him a small salary for doing this.

The plan of having a resident buyer in a large market like Philadelphia is, of course, all right, but before agreeing to pay any salary to such a person, you should ask him to furnish evidence, by placing a certain number of sample orders, that he can earn his salary.

Says Street Car Advertising Does Pay.

New York, July 5, 1916.
To the Editor.

Dear Sir:—In the issue of July 3d of the "Modern Merchant and Grocery World," we note on page 10 your comments under the caption, "Street Car Advertising for Foods," in which you say "I have never yet heard anybody say that he got traceable results from street car advertising."

It was a very great surprise to us to read such a statement as this in your paper, but we assume that it is the result of your not having made a close study of car advertising or extensive inquiry as to the results produced. Perhaps your conclusion about car advertising is due to a casual observation of large food product advertisers who are now very successful and who are using many classes of advertising media.

You will doubtless be interested to know that in the past it has been possible to absolutely trace results of street car advertising for food products. Perhaps the most remarkable instance of this kind is that of the Joseph Campbell Co., who in 1899 began to advertise their soups in a few of the New York City surface cars but in no other medium. At the end of the first year the increase in their sales in New York City amounted to over 100 per cent. and the increase of their sales throughout the country, exclusive of New York City, amounted to 25 per cent.

This is very positive evidence of the gratifying results obtained from advertising a food product in New York City surface cars. There are many other cases of this kind and similar demonstrations of the value of street car advertising for food products are being made every year. Under separate cover we are forwarding our book—"The Road to Success"—that you may read what a number of advertisers say in reference to the results of car advertising in New York City.

Trusting that you will read this book and become better acquainted with the value of car advertising and with the wonderful successes made in advertising food products, we are, Yours very truly, Meeting Chain Stores.

Selling Talks With Clerks

BY A MAN WHO HAS BEEN ONE

Conducted by W. E. SWEENEY, Manager for L. Lehman & Co.'s Department Food Store, Dover, N. J.

About Waiting Upon Relatives.—A clerk should know instinctively that waiting upon relatives, whether wife, sister, brother, father, mother or aunt, should be discouraged.

It isn't exactly irregular and you can hardly say it is out of order in every case, but it just shouldn't be done. It shouldn't be done for appearance sake. It's an extremely delicate thing for a manager to bring a matter of this kind to the attention of any of his men, and if you are thoughtlessly serving relatives, take the advice of this article.

Understand, you, personally, may be just as conscientious in filling a relative's order as you would that of a stranger or anyone outside your family. But that doesn't warrant your doing it.

The Customer's Word—Must not always be taken for gospel truth. She doesn't mean to lie. She just gets things wrong. This applies to the prices she gives you from other stores. The writer has systematically followed this thing up and nearly two-thirds of competitors' "lower prices" are wrong. There are women who enjoy this sort of diversion and there are clerks who accept it very seriously, indeed.

When you are told that so and so (we are not referring to Economy Stores) beats you 3 cents on a 10 or 15-cent article, don't comment on the thing. Don't say it can't be done, because it can. Don't say they're losing money on it; that only appeals to the heartlessness of the bargain hunter and advertises the would-be cutter as enterprising. Just simply infer that you don't understand it, but later report it quietly for investigation.

Investigation—Is another important word in business. Doubtful things should never be considered final things. A lawyer doesn't deal in doubts, he deals in facts, and he gets his facts through the application of this word.

If I am in doubt about the report of a certain stock I investigate and find that the other fellow had just supposed.

It is a discredit to a clerk when it is found that he is wrong, because he gave what he knew to be a doubtful thing for a fact. He didn't investigate.

By all means cultivate the habit of going to the very bottom of things, so that when you are called upon to tell the boss a thing is so, he knows perfectly well that it is so.

One clerk the writer has in mind is seldom asked about anything of real importance. His answers are random answers. Even his investigations, when pushed to them, are equally unreliable.

Such a man can never occupy a high position. He won't let himself. He is training the other way. Every young man who ignores this delving habit simply admits that he doesn't care to go any higher.

Some Letters About Chain Stores Answered.

This week I'm going to take up and answer some letters about the chain store that have been piling up for several days. I'd have answered 'em before but the trouble is I've been so busy consulting with the President about the war that I ain't had the time. When he come to Philly last week he insisted on seeing me. He says nobody shines his shoes like I do. So that took more time.

You'll see that I don't print the names of any of these people. When I give a private answer to these letters I charge pretty big for it, depending somewhat on how much money the writer of the letter's got. I've got as much as a thousand dollars for giving one of these opinions about how to fight chain stores. But prices vary. Other times I've only got a kick in the face.

My scheme is, if I answer them in this column I don't charge anything, but I can't name the names. D'ye see?

——, Pa., June 30, 1916.

Dear "Stroller":—

I have two chain stores in my midst and I want to know how to meet them. Please tell me at once how I can sell goods at cost and make money, like they do. If you will tell me this I will promise not to tell a living soul.

Yours, A. B.

I don't ask you not to tell a living soul, A. B. Why should I keep any wonderful discovery of mine a secret? You wrong me. What you ask is easy. You must teach yourself and your wife not to eat. Anybody can get along without eating. It's a mighty expensive habit, and speaking specially of soup, very noisy and punk. If you do without food you won't need to make a living and there you are. It's a cinch. I'll give you a plan that I tried with my wife's mother not long ago that was a perfect success. You begin by cutting out one meal a day. Eat two meals a day for a week, then cut out another, and eat one meal a day. Eat one meal a day for another week, and then cut out that one and eat none for another week. By the end of that week you'll find you don't care a ding about the chain stores.

Reading, Pa., June 28, 1916.

Dear "Stroller":—

I read your writings each week and place them next to my Bible. Please tell me when the war is going to end. I compete with a chain store, and very much wish to know how to beat it. I regard chain stores as a menace to society, and in thinking the matter over have decided that a man would be a public benefactor if he killed all the chain store owners. How shall I go about this?

Yours,
D. C.

This, too, is easy, friend D. C., but you should do it in a neat manner. Don't bloody up the sidewalk or anything like that. The best way is to watch for the chain store owner that you have decided to put out of the way. When you see him, slip up behind him and very carefully sprinkle seven pinches of salt on his little tail. The salt must be Howard salt; no others will do. Don't forget that. (No, I ain't been paid for that, either; not yet).

The salt works on the chain store owner in an awful peculiar way. It makes his tonsils swell up and bust and in that way he chokes to death. You can get rid of several each week that way, and no suspicion on you.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 29, 1916.

Dear "Stroller":—

I want to tell you that my grandma has taken a great fancy to you through your writings, and is very anxious to meet you. She wishes to know if you are married. She is on the sunny side of 80 and has been married three times. She has often said she would be glad to try it again if she could find a man she could look up to, none of the other three being of that kind. When can you meet her?

I am anxious to have your opinion about manufacturers who sell to chain stores?

Yours,
E. F.

Say to your grandma that I would be tickled to death to meet her, but I already have two wives, who are fearful jealous. They are even jealous of each other, what d'ye know about that?

Why in thunder is it that a woman has to be eighty years old before she can see anything in me? Will somebody please tell me that? That's happened to me a lot of times before. I could start a harem any time, but there wouldn't be a queen in it under ninety years old.

But that's neither here or there. About manufacturers selling chain stores, I say there ought to be a rule that no manufacturer could sell a chain store unless he needed the money.

Trusting these answers will be satisfactory, I remain yours very poorly,

THE STROLLER.

Letters on the Campbell's Soup Situation

Retailers Support This Paper's Resentment at the Concern Which Allows the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. to Cut Campbell's Soups Below Cost in Twelve Hundred Stores at the Same Time. What an Ex-employe of the Tea Company Says.

Touching the fact published in this paper two weeks ago, that the Campbell soup people permitted the Great A. & P. Tea Co. to cut, presumably in all of its stores at the same time, the price of Campbell's soup to 8 cents, which is less than the ordinary retailer's cost, we have received the letters that appear below. It will be remembered that the Joseph Campbell Co. refused to answer a letter in which they were asked the fair question whether they considered it decent to allow the ground to be thus swept from beneath the feet of the grocers in twelve hundred places at the same time.

The "Modern Merchant and Grocery World" has brought the question to the attention of every retail grocers' association in Pennsylvania.

North Adams, Mass., July 4, 1916.

To the Editor.

You ask in your issue of June 26th if the retailer has an answer to the Joseph Campbell Co. selling their goods to the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co.? That they have the right none will deny and my answer or suggestions are made with that fact in view. We have in this city one Atlantic and Pacific store that delivers, give stamps with the goods, and an Economy Store, the latter only a few doors from my place of business. Why should not every dealer (retail) feature in his window and counter display advertising and instruct his salesman to sell other brands of beans and soups which never appear in these stores. There are plenty of them, Heinz, Ritter, Van Camp, Snider, and they are good ones, just as good as Campbell's—some of them have a larger content of beans to the can. Also refuse to buy Campbell's and take the matter up with his jobber. When the thousands of retailers, instead of 1,200, begin all of them to sell less of Campbell's beans and soups and the jobber (for he gets nothing from the trade the Great Atlantic and Pacific do in anything) in time takes the matter up with the Joseph Campbell Co., I am quite sure it will not take them long to decide which is the most desirable trade for them to cater to.

I have had in my employ a man who worked for sometime for the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. and he says their salesmen are instructed never to sell such well-known goods as Baker's chocolate and cocoa, Coleman mustard, etc., which they feature to draw people into their store, if he can get the buyer to take their own private brands. This shows conclusively why they do it, but the hurt to the regular dealer is none the less keenly felt. We push something the Atlantic and Pacific stores do not sell, and if we have the quality to back up our individuality, we can many times hold the business. There are many other suggestions which might be made, but what counts most is the jobber don't like to lose business; neither does the Joseph Campbell Co.

A little pull and a pull all together.

Yours truly,
M. VAN NESS BRAMAN.

20 Per Cent. Ice Saving Guaranteed If You'll Do What We Say

Buy a Howe Refrigerator with a double air-lock door. We will prove to you before you buy that this will save 20 per cent. on your ice bill as compared with ordinary refrigerators.

There are plenty of good refrigerators, but they use too much ice. Any grocer who uses more ice than the Howe Refrigerator uses is paying too much for his refrigeration, because he can't possibly get better refrigeration than the Howe gives him, and from most refrigerators not as good.

If you want some useful information about refrigerators, write us now.

in reference to the Campbell people giving the grocers a square deal.

Arguments and letters will be of no avail with them. The only way to bring them to terms is for each individual grocer to purchase brands of equal or better quality, preferably of brands not sold by the chain store system.

Push this brand and gradually eliminate the Campbell's goods from off the shelves.

You will find that the Campbell firm will quickly find a way to give the grocers, and through them also, the consumer a square deal.

Yours truly,
DAVID S. VENEZKY.

To the Editor.

Relating to your article in the "Modern Merchant and Grocery World," issue of Monday, June 26th, page 6, as to "Manufacturers of Nationally Advertised Goods Selling Their Product to Cut Throat Stores," in this way killing the little grocer who cannot afford to sell any goods at a loss.

Twelve or more years since we cut out another product for just some such reason, as being discriminated against, as we considered unfair to us, and we are still in business.

The retailer controls the situation if he can be persuaded and will help to take care of his own interests. It is very much of a job to get him to understand that he must have a fair profit or starve, as many of us are compelled to do.

Yours truly,
RANKIN & Co.

Some of these correspondents have misconceived our attitude in this matter. We have no objection to the Campbell soup people selling the Great A. & P. Tea Co. They would be exceedingly foolish if they didn't sell them. We object, and so should the retailer, to the Campbell people standing by and allowing the Tea Company to cut the price of Campbell's soups to 8 cents in twelve hundred stores and twelve hundred towns at the same time. Particularly when they have a complete and perfect remedy any time they want to use it.

The Week's Dry Goods Business.

Marshall Field & Co., in their weekly review of the dry goods trade, say:—

Current wholesale distribution of dry goods has been in greater volume than for the corresponding period of past years.

Road sales for both immediate and fall delivery are running about even with the week a year ago.

More customers have visited the market than during the same period of several years past.

Collections are good.

Gentlemen:

Youre of the 31st ult. at hand. Up to date we have placed some three hundred of your Da-Lite candlers. They seem to be working very well; have not received a single complaint on them.

Yours very truly,
ARMOUR & COMPANY.

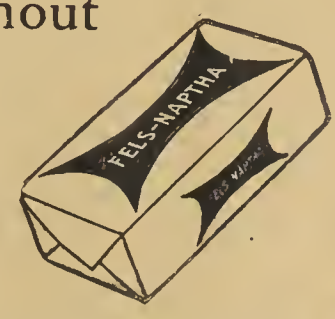
When ARMOUR Buys

anything you may be sure they see money in it, whether they mean to use the thing or sell it again.

The Grant Egg Candler

will make money for you as it is doing for Armour. You may need only one where Armour needs hundreds. And that's the Grant advantage. It serves the smaller dealer as effectively in proportion. Follow Armour and other large shippers. You will get your money back on the first few cases. We make seven styles at different prices for different lines of trade.



Write for catalogues. Tell us how many cases you handle and we will give you some valuable information, also "The Tale of an Egg."

No. 371.—Slander Actions for Maligning Competitive Products.

I sat in court the other day and heard a case tried which inspired a lesson that I resolved to teach, if I could, through one of these articles. It is the lesson that a business man should at all times be careful and guarded in his statements regarding the products of another. A hundred thousand times a day statements are made by merchants and manufacturers about competitive products which are grossly slanderous, and if written, are libellous. Every man who makes such a statement is liable to heavy damages if the manufacturer whose product he has attacked hears of it and wishes to sue. Some of the heaviest verdicts on record have been given in cases like this.

Not only is the merchant and manufacturer himself responsible if he makes such statements about competitive goods, but he is usually liable if his employees do it.

The case which I heard tried was brought by the manufacturer of an automobile grease which is used mostly in the transmissions of cars, against an oil man, who though he sold no grease himself, was supposed to be interested in another concern that did. At least, that was the theory of the plaintiff. The defendant had circulated the report that the plaintiff's grease contained clay, and would injure gears. The result was that the demand fell off and the plaintiff's business fell to a small fraction of what it formerly was.

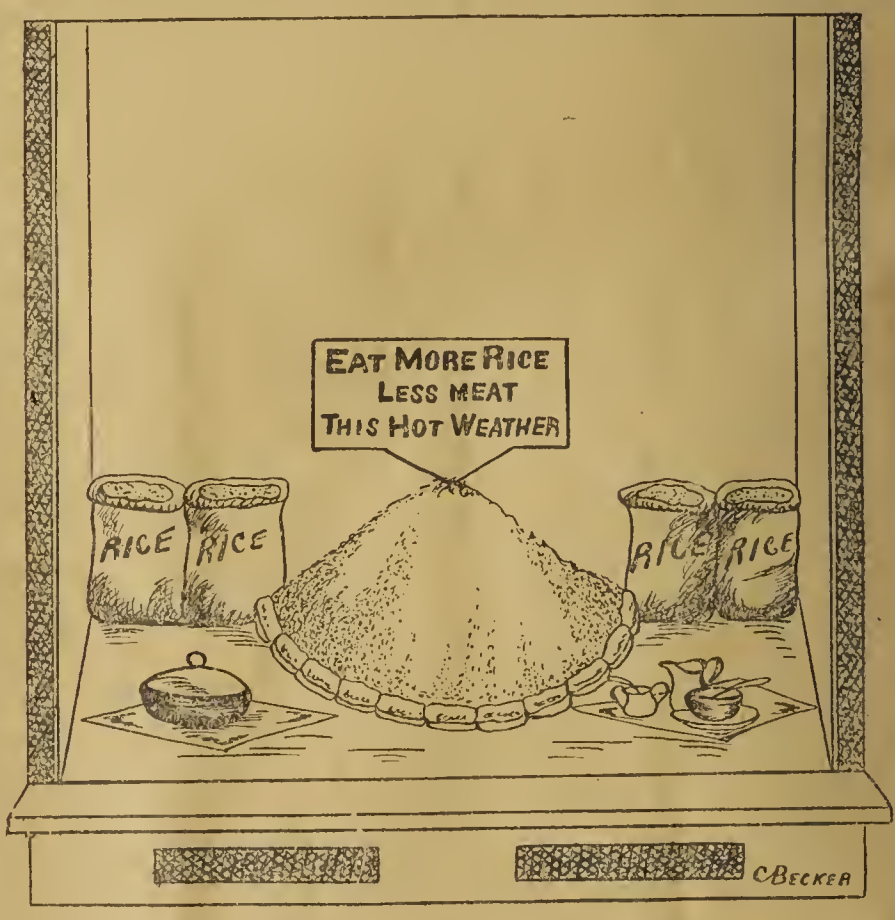
The defendant denied saying that the grease contained clay, but admitted saying that it "contained a clay-like substance," which, he contended, was true. The jury did not believe him and gave a verdict of $5,000 against him. It may be that it is quite inconvenient for him to pay such a sum.

The worst of these cases is that the sympathy of the entire court is almost invariably with the plaintiff.

The other day a tire dealer with whom I have some relations said to me: "The stuff the ——— people are putting in their tires this year is awful. The tire isn't any good at all any more. The other day I sent one back on adjustment that really wasn't any thicker than an interliner."

If this was true it was not slanderous. It was probably not true, however, because he named a very well known tire, and I cannot believe that any manufacturer who had spent money to make his tire well known, would deliberately commit suicide.

Even if the statement was not true, the courts might not hold the dealer responsible in a slander action, if he said it sincerely, believing it to be true. But if it was not true, and was said for the sole purpose of affecting the sale of tires, then it is grossly slanderous and if the particular manufacturer finds it out and goes after the dealer, he will find a real walk-over waiting for him. He can get damages just as surely as the sun sets in the West.



A few days before this, another tire dealer—this talk seems to be running into the automobile field, although of course the law is the same regardless of the product—told me precisely the same thing regarding another tire, equally well known and even better respected than the first one. He added that it would not give anything like the mileage which it formerly gave.

What I have said about the first statement applies equally to the second.

A month or two ago a third tire dealer, in order to persuade me not to buy a certain cord tire, told me of difficulties which he said existed as to repairing this tire if it punctured or blew out. I subsequently learned that his statements were untrue, and I have no doubt that he had it in for that make of tire and used this method of killing sales. It was very effective with me, at least so far as that particular purchase was concerned, and doubtless would be with others. If that dealer knew he was telling an untruth, and his only motive was to kill sales, he would have no defenses whatever to an action by the manufacturer for slander.

Up to date there have been comparatively few suits of this kind brought, considering the general looseness of the talk about competitive products and the number of suits which would lie, if anybody wished to bring them. But one of these days some manufacturer is going to decide that an example should be made of somebody, and when that time comes he will have no trouble in getting the evidence. I believe such action would be thoroughly justified. When a manufacturer has spent money and heart's blood in building a reputation for his product, it is outrageous that it

Rice Display.

This is a good display for the warm weather and is quite simple, yet attractive. To arrange: Cover the bottom of the window with dark blue or black crepe paper. To the front at each side, place a white napkin. On one place a pudding dish and on the other a bowl of rice, cream pitcher and a sugar bowl. In the center place a box; from the top of this to the bottom of the window make a slant of boards and on them place clean burlap bags. Place two rows of rice in cotton sacks around the bottom, then completely cover the slant with choice whole rice, the bags at the bottom will prevent the rice from running into the window. Place a neat sign card, as illustrated, on top of the rice pyramid. At each side, at the extreme rear, place two bags of rice. If you haven't enough rice in stock, fill the bags with something else and make a top of rice in each bag—place some paper first and then about an inch of rice.

Question: S. B. Klopp, Shillington, Pa.—I beg to trouble your Legal Department for an opinion in a trouble I got myself into by not taking the Legal Department's advice in insisting upon a written contract instead of verbal one, of which I plead guilty.

I own a dwelling and coach shop which I have rented to a party for over ten years upon a verbal contract (no witness) at $20 and $10 respectively. The coach manufacturer is going wrong morally and financially, so much so that he owes me over $200 rent, has no credit, must pay cash for all his material. What I would like to know is, how can I make him vacate both buildings in the quickest way as I would like to occupy them myself?

I told him personally that he must vacate September 1, 1916. In case he will not vacate till that time, how long must I give him?

In case he pays all back rents, will that make any difference in the making him to vacate? In other words, what legal proceedings are necessary to oust him?

Answer.—If your arrangement with your tenant is so much rent per month, the law will hold your lease to be a verbal monthly lease, and you can oust him any time by giving him one month's notice to quit. The month must date from the time he took possession. If he took possession on the 10th of the month, for instance, his notice must be to vacate on the 10th of some month, and it must reach him not later than thirty days before that.

If your arrangement was for so much rent per year, the law will consider it a yearly lease and you must then give him three months' notice, dating this as I have directed for a monthly notice.

If he refuses to vacate when the time is up, you can get the sheriff of your county to oust him.

His payment of all back rents would not alter the situation, as you are not ousting him for non-payment of rent but because you have terminated his lease.

NOTE.—Requests for information in this department should tersely set out in full all the facts bearing on the case, and all questions should be carefully framed to avoid misconstruction. Write on one side of the sheet only. Letters should be received at this office not later than Tuesday of each week, to ensure an answer in the Monday's issue following. The signature and address of the writer must accompany all inquiries, and will be published unless there is a request not to do so. All inquiries received will be answered without charge. Address all communications to Legal Editor "Modern Merchant and Grocery World."

Pennsylvania Organization Notes.

Mr. Smedley will visit Bradford this week to complete arrangements with the local committee for the State convention.

The programme for the State convention is now being mapped out. It is intended to make the topics to be discussed of practical value to each delegate.

Mr. Smedley will address the Lancaster Retail Grocers' Association on July 11th at the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce.

The Merchants' Bureau of the Washington, Pa., Chamber of Commerce, has recently printed a report showing "Things Done" for the merchant during the past year. If a Washington merchant failed to receive benefit from the Bureau it was the fault of himself. The Bureau delivered the goods.

The advertising convention was a striking example of what can be accomplished through organization. If the retail business men would show their power by getting together, keeping together and working together, trade evils would soon disappear and the business death rate very much decreased.

The Frankford Association has elected the following delegates to the Bradford convention: Oliver Stout, Jr., J. A. Edgar, Wm. H. Bratton, E. J. Gallen, A. Wisson and Edward Coyle.

The Tale of an Egg.

If you handle eggs you must candle them, and to candle them in a satisfactory, profitable manner, you should be using one of the seven styles made by Grant Mfg. Co., of 234 Broadway, Kokomo, Ind.

When such firms as Armour & Co. find it profitable to use a Grant Egg Candler, it seems as if it would pay you to do likewise. A catalogue for the asking.

BURK'S

Meat Loaf

SEASONABLE THROUGHOUT THE YEAR

Composed entirely of fine selected meats—contains no flour or cereals. Baked fresh daily in loaves of about six pounds.

Makes a quick and delicious breakfast sliced and fried in a little butter.

Can also be served cold for luncheon, cut in thin slices or warmed in the oven in one piece to take the place of a roast.

BURK'S

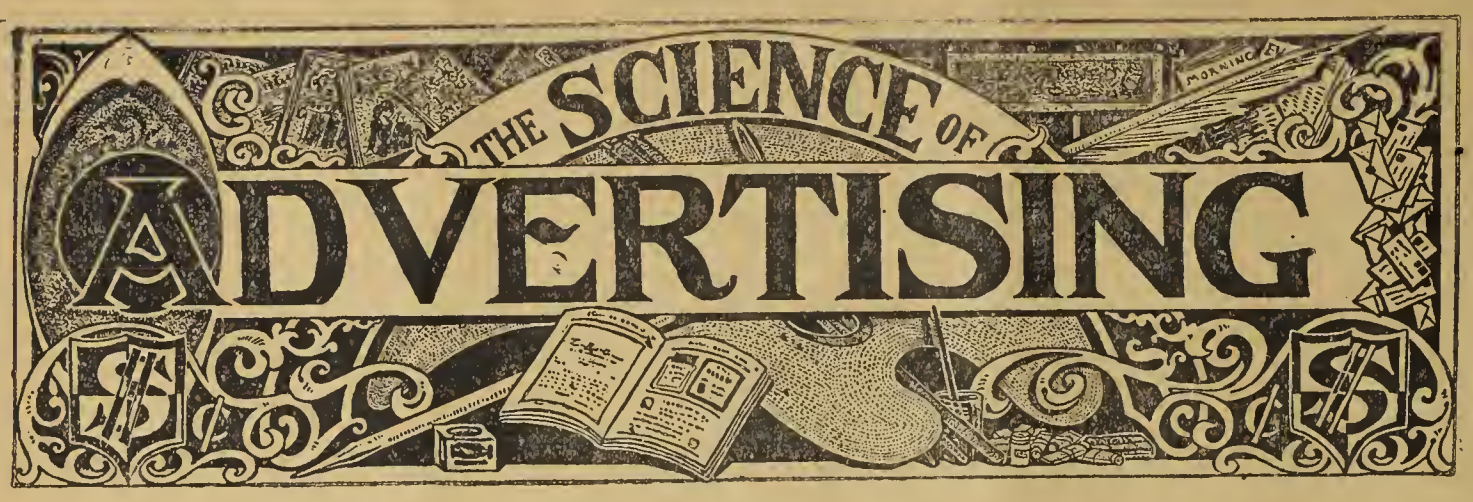
Lunch Roll

(Copyrighted)

SUBSTITUTE FOR BOILED HAM

Composed of lean, tender pieces of pork, mildly cured, stuffed in linen container and boiled.

Far superior and more delicious than boneless boiled ham, being juicy, mild and sweet; also less expensive and not near so wasteful—in fact no waste at all. Much finer in texture and just as easily sliced, or more so, as this can be done in a slicing machine.



The cover is readily removed by cutting the seam and then stripping off the sack as the roll is consumed. This prevents it becoming dry and is a sanitary feature that appeals to the consumer, as it keeps the product clean while displayed on the counter and untouched by hand while slicing, a vast improvement as compared with handling the greasy, unprotected boneless boiled ham.

MEAT LOAF and LUNCH ROLL were originated by us, now imitated by others, but none equal to Burk's, which are prepared from only the choicest materials.

LOUIS BURK

Girard Avenue and Third Street

PHILADELPHIA

I have from I. P. Spalding, retail grocer of Towanda, Pa., a couple of his newspaper advertisements, each measuring four inches double column. I am reproducing them below about natural size:—

This is very fair advertising, but I think more pep could be put into it. For instance, the cheese advertisement. I would have changed that around a bit. The biggest novelty in it is ripe olives. I would have used a heading something like this: "Try Some Ripe Olives on That Picnic." Or "Ever Eaten Ripe Olives?" to be followed by a few lines telling the difference between the ripe olives and the pickled. There is really nothing about the cheese to justify giving it the chief place in the advertisement. What is called the "news sense" is very important in advertising. It is the ability to pick out the most interesting thing and feature it. Applying that to this advertisement, I think the ripe olives should have gone first.

Take the other advertisement and apply the same principle to it. I should have given the heading to Wesson oil, because more can be done with it in an advertising way. That is, unless Premier Salad Dressing is a new thing with you. Then you might advertise it "A Brand New Salad Dressing—the Best I Ever Saw." I would hesitate to advertise a thing like peanut butter unless there was something appealing I could say about it. I can't see "Premier quality, fine for sandwiches," getting any results. Why should it? Any good peanut butter is fine for sandwiches. It is a good rule in advertising never to put forward anything that you can't say something special about. What could you say about peanut butter? Well, it might be made from a special grade of peanuts, or by a special process, which makes it more oily than the average; or it might be different in some other way from the ordinary article. Or it might be cheaper. You can hang an advertisement on any of these points. But an ordinary peanut butter, priced about as usual, is hardly worth advertising, except perhaps in one way: you could go in and make a general campaign to increase the use of peanut butter. In other words, to get people to use it who don't use it now. That would be done, of course, by describing its uses and generally exploiting it. Outside of that, there isn't any way, in my judgment, in which an ordinary article, priced as I say, about like similar articles, can be advertised with profit.

It occurs to me to suggest that Mr. Spalding try to be a little more enthusiastic in his advertising. His cheese advertisement is not warm enough; it is too conservative. A few good warm adjectives like "delicious" and "snappy" and "appetizing" and "splendid" are always helpful.

The Composition of Kellogg's Imitation Coffee.

In applying for a patent on his "coffee" preparation in Australia, J. L. Kellogg, of Michigan, thus described its composition:—

> Class 38.8, Coffee Substitute.—To produce a coffee substitute in the form of a soluble powder without the use of molasses or syrup, malt is added to a starch-bearing material, which is then heated to caramelise the maltose into which the starch is converted. Starch-bearing material, such as corn, wheat flour, etc., is mixed with barley malt and heated to 140-180 deg. F. for about two hours and is then cooked under 40-pound steam pressure for five hours to partially caramelise the malt sugar. The material is then mixed with bran, malt sprouts and roasted pulverized rye, and is dried, roasted and treated in a cooker to extract the soluble matter. The mass is then filtered and the extract drawn off, evaporated in a vacuum pan and reduced to powder.

The Week's One-Time Ads.

There's a little eighth-page ad. in this issue that I want you bloodhound buyers not to miss. It's by Schwenk & Caldwell, the Philadelphia jobbers, and it offers a couple of nifty bargains. New peas for 77½ cents a dozen and new Cape Shore mackerel for $17.50 a barrel. How's that? You can't beat those prices, no matter where you go, and you can't even meet them at any jobber I know about. My advice is not to let these things get away from you. They tell me both peas and mackerel are going up. (In Heaven's name, everything seems to be except yours truly's salary.) Don't wait on this now until you have to pay a good bit more money.

Jobbers Combine to Cure Returned Goods Evil

All Six Jobbers of Los Angeles, Cal., Unite to Standardize Practice of Sending Back Goods for Credit.

A unique move has been made by ll the wholesale grocers in Los ngeles, Cal., they having practially joined together to correct what hey consider the evils of the trade. here are six jobbers in Los Angees and all of them have joined in he plan, which particularly covers he return of goods for credit. Toether the six jobbers have issued he following notice to the retail rade:—

To the Grocery Trade:—

Manufacturers are becoming stricter every year in the matter of accepting returned goods. It is, therefore necessary for the wholesale grocer to exercise care in the same respect.

In order that all our friends in the trade may understand the situation and be able to protect themselves, we deem it both just to them and ourselves to record the following:—

1. Return on Order Only.—Drivers are not allowed to pick up goods to be returned except on order from the office.

Customers outside the delivery zone must first send in a list of goods which they wish to return and await disposition.

2. Returns by Express.—All returns from outside the free delivery zone should be by freight.

Should a customer return by express, the difference between freight and express will be charged to him.

3. Verbal Guarantees.—We will recognize no guarantees of sales unless they appear on the face of the order.

4. Holding Returned Goods.—Returned spoiled goods, upon which no credit is allowed, will be held thirty days and if not called for in that time, will be destroyed. Goods held awaiting disposition by broker or manufacturer, will be destroyed after thirty days.

5. Labels.—Labels will not be accepted instead of the goods themselves, except upon authority from the office.

6. Shortages.—Shortages must be reported to the office for adjustment. Salesmen are not allowed to make a deduction for same in a settlement.

7. Quantity Purchases.—Customers returning a portion of a quantity price purchase, will be credited so that the portion returned will be owned at the price proper for that amount.

8. Spoiled Goods Not Returnable.—The following spoiled goods are not guaranteed and no credit will be allowed on their return:—

All Shop Worn Goods—This applies to the condition of the outside of the package and does not refer to the contents; unlabeled or empty cans, Hecker's Farina, Phospho products, Nut Butter (McClintock, Golden West), Malt Bkft. Food, Shasta Oats, Broken Packages of rice and beans, wet horseradish, gelatine, jelly powders, chloride of lime, Hercules Oats, dry milk.

Welch's Grape Juice.—No credit for opened bottles.

Currants.—Will reclean at customer's expense.

Cheese.—Will sell to cheese men and give credit for amount obtained.

Prunes.—Will reprocess and return at customer's expense.

9. Spoiled Goods Returnable Under Certain Conditions.—The following are returnable for credit:—

Spoiled Salt Fish.—If returned within ten days after date of delivery.

Spoiled Dried Fruit.—If returned within ten days after delivery.

Spoiled Cheese Uncut.—If returned within ten days after date of delivery.

Spoiled Canned Fruit, Vegetables and Fish.—If returned before July 1st following date of delivery. Customers are requested to return spoiled goods as soon as discovered.

Spoiled Libby's Chipped Beef and Sliced Bacon.—If returned within ninety days after date of delivery.

Spoiled Beech-Nut goods will be credited with 50 per cent. of the value.

Spoiled Ham, Bacon and Suetene will be subject to the disposition of the packer.

10. Spoiled Goods—Inspection by Broker Necessary.—The following goods are not returnable to jobber, but must be inspected at the merchant's store by broker or manufacturer's agent, who will give disposition:—

Schepp's Cocoanut, Dunham Cocoanut, Force, H. O. Oats, National Oats, Albers Bro. goods, Ghirardelli Choc. and Cocoas, Quaker Puffed Rice and Wheat, Carnation Wheat, Post Goods, Golden Egg Products, Pfaffman Paste Goods, National Starches, Quaker Oats.

In submitting the above, we are using the utmost liberality and it is in no way our desire to have any merchant suffer any loss through no fault of his own, but the above regulations are necessary that both retailer and jobber may be protected against big losses.

IT has been proved that of those who want credit, 30 per cent. pay in full each month; 33 per cent. pay in from one to three months; 40 per cent. never pay in full, and 7 per cent. never pay at all.

¶ You know what effect this method of doing business would have or possibly does have in your own case; just what it represents in the way of capital invested and what you are losing in good profits.

¶ During the past 20 years the "Sperry" Service has been skillfully applied by thousands of wide-awake, progressive storekeepers toward bettering just this condition. It has proved beyond question remarkably effective to convert a demand for credit into cash business.

¶ It will pay you to find the percentage of cash transactions in your business and if you find it smaller than you expected, therefore a handicap to good business, we will gladly show you a practical remedy and how to use it. Your inquiry incurs no obligation.

The Subscribers' Bargain List

Have you got any goods you don't want? Anything—canned goods, groceries, hardware, dry goods, anything at all that's in good condition, but won't sell for you.

If you will make a price on it we can possibly sell it for you in a hurry. Write us about it, stating the quantity, condition and your best price. You might give the original cost, too. We will give it a key number and offer it to our 4,000 subscribers. Your name will not appear unless you want it to. All sales ought to be on a cash basis.

The point is that what won't sell for you may be in everday demand for somebody else, who will be glad to get your stock of it at a bargain.

There will be no charge for this service anywhere—we do it to help along.

THE VALUE OF BRIGHT STORES

¶ The difficulty of making a sale—whether it be dry goods or vegetables, jewelry or shoes is increased tenfold in a poorly lighted store. Other things being equal, the Electrically lighted shop will do more business than the store which uses other illuminants. "Indoor Daylight" can only be obtained by the use of Mazda Electric lamps.

Yours very truly,

BUFFALO, N. Y., January 3, 1916. LAUTZ BROS. & CO.

In a Sanitary Package

The sanitary, dust-proof package has revolutionized food manufacture. The up-to-date grocer welcomes packaged foods because they are easy to handle, the turn-over is quick and the profit is certain.

Shredded Wheat

goes to the consumer in a sanitary package, and it goes to the grocer in a wooden case. It is the only breakfast cereal packed in odorless spruce wood cases, insuring cleanliness and purity. The case may be easily sold for 10 cents or 15 cents, thus adding to the grocer's profits.

Made only by

The Shredded Wheat Company
Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Say to Your Customers USE HIRES

GOLD  MILK

And Save Money on your Milk Bills

Mr. Grocer:—Why not be a milkman, too? You can be the biggest milkman in your neighborhood if you tell your customers to add two cans of cold water to one tall can of HIRES GOLD MILK, and then use on the table for drinking and in the kitchen for cooking.

EVERY CAN GUARANTEED BY

Hires Condensed Milk Company

Doing $60,000 Yearly in a Village of Three Hundred

One of the Features of the Recent Advertising Convention in Philadelphia Was the Address of a Retailer Who Accomplishes This. National Advertising That Doesn't Advertise.

At the recent Philadelphia convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs, one of the hits was an address by a retail merchant named E. B. Moon, of Lakeville, Ind. He is a general storekeeper and does $60,000 in his little village of 300 people. He has sixteen departments, and his store and his methods are systematized to the last degree. His address was a most interesting description of how he built up his large business in such a small town; his views on advertised goods, window displays and many other factors in storekeeping. From a copy of it, we take the following:

The retail merchant must be a good buyer, must have a fit place in which to display and sell his goods. The store must be clean, inviting, light and cheerful; his clerks must be trained. They must know the goods and know the arts of salesmanship. They must sell the goods in the spirit of service, kindness, hospitality and mutual interest.

Advertising is the modern way of selling goods. Nationally advertised goods are a life-saver to the retailer. The farming community has been educated to it. The farmers are beginning to expect it, and yet the retail merchant who has been in business for any length of time knows practically little or nothing about writing copy; first, because he knows little or nothing about the science of salesmanship. He has the conception that advertising is selling goods at a cut price; his local competitor has the same idea. For some reason he has been educated to that belief, and has not learned that salesmanship is selling goods at a profit, and that advertising is salesmanship on paper. Is it any wonder that 22,000 such merchants failed last year?

The local retailer's personality is a factor, and yet the mail order houses, with all these handicaps, have gone right out into the country districts and sold goods right under the nose of the country merchant. Why? Through the power of advertising; salesmanship on paper, with well-prepared catalogues that display the goods attractively; with descriptions that are compelling and that answer the questions "why"—"what"—"when" and "wherefore": that have gotten the business.

Last year, in the year 1915, the wholesale business of the city of Chicago, it is said, fell off 10 per cent. The mail order business in this city increased 10 per cent. This change in distribution has affected not only the retailer, but the wholesaler. It is something in which he and the manufacturer who sells to the dealer and through the dealer are vitally interested, and it is a subject in which they shall be more vitally interested, else there will be greater slumps in the business of both of them.

So, after all this, one great big problem of selling goods to the farmer of the country communities is an advertising proposition— an advertising problem. Now, there has been much criticism that the country merchants don't do more advertising; that this is why the business is going to the mail order houses.

The truth of the matter is that all nationally advertised goods are not always advertised. Publicity advertising is not effective with farmers. It doesn't tell them anything. There is too much publicity copy and not enough of the kind that has helped the mail order business to cut into the country merchants' field. We have got to have informative copy, if we expect to cope successfully with the mail order houses. Give us selling copy —that's what we want.

A salesman for a flour company who heard that I favored advertised goods came into my store one day and asked why it was I didn't handle his line.

"I've never had any call for it," was my reply.

"Well, it's heavily advertised," he replied. "The advertising certainly ought to have made a call."

I turned to my father and asked him if he had ever had a call for the flour. "Never since I've been here, since '67," my father answered.

Nevertheless, I gave the salesman a large order, for a ton or so of this flour. I showed it to my clerks, told them about the advertising, and that I wanted them to sell this flour. Several days later I found that we hadn't sold a sack of the flour. I asked the clerks about it and they said they couldn't sell it. "Next time you have a flour customer," I said, "I think I can sell some."

Pretty soon I had my chance. A young woman came in, wife of a well-to-do neighboring farmer. I knew her as one of the best cooks around; graduate of a school of domestic science, etc. I showed her a sack of the flour and she said, "I think I have heard of that flour. What do you know about it?"

"Best on the market," I said.

"Will it make pie crust?" she said. "I'm not sure!" said I. "Good cakes?" she asked. "Guess so," I said. I called up my wife and asked her. She said she wouldn't advise my customer that it would make good pie crust or cake, but said it made the best bread and biscuits in the world. So I told the customer this. "Well," she said; "we've got a lot of extra hands just now. I've got to have a combination flour. Give me 500 pounds of the old kind."

The next customer I interviewed had never heard of the flour. I looked up one of the ads.; saw a picture of a pretty girl, a sack of flour and—"Eventually—Why not now?"

That ad. didn't tell my customer what she wanted to know about the flour. I didn't know. That's one time when a nationally advertised article was not advertised.

Then there was a white lead paint advertised with no special information attached in a farm paper. I asked a clerk to keep tabs on the inquiries. In thirty days there was no call for this paint. I then asked a competitor if he had had any calls for the goods. The competitor had—the previous year. "Did you make a sale?" I asked. The competitor didn't have it.

A competitor called one day and noticed a window display of paint. "That's a heap of paint you've got there," remarked the competitor. "You'll never sell it in a hundred years." Some weeks later he dropped in again. "Where's all that paint?" he asked. "Sold," was the reply. This is how I sell 80 per cent. of the paint in that community to his 20 per cent. I sell it to the farmer's wife; not the farmer. Early in the spring I go around with my color charts and ask the farmer's wife what color she likes for her house. Later in the spring she says to her husband, "John, we've got to have the house painted." She has her color all picked out, and I'm the only one who has that color in stock.

How Would You Like to Run a Grocery Store in Springfield, Missouri?

Read the Rules for Grocers That the Springfield Women's Clubs Have Adopted. A White Card for the Grocer Observing Them, But Not Necessarily the Clubwomen's Patronage.

From now on, if the women's clubs of Springfield, Mo., have their way, the grocery business of that city will be conducted along wholly different lines from other cities. The Springfield clubs have adopted the following rules for grocers, and propose to go about inspecting the stores. If all the rules have been observed, they will give the grocer observing them a white card:—

Every person in charge of a place where food is manufactured, kept, prepared or sold, shall be in clean, sanitary condition.

Shops must be well lighted, ventilated and free from offensive odors.

Shelves, trays, baskets or other receptacles for food must be kept clean and free from decayed matter.

All provisions must be raised eighteen inches from floor unless in glass cases.

Dogs and cats are prohibited in food stores.

There must be lavatory conveniences for use of employees.

Toilets must have outside ventilation.

Personal cleanliness must be exacted of employees, and no soiled clothing may be worn or kept in the shop.

No person afflicted with tuberculosis or other communicable disease shall be employed where he or she will come in contact with foodstuffs.

Smoking and expectorating must be prohibited and signs to that effect displayed.

All garbage must be kept in covered metal cans and removed as frequently as possible.

Shops must be closely screened and have automatic closing doors. Every reasonable effort must be employed to rid the shops of vermin, flies, roaches, gnats and other insects.

Refrigerators must be kept clean and free from odors.

Cellars must be ventilated and kept clean.

Shops must be kept in a neat and orderly condition.

Back premises must be kept clean.

All meats, fish, fruit, vegetables or other food products must not be exposed in open doors or windows and must be kept free from decaying matter.

Cut meats, fish, fowl, shellfish or prepared foods shall be kept in ventilated receptacles, which shall exclude flies and dust.

No diseased, decayed or otherwise unwholesome meat shall be offered for sale or gift.

Meat blocks, knives, saws and all meat containers shall be kept clean, and meat hooks scalded twice every week.

Floors must be kept clean; if sawdust is to be used, same must be removed daily in the downtown districts and three times a week in the suburban districts.

All meat dealers must provide at all times a supply of government inspected meat.

All prepared foods, cheese, peanut butter, hominy, cooked meats, honey, pickles, olives, sauer kraut, mince meat, bread, cakes, pies, lard, sugar, butter, figs, dates, spices, candies and mackerel or other prepared fish or unwashable foods, must be so covered to exclude dust and flies.

Proper utensils must be used in serving the above foods, using hands as little as possible.

Flour must be raised from the floor and protected from dust by covering.

Trays, cloths and other utensils used in bakeries must be kept clean and washed daily after using.

Shops must not be used for sleeping apartments.

Wagons for delivering bread must be kept clean and breadstuffs protected from dust and flies, and all bakery products must be conveyed to and from wagons in a container which excludes dust, dirt and flies. Gloves of clean canvas or similar material must be kept in wagons and used in handling bread or other bakery products.

In the knowledge of this pape no such stringent collection of rule for grocery stores has ever bee promulgated before even by Board of Health. So far as we have see the Springfield women have mad no promise to deal only with th stores obeying these rules the bes Doesn't This Date Tell You Something?

¶ This is the date Knight's Cooking Extracts first decorated grocers' shelves. Time, skill and experience combined have added to the perfection of these goods each year. If an old lady or a child is sent for a cooking extract without being told to get a certain brand, they'll ask for Knight's by instinct. This name naturally identifies itself with flavoring extracts in their minds. It's a household word and stands for the highest standard of excellence.

THE VALUE OF BRIGHT STORES

¶ The difficulty of making a sale—whether it be dry goods or vegetables, jewelry or shoes is increased tenfold in a poorly lighted store. Other things being equal, the Electrically lighted shop will do more business than the store which uses other illuminants. "Indoor Daylight" can only be obtained by the use of Mazda Electric lamps.

WITH THE EDITOR

National Advertising That Does Not Advertise.

There's a heap of truth in what E. B. Moon, a general storekeeper of Lakeville, Ind., says about National advertising. Mr. Moon does $60,000 a year in a village of 300, and he is some merchant. What he says is worth listening to. His criticism of National advertising is that a lot of it doesn't tell anybody anything. It hopes to make the name of a product so familiar that some time when the customer is after that particular article, and has no choice of a brand, he or she will choose this brand. Well, probably it works out that way sometimes, but isn't it better not to leave it to a simple chance? Isn't it better to send the customer to the store with a fixed intent to buy the advertised brand?

Mr. Moon once bought a big order of Gold Medal flour, merely because the salesman told him it was Nationally advertised. Some time later he had a customer for a big lot of flour right in the hollow of his hand, but he found he didn't know enough about Gold Medal flour to sell it. The salesman hadn't thought it necessary to tell him; "it is Nationally advertised," was his selling story. Mr. Moon looked up the Gold Medal flour advertising, but that left his ignorance undisturbed. "Eventually—why not now," does not contain an overplus of information either for the man who is selling flour or for the man who is buying it. So his customer decided that she would stick to the old brand.

An astonishing percentage of National advertising depends on hypnotism rather than on conviction.

Buying on Looks.

A brief item in another column says that Director Street, of the Connecticut Experiment Station, has discovered what a good many people in the trade have known for years, viz., that the appearance of canned fruits is not always an index to their real quality. This is something that every grocer ought not only to know, but to practice among his customers.

California yellow lemon cling peaches are a case in point. Naturally I have not tried every brand, but I have tried a great many—all the principal brands, perhaps—and I have never seen anything in them at all. Beautiful to look at, like a picture, but as insipid and flavorless as the picture itself would be.

Put an Eastern white peach beside these big yellow beauties. In appearance, it is not comparable with it, but in flavor, it is far ahead of the California product.

How many consumers choose the California peaches—at a much higher price—absolutely on appearance only? How many grocers have told their customers that they can get a much better peach at little more than half the price? Isn't that good business? It seems to me like splendid business. It saves the customer money, pleases him better and makes a friend of him. Such things count a lot in these days of strenuous competition when there aren't enough customers to go round.

Whose Business Would Not Improve by These Changes?

A successful general merchant who some time ago remodeled his business with a particular view to meeting mail-order competition, says he found it necessary to do five things, which he believes most other general storekeepers could do with equal advantage:—

1—Cut down the amount of his stock and increase the variety.

2—Transform his methods of advertising—put life and pep in them.

3—Issue a store paper and continuously discuss the mail-order business in it, for the purpose of showing consumers that they waste money through it instead of saving it.

4—Advertise continuously through his window.

5—Refrain from saying that "buying from me is a benefit to the town." People buy to benefit themselves, not to benefit the town.

Of course, merely following these suggestions will not alone insure success in competing with mail-order houses, but they took this particular store, which five years ago was about ready to go into bankruptcy, and put it on a paying basis. That is, these ideas plus energy and ambition, did. The last one is especially important. I have seen many merchants, struggling to keep their townspeople's money from going out of town, use the argument of local pride and loyalty. Local pride and loyalty are practically non-existent when it comes to buying merchandise. Personally I have never met a man or woman, though doubtless they exist here and there, who would sacrifice a preference and buy at home, merely because it was at home. They will buy at home as long as it suits them to and no longer.

Selling Talks With Clerks

BY A MAN WHO HAS BEEN ONE

Conducted by W. E. Sweeney, Manager for L. Lehman & Co.'s Department Food Store, Dover, N. J.

Petty Pilfering—Commences by giving overweight in some cases, putting an orange in your pocket in other cases, and a nickle's worth of something else in still other cases. We have seen this started so often and witnessed the bitter end so many times that we must again warn thoughtless young clerks against the "very appearance of evil." It will not do to pacify your conscience by thinking that a few ounces overweight is of no account, or that an orange is nothing. Acts of this nature grow and grow until the final venture is a criminal one and the last end is disgrace. Here is a pretty good rule for a clerk's decision when tempted to do anything that might be a wee bit shady. Just imagine that the eyes of your employer are staring right at you from an unseen position. Do nothing that those eyes might not approve.

Girl Grocery Clerks.—The writer has recently added to the sales force in the grocery department two girls. It was an innovation for this particular store, and the reason for referring to the matter is to show up the good nature and tolerant spirit of our men. These men, instead of being jealous and "smart," as the saying goes, welcomed these young people, showed them the utmost courtesy and assisted them in every way. This without previous instruction or without even the knowledge that they were engaged for this work. The object was not to cut down expenses; as a matter of fact, it was increasing expense, but rather to add efficiency and tone to the department. Should you at any time have a girl work beside you in the store, show her deference, for your own sake at least, because an opposite attitude would result in branding you a back number, and for you to exhibit a spirit of jealousy would mean that you were afraid of your job, and for a man to be afraid of his job would indicate that he isn't onto his job. See it?

The Paper Bill—Is now a serious item, and you should all take it to heart. Paper that you have used for display can be easily used later for wrapping. Be careful with the bags. Study sizes. Customers, especially Saturday night customers, often call for a big brown bag. Make them bring you their bundles, and the probability is that a 14-pound square bag will be plenty large enough. Cardboard that has been used for signs can be saved and cut up for smaller signs, using the unprinted side. This applies largely to the vegetable department. Pick up every bag you see on the floor. If too dirty to use, throw in the waste paper barrel for the press. All stores now own a press.

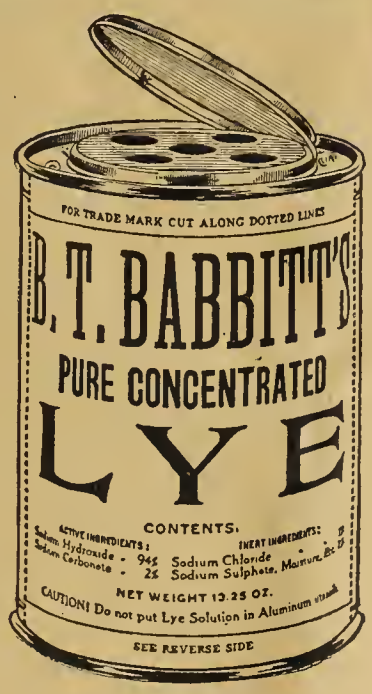
Water.—For inside and outside, we are water advocates. For a sweet breath and a fit body, keep friends with the pitcher and the bath tub. "Sweat smell" is inexcusable. You are a dispenser of things to eat. Be consistent. Be in tune with your business. That feeling you have isn't a lazy one. You haven't got malaria. Turn on the shower.

I am a subscriber to your valuable paper for ten years or more and find it of great benefit to me in all its departments. I always take time to read it no matter how busy I am.—S. B. Klopp, Shillington, Pa.

Chance is if you threw out of stock every unknown package brand, and confined yourself to nationally advertised brands, and getting out of them all the retail business that there is in them, you would make a very substantial increase both in business and in profits. Why?



The first problem is to make people want the goods, and the second is to supply them at a profit. The merchant who specializes on nationally advertised goods gets rid of the first and can concentrate on the second. The merchant who sells unknown brands has both problems on his hands.

Questions and Answers on Practical Trade Questions

Choice Pickings From the Question Box at the Recent Minnesota Retail Merchants' Convention. Mail Order Competition a Pertinent Topic.

In every mercantile convention the writer has ever attended, the most interesting feature has been the question box. The opportunities which this offers for practieal discussion are without limit.

Below appear some of the best questions and answers which eame out of the question box at the reeent Minnesota Retail Merehants' convention:—

Q. What successful stunts have been pulled off to beat the mail order houses?

A. Many experiences of retailers were told and stunts that had been pulled off to meet this competition were outlined. The general mail order question was discussed for nearly an hour, and it was conceded that in 80 or 90 per cent. of the cases merchants could meet mail order competition by not only matching the quality, but also the price and still have a fair margin of profit to do business on. Catalogue houses use certain items as leaders, and consequently merchants can use these same methods in making leaders on similar merchandise.

Q. What is being done to educate clerks and to increase efficiency in hired help?

A. One of the merchants present stated that they held weekly store meetings, which proved very successful—the general idea was to familiarize the clerks with the retailer's business and through this general grasping of affairs in the store he will be better enabled to handle important problems as they are presented to him.

Q. What is the general opinion of the retail merchant as to the quality of the goods shipped by mail order houses?

A. In some respects the goods shipped out by these people are of good quality, and other respects they are not. Grocery mail order houses are not compelled to live up to the food laws of the States, but are able, on account of interstate business, to ship foods into that State that are not up to required standards of the food department. This works a hardship on the retailer, because he at all times is compelled to handle only the highest grade goods, or those which conform strictly to the law as to quality, label, etc.

Q. What is the legitimate profit on flour and sugar?

A. It was generally admitted that very few merchants make any money on either one of these two staples, although perhaps more money is being made on flour than on sugar. Several merchants stated they would not handle flour if they could not make at least 25 or 29 cents per sack, which does not in any event cover the cost of doing business. In many localities local flour mills do the flour business.

Q. What can we afford to pay for cash business in the shape of premiums and discounts?

A. From 2 to 4 per cent., according to the manner in which the goods were being marked.

Q. In order to reduce stock would you advise a merchant to put on a sale by professional auction sales agents, or what is the best way?

A. As a rule professional auction sales agencies do not give satisfactory service, nor do they get desired results. If the merchant will take the same time and effort he can hold as good a special sale through his own organization as he can put on through some outside association.

Q. Should goods be sold for the same price on time as for cash?

A. This led to a discussion on the matter of giving cash discounts in which nearly every merchant took part. Practically every one who had tried the cash discount plan had had absolute success, and several merchants present had given this discount all the way from a few months up to several years. One merchant had given cash discount for eleven years and said that a result of this, 60 per cent. of his business was done on a cash basis, whereas only 40 per per cent. on a credit basis. Other merchants gave similar experiences as proof that the cash discount plan when properly worked is decidedly profitable.

Q. How many merchants are from towns which operate a co-operative delivery system?

A. There were only two or three merchants present who were located in towns of this kind, and probably the best explanation given in behalf of the co-operative delivery system was given by T. A. Gagnon, of Grafton. He said that seven merchants in his town, including five grocers and general merchants and two meat markets, had organized a co-operative delivery system, and are running four delivery rigs during the week with one additional wagon on Saturday evening.

These rigs make four deliveries a day, and as a result they are better able to give a more satisfactory service than individual delivery rigs operated by the merchants, besides this matter of service, nearly every store in addition is saving from $35 to $45 per month, and although the service is comparatively in its infancy at Grafton, it has already been demonstrated to be a great success. The charge to each individual merchant is proportioned according to the size of his business, although the scheme of making an equitable division has not yet been perfected.

If You Don't Think Business Good, Read These Figures

For a Year There Has Been a Steady Falling Off in Failures, Particularly in General Stores and Dry Goods. All Records Show Single Exceptions of Grocery Store Failures Which Increased Slightly for a Time.

The always interesting report of commereial failures for given periods is here from the R. G. Dun Co. Conditions as to failures are beeoming mueh more equalized. When the 1915 report was compared with the late months of 1914, when business had gone all to pieees, the 1915 report showed a heavy falling off beeause business had generally improved. The comparison was not altogether eonvineing beeause it compared a boom with a depression. A eomparison between 1916 and 1915 is much more valuable beeause eonditions during the two years were not materially different. If under the same eonditions failures deerease, it must be because there is a steady inerease in prosperity.

The offieial reports show the failures for the month of June, 1916, to be materially less than those of June, 1915, those of the seeond quarter of 1916 materially less than those of the same quarter of 1915, and those of the first half of 1916 materially less than those of the same period of 1915.

Some of the figures are as follows:—

General Stores—June, 1916, 97; liabilities, $1,270,963. June, 1915, 153; liabilities, $896,784.

Groeeries—June, 1916, 279; liabilities, $1,196,005. June, 1915, 281; liabilities, $977,492.

Clothing—June, 1916, 87; liabilities, $857,785. June, 1915, 153; liabilities, $1,229,743.

Dry Goods—June, 1916, 49; liabilities, $743,536. June, 1915, 99; liabilities, $1,704,823.

Shoes—June, 1916, 31; liabilities, $195,727. June, 1915, 35; liabilities, $207,513.

Hardware—June, 1916, 19; liabilities, $127,065. June, 1915, 44; liabilities, $502,747.

Thus it will be seen that although business was supposed to have been good in 1915, the failures for June, 1916, show a very substantial falling off in every line, especially in general stores and dry goods.

Coming now to the seeond quarter of 1916, the figures also show a falling off in failures in the following lines as compared with 1915: General stores, clothing, dry goods, shoes, hardware. Groeery failures increased from 856 in the seeond quarter of 1915, to 870 in the same quarter of 1916.

The failures for the first half of 1916 show a falling off of about 25 per eent. as eompared with the same period of 1915. Figures for all States are as follows:—

DO YOU USE PREMIUMS?

If you do, don't fail to consult the directory of premium manufacturers which is regularly published in this paper. You can get anything in the premium line from them at manufacturers' prices.

The Grocery Markets

Tea.

The tea market is in fair condition, considering the seasonable dullness. The demand is only fair and here and there holders will make concessions. There is, however, a steady undertone to the market and no indication of any weakness to speak of. There is no surplus of tea either in the country or in prospect, and the outlook is healthy.

Coffee.

The coffee market has been slightly better during the week, although it is possible to buy all grades of Rio and Santos coffee at the same price as a week ago. Firmer feeling in Brazil appears to be the reason. Mild grades are dull and heavy, but show no change for the week. The demand for coffee is absolutely stagnant; buyers are taking stock for imperative wants only.

Sugar.

The sugar market remains about unchanged for the week. Raws have fluctuated slightly, but not materially. Refined is unchanged. A few of the local refiners who have been cutting the price, have practically gone back again to the regular figure. Consumptive demand for refined sugar shows much improvement.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose has advanced 10 points during the week, although this has had no effect upon compound syrup, for the demand is very light. Compound syrup remains unchanged in price. Sugar syrup and molasses are very dull, at unchanged prices.

Fish.

The mackerel situation remains unchanged. Norways on spot are so scarce as to be hardly worth quoting. Irish and shore fish are beginning to be in evidence, at prices much above normal. Demand fair. Cod, hake and haddock are seasonably out of the market. Salmon is tending upward as to pinks and reds. The demand is fairly good. Imported sardines are scarce and high. Domestic sardines show no change in price and light demand.

Canned Goods.

Tomato market is unchanged from last week, at which time an advance was reported, but the situation is slightly weaker, because the season for 1915 tomatoes is drawing to a close and buyers are shy of the market because they can buy futures at considerable less than to-day's prices for spot goods. It is said that the Government is buying tomatoes, or is about to do so. There is also a rumor that the Government intends to buy peas. The pea market is firm and needs no Government intervention to cause an advancing tendency. The packing outlook is still poor. Corn is firm also on account of the probable short pack. Apples show no change. The Government is said to be in the market for some and they may strengthen the situation, which is now very dull. California canned goods are unchanged and quiet. Small Eastern staple canned goods are in light request, at unchanged prices.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are tending upward, although there is no quotable advance for the week. Demand is light. Almost all other dried fruits are firm and high. This includes peaches, apricots, raisins and currants. Demand is qutie light for all dried fruits.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans are taking a slight respite this week and price on spot in a large way is from $6 to $6.15 per bushel. To come forward the quotation is around $6.50. As high as $7 has been paid in Chicago. Marrows remain unchanged at $6.50. California limas are also unchanged, as are green and Scotch peas.

Butter.

The butter market is steady and unchanged for the week, with a good consumptive demand. There is some buying for storage and the receipts are cleaned up every day. Butter is being stored this year at perhaps ½ cent above last year. The quality of the present receipts is very fine.

Eggs.

The egg market is very firm, with an advance of perhaps one cent per dozen noted on the finest grade. Owing to the prolonged heat the quality of much of the receipts is not so good as it has been. Production seems to be falling off everywhere and the market is healthy and firm, prices being about on the same basis that they do not usually reach until September.

Cheese.

The cheese market is firm and perhaps ¼ cent per pound higher for the week, owing to the speculative demand at country points. The export demand continues small, but the spot demand continues fair. Holders do not believe that prices will go very much higher. Old cheese is out of the market.

Provisions.

All provisions, lard, compound, etc., are unchanged, except barreled pork, which is 25 cents higher.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Imported Fish Specialties.

All kinds of salt fish appear neglected by the trade, as is usual at this season of the year, only hand-to-mouth demand and prices unchanged but firm. The Newfoundland herring now arriving show the finest quality that we have ever seen.

No change in the imported sardine situation. In Norway there is some catch, but prices continue as high as ever, and they are higher than the ideas of the American buyers, consequently very little business is done in Norwegian sardines. In Portugal the catch is very limited. Prices, if any, are just a little higher, owing to the scarcity of tin and high prices prevailing therefor, and high prices for all materials, including labor. In France the sardine catch has been very unimportant until now, and hardly anything has been packed for the American market. In Spain there is a little catch of sardines, but the fish run so large that no more than three-quarters could be packed to the Dingley quarter tin and prices are abnormally high; so no Spanish sardines can be imported for American sale.

Spices.

The market, while very steady, is almost wholly unchanged. The holiday of last week had a tendency to stop trading to some extent. The demand for spices now should soon begin to increase, and we look for a very good demand over the summer and fall months.

Pepper.—Is a shade firmer, but rather inactive. Prices here are lower than in any of the world's markets.

Red Peppers.—Are quiet and unchanged. Foreign prices are also higher than those ruling here.

Cloves.—While steady, are only in active demand. The demand for cloves will increase during August and September.

Pimento (Allspice).—Steady and in routine demand.

Nutmegs.—Are without any new feature to report. Prices, we believe, are safe. Any unusual demand will have a tendency to advance prices.

Mace.—While in fair inquiry, is being offered at unchanged prices.

Gingers.—Rather dull and unchanged.

Green Ginger Root.—Is in active demand. All lots arriving are quickly sold out. Higher prices probable.

Tapiocas.—Are a little firmer and in fair demand, season considered.

Seeds, Herbs, Etc.—There has been practically no changes during the week. Celery should soon begin to move in a satisfactory way. Mustard seed is in better request. Herbs are now more active and high prices are likely to prevail.

A Credit Rating Scheme.

Elmira, N. Y., July 6, 1916.
To the Editor.

Dear Sir:—What do you know of Credit Guide Company of Pittsburgh, Pa., as per clipping inclosed?

F. W. MEDDAUGH.

The clipping is as follows:—

B. W. Stewart, a special representative of the Merchants' Mercantile Co., of Pittsburgh, is in the city to arrange for the publication of the Credit Experience Guide for 1916-17. This publication gives the rating of all people in Elmira who buy on credit of local business houses, and is a valuable guide to the business men in their collections. Attorney Charles O. Eacker, of this city, is the secretary of the local branch and has done much work in its organization on a successful basis.

We don't know this particular scheme, but we do know several others which we assume to be like it. Such a directory could be good and it could be worthless.

Appearance Don't Also Rule in Canned Fruits.

John Phillips Street, director of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station, in reporting on the activities of his establishment for the year 1915, cites his conclusions from a careful inquiry into canned fruits, for the purpose of determining certain facts as to syrup, weight and proportion of solids and liquor, preliminary to establishing practical standards, in a bulletin just issued. The conclusions are valuable in detail and on the whole proved highly complimentary to the honesty of the canners. A total of 303 samples, representing 101 brands, were analyzed in the following manner: After weighing the can with its contents, the can was opened and the liquor drained from the fruit through a sieve. The drained solids and the separated liquor were then weighed and the specific gravity of the liquor portion calculated from the gravity reading by a Brix spindle. In all cases, except with cherries and sliced peaches the number of pieces of fruit was counted to determine the relative size of the fruit used. The fruit was examined as to whether it was hard or soft, and an attempt was made to determine its quality from the standpoint of taste, a matter of course depending in large part on the taster himself. "Allowing for all possible differences of judgment, however," says the report, "it was clear that some of the finest appearing fruit was quite deficient in taste and flavor, showing that when quality is to be considered, mere size and appearance are by no means the determining factor."

Why One Customer Got Blue.

I found a customer of mine as blue as thunder the other night. I got into his store about 9 o'clock. They ain't learned out in his town that stores ought to shut up at 6 o'clock in summer time. Everybody keeps open till 10 o'clock every night but Saturday and then it's to any old time.

"How's things?" I said to him. I've known him since the time he wore a muzzle, as the saying is.

"Rotten!" he said, "I'm getting sick of this!"

"Sick of what?" I said. "I hope you don't mean the sight of me, old man."

"I didn't, but the sight of you don't help any," he said, real wicious.

"What ails you, then, got a pain?" I said. "Is it business?"

"Oh business is about as good as it ever is," he said, "it ain't ever any too rich."

"Well, if it ain't business what is it then?" I said. "Why don't you come across with it? You ain't treating me like a lady."

"Oh, I'm sick of the whole blamed thing!" he said. "Spending all my time, night and day, in this dinky little store, what do I get out of it outside of a living? I'm getting so I hate the sight of the darned place!"

"You might be a heap worse off," I said. "Take that from me. But I know what ails you and if you'll cross your heart not to kick me, I'll tell you."

"Oh I don't want to hear any of your infernal jokes," he said.

" 'Tain't a joke at all," I said, and he saw right away that I was dead earnest. When I get dead earnest my face gits real handsome—sort of like a good honest fire, as it were.

I did know what ailed him, and I knew I knew it. It's funny, but seems as if I could always pick the holes in things.

My wife handed me an awful smack the other day. I had just got through telling her some things for her own good.

"I don't understand it," she said, "you can always see everybody's faults but your own."

I thought up several good comebacks for that later that afternoon, but I always try to be a gent in my own family, so I didn't make any come-back just then. I have my own idea why I can't see any faults in myself, but I ain't going to tell what it is, though it'll be known what it is after I'm dead.

But to get back, I said to my old friend:—

"Well, d'ye want me to tell you what ails you or not?"

"Go ahead, I can't stop you, nobody can," he said, real gloomy. Mind you, I was already doing him good, just by giving him the chance to let out on somebody.

"All right, you come here with me," and I started to lead him out the door across the street.

"Oh, go on!" he said, "I don't want a drink."

"Now you shut up!" I said, "I ain't asking you to drink, am I? You do what I tell you!"

I led him across the street and then turned him around sharp and pointed back at his store.

"Look at your store from here," I said. "Size it up real good. In a minute you'll tumble to what ails you."

"What's the matter with it?" he said, "I don't see anything wrong with it."

"Well you look at it for five good minutes and don't say a word," I said, "if you don't wake up by that time I'll let you in."

He did it, but he didn't see anything.

"I don't know what you mean," he said. "It's the same store it's always been, as far as I can see. Hurry up, if you've got anything to say, it's raining."

"Ain't it a peach of a place?" I said. "Look at it, man! It's about as light and cheery as a coal bin. You can't hardly tell that it has any light in it! Look at the windows—ain't they great? Honest, from here I can't see anything in 'em at all except that Lowney sign. Great temptation, that outfit has, for anybody to go inside! No blamed wonder you're getting sick of it. Gee whiz, it would give me the willies to be in it more than half an hour at a time!"

"Aw!" he said.

"Good quick answer," I said. "Take a look up and down the street. Your store looks like a dark spot. There's ten times the light in the drug store over there, and twenty times as much in that five-and-ten."

He led the way back and we went in the store again.

"There's another thing that's wrong," I said. "That fierce red paint. Don't you know that eats up all the light? Who in thunder ever let you put paint that color on a store?"

"It was my idea," he said, "I like it."

"It's fine!" I said. "It's all right for an undertaker's place—great! But it ain't the color for you—and look at that ceiling, all rotten dirty where that leak was! By hickey! You're sure a particular bloke—a peach on having things nice all right."

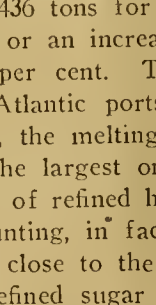
"I've stood about enough from you," he said.

"All right, go ahead and kick me and break your promise," I said. "But gimme me order and kick me afterward."

"But joking aside, old man, don't what I say go with you at all?" I said.

"I don't know," he said, "maybe there's something in it. I'll think it over."

He will think it over, too, and if he don't do what he ought to I'll go at him again. Why he can change that whole place with a mighty little money. What he ought to do is to put some good light paint on his walls and then get a lot of new lights. When he does that, I know what else'll happen. There'll be so much light in there, it'll show up everything else that's wrong, and he'll have to fix up the whole store. He can afford it; it's good enough for him. When he gets through, he'll probably rather spend his time in his store than anywhere else. So will his customers, take it from me.



THE STROLLER.

Half Year's Sugar Consumption and Exports as Compared With Last.

The consumption of sugar in the United States for the first six months of this year was 2,137,733 tons, against 2,108,436 tons for the same period last year, or an increase of 29,297 tons, or 1.39 per cent. The total business of the Atlantic ports refiners has been large, the meltings for the period being the largest on record, but the exports of refined have been even larger, amounting, in fact, to 336,526 tons, or very close to the total of 386,951 tons of refined sugar which were exported during the entire year of 1915. Last year only 71,718 tons were exported during the first half, the big export refined business occurring in the latter half of the year. This year has been just the reverse, the export business being heavy during the first part, and indications point to a diminished demand during the latter part in consequence of the expected arrival of white Java sugars in England and France.

THE FRANKLIN SUGAR REFINING CO., PHILADELPHIA

372.—Who to Make Claim on, When Goods Are Damaged or Lost on a Railroad Route Composed of More Than One Road.

Although the scope of these articles has become rather wide, I believe I have never before touched on this subject:—

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Please tell me what railroad is responsible for my loss in the case I am about to submit. I shipped some goods from Philadelphia to Hauto, a point in Carbon County, Pa. I shipped over the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, and that was the only railroad I knew in the whole transaction. The goods were shipped to Allentown over the lines of the Philadelphia and Reading, and then changed to the Central Railroad of New Jersey, over whose lines they went from Allentown to the Mauch Chunk transfer station, leaving there for Hauto, still over the lines of the Central of New Jersey.

When the goods arrived in Hauto the customer refused to receive them, saying they were practically worthless, and I believe that they were. It is therefore necessary to make a claim on some road, and there seems to be considerable difference of opinion as to which road to bring it against. I did not deal with the Central at all, and therefore I cannot see how I can bring any claim against them. They did no work for me; as I see it, they were working for the Philadelphia and Reading. In other words, the Reading was the general contractor and the Central the sub-contractor. I dealt with the Reading and I have a right to hold it responsible for anything that happens. If it is compelled to pay damages to me on account of the fault of the Central, let it collect from the Central.

Please let us have the law on this subject.

E. McMillan & Bro.

I do not know why this subject has eluded me so long, for it is certainly pertinent. Undoubtedly the largest percentage of shipments, to inland points especially, have to pass over more than one road. If they are lost or damaged, the question at once arises, against what company shall the complaint be brought? If the shipment starts over the Pennsylvania for instance, but the damage occurs, not on the Pennsylvania lines, but on some other line to which the Pennsylvania has turned over the shipment, can the claim be made against the Pennsylvania or must it be brought against the other line?

The law says it must be brought against the branch line on which the goods were lost or damaged.

In this correspondent's bill of lading, and in all general bills of lading used to-day, will be found the following, which was invented by the railroads to cover this precise situation. After agreeing to deliver the goods to their destination, the bill of lading goes on:—

> If on its road, otherwise to deliver to another carrier on the route to said destination. It is mutually agreed as to each carrier of said property, over all or any portion of said route to destination, and as to each party at any time interested in in all or any of said property, that every service to be performed hereunder shall be subject to all the conditions, whether printed or written herein contained (including conditions on back hereof), and which agreed to by the shipper and accepted for himself and his assigns.
> Sec. 2. In issuing this bill of lading, this company agrees to transport only over its own line, and except as otherwise provided by law act only as agent with respect to the portion of the route beyond its own line. No carrier shall be liable for loss, damage or injury not occurring on its own road or its portion of the through route, nor after said property has been delivered to the next carrier, except as such liability is or may be imposed by law, but nothing contained in this bill of lading shall be deemed to exempt the intitial carrier from any such liability so imposed.

This, being interpreted, means that a railroad company will accept a shipment for delivery to points beyond its own line, but that it will not be responsible for anything happening anywhere except on its own line. It will carry to the end of its own line, and will there deliver to the next line, but in delivering to the next line it acts merely as the shipper's agent, and if the next line to which it delivers doesn't treat your goods right, you can make your claim against it.

This is the law in every State which does not have a special statute on the subject, as thus cited in a leading case:—

> The mere acceptance by a carrier of goods for transportation beyond its own line is not sufficient to create by implication a contract to carry over the entire route. There must be an express contract to do so. The recognized rule in the United States and the courts of most of the other States is that, in the absence of a special contract, the initial carrier accepting goods for transportation beyond its own line performs its whole duty by transporting the goods to the extent of its own route and delivering them to the next connecting carrier, and is liable as a carrier only over its own road for losses or injuries or failure to deliver in good order to the next carrier and is a forwarder from the terminus of its own line, and a contract will not be implied on the part of the initial carrier to carry goods or provide for their carriage beyond the terminus of its road.

Of course a railroad can make a contract with the shipper, if it wants to, by which it will be responsible for a shipment until it reaches its destination, but it is hard to imagine a railroad wanting to. I know of no railroads who do, as all of them put the above provision in their bills of lading so as to specifically avoid such liability. As a matter of fact, they did not need to do that, for the law absolved them anyway. Even when the bill of lading was silent on the subject, a railroad, under the settled law, would not be responsible for loss or damage to goods not happening on its line.

How can a shipper know on what part of a route his goods were lost or damaged? He cannot know absolutely but he can usually find out. Suppose, for instance, he ships over a route composed of three branch lines. The goods are all right when shipped, but when they arrive at their destination, they are half gone, or smashed. Obviously a claim will lie against somebody, and the law says it must be brought against that one of the three lines which mishandled the goods and caused the damage. How is a shipper to know which company to go after? He can ask the first company—the company with which he dealt—to give him the names of the other branch lines that made up the route, and he can ask each one for a report of the condition of the goods when it received them and when it turned them over to the next branch line. Sometimes he can get this information, sometimes not. If he can get it, and if it fixes the responsibility, he will then know who to proceed against.

If he cannot get it, he can take advantage of another legal principle which is also well settled, and that is that where a situation like this arises, the presumption is that the damage occurred on the last branch road. He can therefore make his claim against that road which in order to escape, must show that the loss occurred somewhere else. If it can show that, the shipper then has full information on which to proceed against the right defendant.

Don't Forget These When Making Up Costs.

A writer on business topics gives the following list of items which he says merchants fail to take into account in making up their estimate of cost of doing business:—

Depreciation on fixtures and equipment, which sooner or later have to be replaced, and rental charges on all buildings owned and used in the business.

Depreciation on stock which is carried over from one year to another, losses in value through newer and better goods being put on the market or reductions in price on the part of the manufacturers.

Failure to charge against costs a definite salary for the merchant himself and interest on the amount of money invested in business.

Depreciation on damaged goods.

These costs should also include a certain percentage for possible bad debts; allowances made to customers who claim the goods were damaged; imperfections in goods which were not noticed when received; charges for services of any member of the merchant's family who helps out, but is not on the pay roll.

Attention, All Retailers Who Believe in Co-operative Work!

Those who have been wondering what the United Grocers' Corporation has been doing for the last few months, will be interested to know that we have been getting ready to open several Pennsylvania and New York branch houses.

The first of the new series will open in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., about August 15th. Read this from the Wilkes-Barre "Times-Leader" of June 29, 1916:

This is only the beginning. Messrs. C. C. Truax & Co., of Toledo, Ohio, our agents, have bought three of the best located wholesale grocery plants in Pennsylvania and New York State, which will be turned over to this Corporation in the very near future. These also will be conducted as branches of the parent company.

The United Grocers' Corporation is going to be about the biggest thing in this country in the co-operative grocery field. It is doing, and will continue to do, for hundreds of retailers what they could not possibly do for themselves.

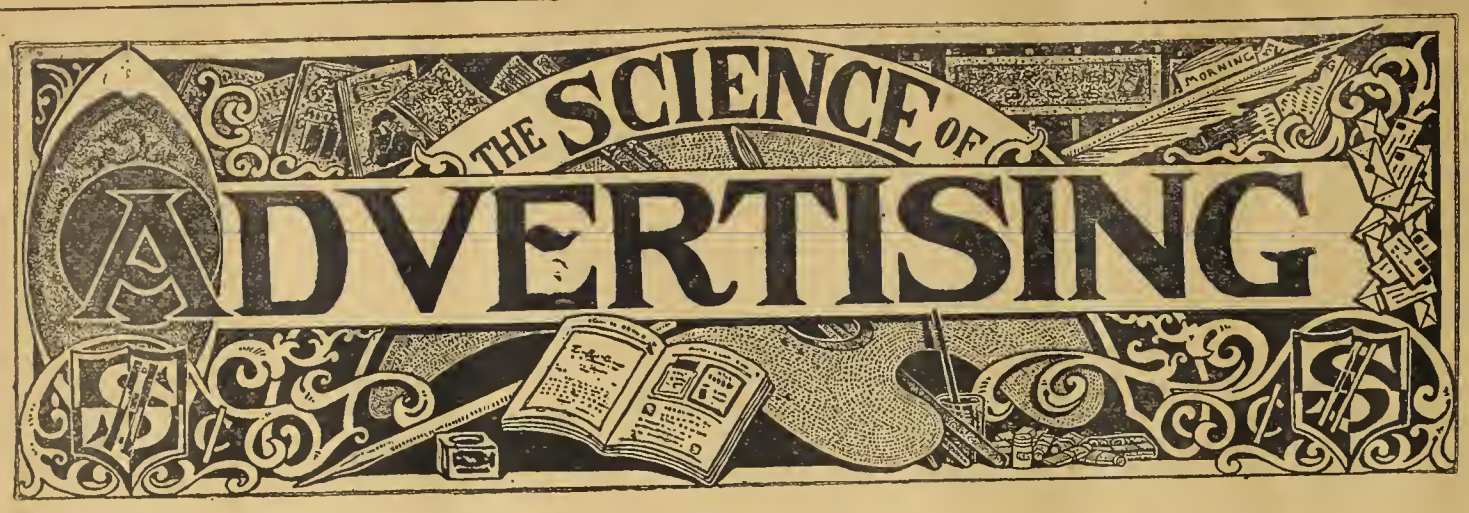
Send for our book.

United Grocers' Corporation

Toledo, Ohio

United Grocers to Open a Plant in Wilkes-Barre

So. Penn'a Ave. Site is Secured and Firm Will Start Business August 15th



MANAGER IS APPOINTED

B. M. Ayres, of This City, to be in Charge of New Establishment of Wholesalers

Wilkes-Barre is to have one of the branch wholesale houses and plants of the United Grocers Corporation, of Toledo, Ohio, under the supervision and management of B. M. Ayers, formerly of the firm of J. E. Patterson & Co., of this city. The corporation has acquired the valuable Wilkes-Barre Hotel property, 54 South Pennsylvania avenue. Contracts and arrangements already have been made for extensive improvements with Schmitt & Co., which will be completed within thirty days.

The Wilkes-Barre plant will be thoroughly equipped with all modern conveniences for packing and handling the corporation's large and extensive line of food merchandise and will handle the business in the northeastern part of the State. The corporation will carry in stock in its Wilkes-Barre plant, in addition to its own products, a full and complete line of staple grocery merchandise. The corporation has its headquarters at Toledo, with its central manufacturing, central buying and central distributing plants, which enables it to serve its various branch houses.

It is a company built along economical lines of distribution of its products with retail grocery merchants as stockholders and has at the present time considerably more than three hundred (300) merchant stockholders to be served from its Wilkes-Barre plant. C. C. Truax, vice-president, and C. B. McConahy, general manager of the corporation, have been spending several days in Wilkes-Barre completing negotiations for the opening of its plant. The corporation looks forward to this plant enjoying from two million to three million dollars of business a year from its stockholder merchants in this section. Formal opening of its plant will be held Tuesday, August 15th, by the corporation's officials, at which time the meeting will be known as a Jubilee Day of its merchant members of this section to start off its plant and give its members an opportunity to see it in complete operation.

Youngwood, Pa., June 22, 1916.
Editor "Science of Advertising."

Dear Sir:—How is this ad. as an advertising medium?

We have a town with a population of about 2,500. Have one A. & P. store. I have a good location. Am not cutting prices on dry goods and notions.

Yours truly,
W. E. BAKER.

Mr. Baker sends a circular 9½ x 12½ inches, printed in black. Here is a reduced reproduction of it:—

REDUCED PRICES

On and after Saturday, June 24, the following prices will prevail at this store, which shows that you can always save money by dealing with

W. E. BAKER

Depot Street, Youngwood, Pa.

Below is just a partial list of bargains. Other goods at correspondingly low prices.

10 lb Lake Herring Fish	65¢	Gal Mantles	8¢
Lake Herring	8¢ lb.	Milk	4¢ and 9¢ per can
Navy Beans	9¢ lb.	Heinz Baked Beans	5¢, 9¢, 13¢ per can
Lima Beans	8¢ lb.	10c Olives	8¢
Kellogg's Corn Flake	9¢	10c Chopped Olives	7¢
Jersey Corn Flake	9¢ and 12¢	25c Olives	20¢
Pepper	9¢ pkg.	Mustard	9¢ Glass
Lenox Soap, 7 cakes for	25¢	10c Pkg. Cream of Rice	7¢
Swift's Borax Soap	25¢	Sunbrite Cleanser	4¢, 3 for 10¢
Toilet Soap	4¢ cake	Heinz 15c Catsup	12¢
Jap Rose Soap	8⅓¢ cake	10c Catsup	9¢
Matches	4¢ box, 3 for 10¢	Corn	8¢ can
Mapleine	9¢ pkg.	Peas	8⅓¢ can
Maccaroni	8¢ and 9¢ pkg.	Campbell's Soup	8⅓¢ can
Ward's Bread	7¢ loaf	Oil Sardines	4¢
Youngwood Bread	5¢ and 9¢ loaf	Mustard Sardines	9¢
Loose Coffee	14¢ and 18¢ lb.	Uneda Biscuits	4¢ pkg.
Admiral Coffee	27¢ lb.	Lemon Snaps	4¢ pkg.
Halco Coffee	28¢ lb.	Zu Zu Snaps	4¢ pkg.
		Soda Crackers	8¢ lb.

Goods will be delivered by wagon one day a week---Saturday only.

If Mr. Baker wished to show that he could sell goods at cost and still remain in business, he has come pretty close to doing it in this circular. There is almost no profit in it anywhere. I notice Campbell's soup priced at 8⅓ cents, presumably as the result of the A. & P. Tea Co.'s cut to 8 cents, which has been under discussion in the last few weeks. I suppose 8⅓ cents means 9 cents for a single can. Only when buying three cans can the buyer really buy at 8⅓ cents. I have no doubt that buyers notice that the same as I do, and therefore much of the force of the bargain is gone. But even if the buyer takes the single can at 9 cents, there is no profit in the sale.

I suppose the keynote to this slaughter of groceries is in Mr. Baker's final statement that he is not cutting prices of dry goods or notions. He uses groceries as a bait to sell dry goods and notions. The idea is all right, if it works. In many general stores, however, groceries are the main line, and dry goods and notions the small line. I hope he isn't sacrificing the big end of his business to help the small end. I don't know what his system is, but it seems to me a good idea to make each hand help the other. For instance, just now the grocery end is helping dry goods and notions. Another time I should let dry goods help groceries. Have a special sale of dry goods and notions and sell groceries for just as near full prices as you can during that time.

If I were Mr. Baker, I shouldn't have advertised in such a way as to make people think these were permanent prices he was quoting. I should have said "these prices will prevail until further notice," or something like that. There is a great deal more urge to a temporary cut price than to a permanent cut price, and Mr. Baker might easily find after a little while that he didn't want or need to go on selling at the prices he quotes here.

The Only Retailer Who Is Getting the Full Benefit

Nothing that an organized body of businessmen has ever done has accomplished more for the people affected by it than the plan of the American Specialty Manufacturers' Association to stamp the specialty orders gotten for its members' goods, and guarantee them to the jobber.

With the help of the retailers, which has been freely and generously given—although the retailer benefitted as much as anybody by the reform—this has made a specialty order mean something to everybody. Before it often meant little or nothing.

Of course, the only retailers that are getting the full benefit of this reform are those who have made it a rule to sign no specialty orders which do not bear one of the above stamps.

The Subscribers' Bargain List

Have you got any goods you don't want? Anything—canned goods, groceries, hardware, dry goods, anything at all that's in good condition, but won't sell for you.

If you will make a price on it we can possibly sell it for you in a hurry. Write us about it, stating the quantity, condition and your best price. You might give the original cost, too. We will give it a key number and offer it to our 4,000 subscribers. Your name will not appear unless you want it to. All sales ought to be on a cash basis.

The point is that what won't sell for you may be in everday demand for somebody else, who will be glad to get your stock of it at a bargain.

There will be no charge for this service anywhere—we do it to help along.

Heinz Vinegars

are now sold in original glass packages, filled and sealed in the Heinz establishment. Our magazine and street car advertisments are telling your customers that this method retains the natural fine flavor and aroma of Heinz aged, mellowed vinegars.

The Heinz package protects and benefits you, too. The grocer who sells Heinz Bottled Vinegars has absolute guarantee that he is complying with the pure food laws. Furthermore, he is spared the trouble of drawing vinegar from a barrel, and freed from the losses always connected with bulk measuring.

The Heinz salesman will supply on request attractive envelope inserts which you can enclose with your customers' bills and which tell your customers about Heinz Bottled Vinegars.

Post Office Department is Considering This Scheme of Increasing Parcels Post Business in Butter, Eggs, Poultry and Other Farm Products

Includes Some Mail Order Stunts. Author Admits It May Destroy a Few Grocery Stores But Says That Would Increase the Trade of Those That Remained.

One David Lubin, a well-known Hebrew Socialist and the American delegate to the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, has devised a scheme which he thinks would increase the parcel post business in food products. He has laid it before the Postal Department at Washington, and it is now under consideration. He claims that it introduces some of the labor-saving schemes of the mail-order houses. Mr. Lubin has issued a long explanation of his plan, from which we have taken the following:—

The proposal under consideration will require several cardboard forms. They should be in various colors, one in white, say, to designate eggs; another in blue to designate butter; another in pink to designate chickens, etc. These forms should be sold by the Post Office Department to the farmers and to the buying public at a slightly higher price than the cost of printing them, thereby making this service self-sustaining to the Post Office Department.

To avoid several writing of names and addresses, the farmers using these forms may be known by numbers. Let us say that the farmer orders a hundred of each color of these forms. The post office provides a series of racks containing slides, into which parts of the forms received back from the farmers are to be placed. The post office sells to the buying public purchasing books similar in form to a railroad mileage book.

Farmers desiring to enter under this system register their names and addresses at the post office. The city customer desiring to place orders obtains a purchasing book from the post office, and we are now ready for business. Before proceeding, let us say that the post office rules may decide that purchasing units shall be, for eggs, one dozen; for butter, one pound, and for chickens, by the single one. Now we will proceed. Farmer No. 40 has six dozen eggs for sale, for which he makes out six white forms. He has ten pounds of butter, for which he makes out ten blue forms, and five chickens for sale, for which he makes out five pink forms.

The route carrier collects these forms from the farmer and sends them on to the post office. The post office tears a portion of the six white forms and places them in the egg rack. The post office also detaches a portion of the ten blue forms and places them in the butter rack, and also tears off a portion of the five pink forms and places them in the chicken rack.

The next step is that of the customers. The housewife goes to the post office and reviews the cards in the racks. She wants eggs and she goes to the white forms. She finds several hundred forms in the racks, say, from one to two hundred, with prices quoted by each of them. She has heard No. 40 well spoken of, so she orders a dozen eggs from No. 40 for, say, 30 cents, and one chicken from No. 10, at, say, 60 cents, making a total of 90 cents. She pays the 90 cents to the post office clerk, who indicates same in her purchasing form book.

The next step in the procedure follows by the post office sending a portion of the forms back to the farmers concerned, who fill the orders. The route man on his return trip receives the goods from the farmer and tears off a portion of the form, which serves as a credit to this farmer.

At the end of each week the farmer fills in a third form, which may be designated as a total slip. He enters each item on its proper line and totals up all of the credits, and, say, it totals up to $10.50. Then the route clerk tears off the duplicate part of the form, which he hands to the farmer. He then sends the slip and forms back to the post office. The post office then remits the total amount due to the farmer, when the entire transaction is closed.

In explaining, all this work would seem to be complicated and abstract, but in fact it is quite simple. It is in fact a combination of post office and mail order technique all simplified and reduced to the point of least resistence. It reduces selling and buying between the producer and consumer to the lowest denomination, so far as cost is concerned, and it brings the seller and the buyer into the most direct contact possible. It does the work that the mail order mechanism does, but without profit to any outsider. This system avoids disappointment, as far as the buyers are concerned. When they order a dozen eggs from the cards in the post office rack, they are sure to get them, for under this plan the farmer, in sending in a card for a dozen eggs, has the eggs on hand in the first place, and he cannot sell them to any one unless he recalls that same card from the post office. This kind of selling would be about the same as a seat reserved in the theatre or as a Pullman sleeper is reserved.

But supposing that farmer No. 40 has poor eggs or poor butter or poor chickens, or at a higher price than the average. Well, in that case farmer No. 40 does not work up a good reputation. He will sell less and less as time goes along. Supposing he cheats or gives bad eggs.

A few complaints will deprive him of the right to hold any place on the rack at all.

And, now, supposing that farmer No. 50 sells goods of prime quality and at reasonable prices. In time the business of this farmer would so expand as to justify him in extending his farm.

I am asked whether or not, under the proposed system, the farmers would not directly begin to charge the housewife just as much as she would have to pay to the dealer. Do you figure that there would be a saving to the consumer as well as an advantage to the farmer? I think there would be. For the farmer, in fixing his own price, would be competing with all the other farmers offering the same products. Assuming that the farmers will be able to supply the city population, what effect will that have on the small grocery store? So far as these products are concerned the effect would seem to be material. The grocery store, however, by some changes in its line of goods, could continue on just the same as ever. It may, if successful, shut up some few stores, but it would probably increase the business of those that remained, because the removal of blocks and clogs in the pathway of business increases its volume.

The question is whether or not the grocery store is not a necessity to-day to the village or city inhabitant. The same question no doubt came up in the matter of the hand weaver and the power loom; in the typesetter and the linotype; in the needlewoman and the sewing machine. My system will be the formation of what might be called a dry market, an automatic system.

It seems to be that there can hardly be any comparison in the value between the work the post office does now and the contemplated work under the plan we are considering. The post office, in the development of its parcel post work, is trying to reach the farmer and the consumer in much the same way as some city storekeepers have by putting on their cards mail orders are also filled. These storekeepers forget or do not know that mail orders cannot be filled profitably by every Tom, Dick and Harry storekeeper; that filling mail orders is a business requiring technical knowledge and scrupulous adherence to technical modes and methods.

Let us assume that before us here is the present post office list of the farmers. We see on the list that Farmer Jones says he has chickens, and here we see that Farmer Smith has eggs, and here is Farmer Brown, who has butter. Now, say that the housewife gets that list. A few days after its receipt this housewife wishes to order. She must write a letter and must have pen, ink and paper on hand, also a stamp. If any of these are missing or in bad order that stops the procedure. But after all this is done there must be a trip to the post office to get a money order, and after all this labor, lo and behold, the said farmer has sold out. In that case it becomes the farmer's turn to take up the matter by writing a letter to the customer, returning the money order. The customer will then have to go to the post office to cash the same, and neither farmer nor housewife has done any business except writing letters and visiting the post office. One such experience will finish the farmer and the housewife so far as this line of business is concerned. But in the plan we are considering, all of these objections are removed. They simply would not and could not occur. Under this plan the farmer and the housewife would have all movements in connection with the order so well known and systematized as to substantially make them automatic.

And Now a National Advertising Campaign for Cheese, Butter and Other Milk Products.

Fifty Thousand Dollars Already Subscribed to Advertise the Above Foods Into Increased Consumption

The latest National campaign in the interest of increased consumption for a food product is about to be undertaken for cheese, ice cream, milk, buttermilk, etc. A fund of $50,000 has been subscribed by men prominent in the dairy industry for the preliminary work of this advertising campaign.

Advertisements are in preparation and will shortly appear in the "Saturday Evening Post" and other national magazines, in such newspapers as the New York "Times," Chicago "Tribune," Philadelphia "North American," St. Louis "Globe-Democrat," Boston "Post," Cleveland "Plain Dealer" Detroit "Free Press," and others.

It is proposed to raise a total fund of at least $750,000 to cover a complete campaign of three years and to expend in advertising, general publicity and organization work approximately $20,000 a month for thirty-six months.

The godfathers of this extensive powerful and beneficial project are enthusiastic in their belief that this step means the full realization of the object of the National Dairy Council, now counting 280,000 members, "to advance the cause of dairying in America by promoting the dairy cow and all interests dependent upon her, through co-operative and united effort."

Week's Dry Goods Record.

Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:—

Current wholesale distribution of dry goods has been in greater volume than for the corresponding period a year ago.

Merchants have visited the market in much larger numbers.

Collections are better than for the same week last year.

The market on domestic cotton goods is firm.

Another Effort to Improve Quality of American Sardines—the Government's Didn't Amount to Much National Canners' Association Has Taken the Matter Over and Now Maintains Inspectors at the Factories. Will Give Certificates Where Brands Deserve It.

The National Canners' Association has taken on itself the work of improving the quality of a large quantity of the American sardines packed in New England. Everybody in the trade knows it is time somebody did this, for much of the sardines packed in this country have been almost unfit for food. The Government made an effort in this direction not long ago, but it failed.

A "Sardine Section" of the American Canners' Association has been organized, and almost all the packers have joined. There are 55 canneries on the Maine Coast and they produce 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 cases per year. Heavy competition has brought the quality down until some brands are now pretty close to the food law limit. Large quantities of "feedy" fish, which are fish partly decomposed from undigested food, are packed, especially since the price was cut to below the cost of production.

The work of the Canners' Association for the sardine industry has been placed in charge of a director of inspection with an office at Eastport, and the territory in which the canneries are located has been divided into 15 districts with an inspector assigned to supervise the canneries in each district. Later the district will be made smaller and the number of inspectors increased to 20 or 25. The director has sole charge of the appointment of these inspectors, who are in no way connected with the industry, but are being trained for this special work.

Sanitary requirements for the sardine canneries have been laid down for the coming season, and if these requirements are fully complied with and only fish of good quality are packed, certificates of inspection will be issued to the packer to cover each case of goods. These certificates read as follows:—

These sardines have been inspected and packed under our supervision in accordance with our sanitary requirements for packing sardines.

NATIONAL CANNERS' ASSOCIATION,
(Signed) H. M. Loomis,
Director of Inspection.

It is said that the sardine packers have already spent nearly $50,000 on this campaign.

Grocery Prices of Twenty Years Ago.

Huntington, W. Va.,
July 14, 1916.

To the Editor.

Dear Sir:—We want to get a list of the prices on staples about twenty years ago—coffees, beans, sugar, flour, lard, hams, smoked and dry salt sides, tomatoes, corn, peas and other staples. We have been in business for considerably over twenty years, but had a very bad flood here in 1913 which carried away most of our old records, and we are unable to go back and get the figures for ourselves. We want them for a certain purpose which is really important to us and we will appreciate it very much if you will give us this information, or send us one of your twenty years ago price-lists.

Yours truly,
SEHON, STEVENSON & Co.

We have no loose copies of twenty years ago. We have the bound volume of twenty years ago, which contains prices on the staples mentioned, but they are prices to retailers, whereas we assume that Sehon, Stevenson & Co., who are jobbers, want first hands prices. We suggest that they write the New York "Journal of Commerce."

Something of the Atlantic Wholesale Grocery Company.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 9, 1916.

To the Editor.

Dear Sir:—This company has been organized by a number of men the majority of whom are the smallest merchants in the grocery business that any city can claim ownership of. There are a few of the larger merchants in the town interested in our company, but very few. We also feel proud of the fact that as far as money was concerned, we did not have very much of it, but what we lacked in that respect we made up in real live enthusiasm and the proper spirit.

We started storing our goods in one of our director's warehouse, a very small place, and before one month was up the quarters were entirely too small. Through the courtesy of our treasurer, Mr. William Freihofer, at a very liberal price, we rented a warehouse on the railroad with side track and other facilities.

Our warehouse is fairly well stocked with goods, and business is increasing a little every week.

Yours for success,
ATLANTIC WHOLESALE GRO. Co.,
E. Deutsch, Secy.

Change in Size and Packing of Tanglefoot Fly Paper.

To obtain a distinctive size and package by which our manufacture may be readily recognized, we have made the following changes in Tanglefoot Fly Paper:—

First.—We have changed the size of our sheet to 8 x 14⅛ inches.

Second.—We have adopted the Tanglefoot handy package, which is a sealed envelope of transparent moisture proof paper, containing five double sheets, to retail at 10 cents.

Third.—In each Tanglefoot Handy Package we will place a suitable advertising card, designed to stiffen the package and offer space for advertising to the consumer.

The consumer will now get five double sheets for 10 cents, whereas he has usually had but four.

The retailer will make larger individual sales and save the labor and expense of wrapping 5-cent purchases.

Tanglefoot Handy Package will protect the contents from climatic influences and rough handling.

This new size will be quite generally introduced in the East this year and in the far western part of the country next year.

WITH THE EDITOR

If as the various employees of the American Fair Trade League assert and many times repeat, the Stevens bill is going to prove such a boon to consumers, doesn't it seem strange that not a single influential consumer has come forward to say so? Paul H. Nystrom, who is paid by the American Fair Trade League to make speeches for the Stevens bill, said in advocating the passage of the bill before the Congressional Committee, "it will benefit not only producers and distributors, but practically all consumers."

Where Is the Voice of the Consumer?

The Stevens bill would give manufacturers of trade-marked articles the right to fix the wholesale and retail selling price. Everybody who is working for its passage says it will be the biggest thing to the consumer that ever happened, but outside of I think two New York club women, not one consumer of any consequence has asked for its passage.

My personal opinion is that the Stevens bill, if it passes, which it is practically certain not to do, will benefit nobody except certain manufacturers. To retailers I believe it would be worse than a pair of handcuffs.

If there is a manufacturer who can sell the regular retail trade good crackers and cakes on a basis which will enable them to compete with the 5-and-10-cent stores and with chain stores, there is a tremendous business lying ready for his taking. The "Modern Merchant and Grocery World" has a pile of letters from retailers asking in substance "where can I buy cakes and crackers to compete with 5-and-10-cent stores and with the chain stores?" Considerable investigating has been done, but no manufacturer has been found who would say that he could supply such goods to the retail trade on the terms stated. This must be from one of two reasons: Either the chain stores (grocery or 5-and-10) are buying so much cheaper than the regular trade as to be beyond all competition; or the quality of the crackers and cakes in question is poorer than the average manufacturer makes. As to the first reason, if they are buying in materially larger quantities than the single dealer, they could expect to buy somewhat cheaper, though in crackers and cakes it would be only a fraction of a cent, which would by no means put the chain stores beyond competition.

Why Are Chain Store Crackers and Cakes Beyond Competition?

As to the second reason, this paper is now making an investigation into the character of crackers and cakes sold by the 5-and-10-cent stores and will make a report on the subject next week.

There is a constant urge on the part of the larger dealers toward selling consumers larger quantities of food products. Here is the suggestion one large retail grocery store printed and sent to its clerks:

Selling Consumers in Quantity.

> In short, sell in large quantities. It is to the customer's advantage, more particularly if prices are shaved thereby. Convince the customer that this is true; but don't over persuade—that isn't good salesmanship.
> It is likewise to your advantage, because it increases the grand total of your sales—and the total of goods sold that stay sold is the "acid test" of your salesmanship—a salesperson is desirable, or not, chiefly as the total indicates ability to sell.

It might be added that selling in large quantities is also to the dealer's advantage—very greatly so. He does such business at smaller expense and his customer stays as long as his purchases last. Selling by the dozen, half dozen, or even quarter dozen, is infinitely better for everybody, from every standpoint, than selling by the single package.

It is so much better, in fact, that it is a wonder to me that so few retailers go after that kind of business hard.

Shortly after the war broke out, when it became apparent that we were going to be up against it for imported sardines, I ventured the opinion that the American sardine packers had the chance of their lives to improve their quality and get a lot of the trade that imported brands could no longer serve. Sardine experts told me that the people accustomed to eat French or Norwegian sardines would never be satisfied with anything packed here, and I agreed with that as to some of them. I believed then, however, and believe now that it was possible for the American packer to produce a grade of sardine which would sell to a lot of people who had never seen anything in domestic sardines before.

Domestic Sardines That Have No Right to Exist.

However, it is impossible to say whether I was right or not, for the packers haven't made the slightest move to utilize their opportunity. If anything, their sardines are poorer than they were before the war opportunity presented itself, although French sardines are almost out of the market! The Government tried to help—sent some scientists to Maine to do experimental work, but it had no practical effect. A lot of sardines produced in the Maine factories to-day aren't fit to eat. They sell at a mean price—less than $3 a case, but they aren't worth even that. They aren't worth anything, in fact.

Now, as told elsewhere, the National Canners' Association will take a hand and try to raise the standard of domestic sardines. If they can hold the packers up to any kind of a standard, they can probably do it. At any rate, if they can't, nobody can.

The Housewives' League of New York has made a peculiar turn-about in its attitude toward package and trade marked goods. In the beginning the League was against package goods because they increased the retail cost. The paper published at the time some comparisons which the League made between the cost of a quantity of a given product when packed in packages and its cost when sold in bulk. Of course the comparisons showed bulk goods to be much the cheaper and the League made a very spirited argument that right here was the solution of the high cost of living.

Women's Change of Base on Package Goods.

To-day nobody is more heartily in favor of package goods than the Housewives' League. The explanation of the president, Mrs. Julia Heath, is as follows: "We want to know how goods were made, under what conditions what we eat and where it is produced, and this cannot be done unless we know where the articles come from and who makes them."

Which is equivalent to saying, I suppose, that while it is true that package goods cost more than bulk the difference in price can be considered well spent for the identification which package goods carry with them.

It is a pity that the Housewives' League didn't see this before it muddied the waters with its attack on package goods.

No Prosecutions for Failure to Put Weight on Unlabeled Canned Goods.

Referring to the hearing on July 1, 1916, before the Secretary of Agriculture, the Department of Agriculture has issued the following announcement:—

Until further notice the Department will not recommend proceedings under the Food and Drugs Act on account of the shipment in interstate commorce or the sale in the District of Columbia or the Territories of unlabeled canned foods solely upon the ground that the same do not bear a statement of the quantity of contents, if such shipment or sale be other than to a retail dealer or to a consumer and the cans bear a correct statement of the quantity of the contents when sold or delivered to retail dealers and consumers. If investigation discloses that failure to mark the quantity of the contents on unlabeled cans affords means to defraud or to defeat the purposes of the act, it will be the duty of the Department to recommend proceedings and reasonable notice to the effect will be given.

Before shipping unlabeled canned goods the National Canners' Association suggests that packers protect themselves with a guaranty that the canned foods will be labeled with the proper statement of contents before being delivered to retailers or consumers.

The Grocery Markets

Tea.

The tea market shows no change, with quiet demand and an inclination on the part of some holders to make concessions occasionally. The undertone is, however, still strong on account of continuing foreign purchases in the primary market. Prices on this side now show quite a radical decline, particularly in Ceylon Indias, and are steady at the lower basis.

Coffee.

The coffee market is feeling somewhat better, largely due to a firmer feeling in Brazil. Most grades of Brazils are perhaps ⅛ to ¼ higher than a week ago. The demand is very dull indeed. Milds are also quiet and not much more than steady. Java and Mocha unchanged.

Sugar.

The sugar market shows no change for the week; consumptive demand is very fair owing to the large supply of fruits, and both raw and refined are about unchanged for the week. The staple price for granulated is still 7.65, and raws have not advanced beyond the price noted in preceding reports. There is no indication of any radical change in sugar.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose has made no further change since a week ago, and compound syrup is dull at ruling prices. Sugar syrup and molasses unchanged and very quiet.

Fish.

Mackerel is unchanged for the week. There is some shore mackerel about, but it is still ruling at almost twice the price which it usually brings at this season. Quotations in a large way are from $16 to $18 a barrel, whereas the price should be around $10. The catch of shore mackerel is very disappointing up to now. There is some Irish mackerel in the country, but not a great deal; the prices are high. Norway mackerel remains very scarce at exceedingly high prices. Cod, hake and haddock all unchanged and dull. Salmon is strong and in good demand, but shows no change for the week. Imported sardines are exactly where they have been for weeks—very scarce and high. Domestic sardines are also scarce and steady to firm.

Dried Fruits.

There is practically nothing doing in the California dried fruits on spot, and as the future prices are still higher than the jobbers are willing to pay, there is practically no business being done in them.

Canned Goods.

The tomato market is unchanged, both spot and future. The buying of spots is very limited, but the price is fairly held. Peas and corn are both strong with prices unchanged, but more inquiry for future corn. Spot corn is being closely cleaned up. In the Baltimore markets there is the usual season's demand, the principal item of interest being spinach. No. 10 is off the market, and No. 3 very scarce. There is more interest being manifested in California canned fruits and quite some business has been done during the past week at full opening prices.

Butter.

The butter market is firm at unchanged prices, receipts showing slight decrease over last week, some makes showing poor on account of excessive heat.

Eggs.

The egg market shows a firmer tone due to a good consumptive demand and slightly less receipts. The market advanced about 30 cents per case this week.

Cheese.

The cheese market declined from ¼ to ½ cent per pound this week, exporters having dropped off the market temporarily. Receipts show a slight decrease over last week and about the same as last year.

Beans and Peas.

The price of domestic pea beans has gotten so high that the demand fell off very sharply and the result has been a slight easing off in the price during the week. The same can be said of California limas. They were too high and people stopped buying them, and consequently they can be bought this week

These Manufacturers Will Gratuitously Send Retailers Advertising and Display Matter

In various ways the "Modern Merchant and Grocery World" has always directed the especial attention of its readers to the question of pushing nationally advertised products to the front. Monthly Contests have been held on the subject, and a half-page advertisement published weekly contains arguments by nationally-known manufacturers for featuring nationally advertised products in order to get the benefit of the extensive advertising which these manufacturers are doing for them. In connection with this, retailers will want to know what manufacturers will supply advertising and display matter free of charge, hence the following list:—

The A. Colburn Co., Philadelphia. Furnishes recipe booklets, advertising envelopes, blotters, printed matter with dealer's name and address thereon, upon receipt of introductory order; particulars on application. To dealers carrying the line, supplies metallic signs, large muslin display signs for salesrooms and printed matter. Spices.

Joseph Tetley & Co., Inc., New York City. Furnishes large cut-outs for window displays; velveen inside display cards and transparent signs for window or door.

at a fraction easier. Marrows have felt a dullness also and are easier, although without any material decline as yet. Green and Scotch peas unchanged and quiet.

Provisions.

Smoked meats are firm at unchanged prices, with a good consumptive demand. Canned meats are firm at unchanged prices, with a good consumptive demand. Barreled pork shows a slightly higher price, the market being cleaned up regularly with the different sizes. Pure lard shows a weaker tendency, the prices being unchanged. Compound lard remains the same and the market is fairly active.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Foreign Grocery Specialties.

French mushrooms continue as scarce as ever. Supplies coming in sparingly and prices remaining at an unusually high level.

Spanish pimentos (sweet red peppers) continue scarce and high. Supplies of new crop cannot be expected before the end of the year.

Garlic is in very plentiful supply, prices very much in buyers' favor, and very little likelihood of a better market in the near future, unless shipments from abroad are stopped absolutely.

The excellent demand for pure olive oil continues without interruption, and is likely to increase until American salad oils are very much cheaper than they are now. The trade realizes that they get very much better value in pure olive oil for the small difference in price, and once they get used to eating pure olive oil they are not likely to change to the inferior American substitute unless forced to by insufficient earnings. All raw materials are advancing.

Wheat and Flour.

We have pointed out in many of our letters the reasons for our belief that wheat was selling too low. We are not unmindful of the fact that the supply of wheat in commercial channels in abnormally large and at the present time the demand for it is limited. Were we to consider these factors alone we would feel that a considerable decline might take place, but notwithstanding this we have had an advance of nearly 9 cents a bushel in three weeks.

It has been estimated that Canada, Australia and India will have sufficient surplus wheat to supply the United Kingdom for a whole year without calling on the United States for a single bushel. It is claimed that Australia alone has raised 181,000,000 bushels, of which 130,000,000 bushels is available for export. If there were plenty of ships and rates were low, this would be a bearish factor, but at present it appears that hardly a third of this wheat will be transported to Europe during the next crop year.

The government of Australia, appreciating the difficulty of shipment, has recently purchased fifteen steamers, with cargo capacity of 160,000 bushels each. They calculate that with these vessels they will be able to move in twelve months 12,000,000 bushels of wheat, each vessel making five round trips in the course of a year. You can readily see that this is less than one-tenth of the surplus available. It is a 12,000-mile trip from Australia to Europe, as against 6,000 from Argentina and 3,000 from America, and with the scarcity of steamers it is more than probable that the United States and Canada will be called upon for the great bulk of the European supplies until Argentina harvests another crop next December.

In the crop year ending June 30, 1915, we exported 333,000,000 bushels, and by doing so left ourselves with practically exhausted reserves, viz., 37,000,000 bushels to carry over the new crop. This year we have exported 250,000,000 bushels and have an unprecedented carry-over, 117,000,000 bushels, viz., 74,000,000 in farmers' hands and 43,000,000 bushels in the visible. Adding this carry-over to the crop of 1916 we have 876,000,000 as the available supply compared with 1,048,000,000 bushels last year, and 938,000,000 bushels two years ago.

Assuming that spring wheat will go through to harvest without mishap, we find ourselves with an available supply 172,000,000 bushels less than last year. With this condition it is no wonder that the market is so sensitive to black rust scares. The Canadian wheat is moving out rapidly and their visible supply is dwindling away.

Prices may settle back a few cents per bushel during the next six weeks, but in our opinion wheat is destined for a very much higher level.

SHANE BROS. & WILSON CO.

Spices.

The market is more active this week. Cables just in report a much firmer market, especially for pepper. The trading up until this week has been narrow. We now look for a large increase in demand. August and September needs will be large for the canning, pickling and preserving requirements.

Pepper.—Firmer abroad. Prices here are some little higher. We look for a further advance in price of all grades. Red pepper rather dull and unchanged in price. Demand fair.

Cloves.—Continue quiet and without change. In fair demand.

Pimento (Allspice).—We now hear reports of short crops.

Mace.—In fair average demand at unchanged prices.

Nutmegs.—In very much better demand. Prices are fluctuating and higher prices seem probable.

Cassias.—In fair inquiry at present. Prices steady, but unchanged. Demand for cassia should soon begin. Any unusual demand will have a tendency to raise values.

Gingers.—Generally quiet and unchanged in price.

Green Ginger Root.—In very active demand. There has been a scarcity lately. It looks like higher prices.

Paprika.—In fair demand, season considered. Prices are unchanged.

Seeds, Herbs, Etc.—Are in only fair demand at generally unchanged prices. Herbs are scarce and likely to be high over the summer and fall months.

McCORMICK & CO.
Baltimore, Md.

Rice.

Demand for the week has been only fair. Receipts are moderate and reflect in the main the reasonable prices ruling. Blue Rose sorts are firm, with an increasing demand especially for the uncoated finish, which are in scant supply. There is more inquiry for screenings, and prices thereon are unusually high. Honduras styles are only fairly assorted and prices are firm, with a strong undertone, indicating that values have reached "bottom" or "hard pan," and holders decline to make further concessions.

INVESTIGATE YOUR OWN BUSINESS!

WHEN asked for figures upon which to base their Income Tax, a number of firms were forced to make a careful investigation of their own business and were surprised by the facts.

¶ Some of them admitted that the investigation made it possible for them to avoid bankruptcy. They had time to remedy the evils which were ruining their business.

¶ You may make just such a discovery in your own business.

¶ The "Sperry" Service has proved to be a most practical and effective safeguard against the great business evil of "too much credit."

¶ You can never be very far in the dark regarding the state of your own affairs if the larger percentage of your business is on a cash basis. There is a wide difference between "volume" of business and "value" of business.

cept in spots where the merchants have been compelled to replenish stocks in order to have a fair assortment.

At New Orleans the clean rice market continues very steady, with a fairly good demand, prices being well maintained on all varieties.

In the Interior, Southwest Louisiana, Texas and Arkansas, the mills report that stocks are being gradually reduced and that they expect to enter "new crop" with very little carry-over. Reports on the growing crop continue very favorable.

Evaporated Apples, Etc.

Trading is very quiet on evaporated apples, but prices are firmly held on both spot and future goods. There is some movement of spot goods on small orders at 5½ cents per pound up, according to quality. Futures are firmly held at 5¾ to 6 cents for prime in 50-pound boxes. Some business was done early in the week at the first-named price. The export situation, however, keeps the volume of trading considerably below normal.

Imported Fish Specialties.

The salt fish situation remains practically the same as reported last week. Sales are restricted to hand-to-mouth business, and naturally limited by the very hot weather which we have been having. In the meanwhile, stocks of Scotch, as well as of Newfoundland herrings, are accumulating, most of them going into the ice house. The quality of those Newfoundland herrings is simply splendid. It is impossible to imagine a better cured and better eating fish, and there is no doubt in our opinion that all these fish will find a ready and very good market in the fall when the weather gets cooler. It will, of course, depend entirely upon the supplies that we shall get from abroad, but it is not likely that very large supplies will find their way here unless the war should be terminated.

Very little stockfish is expected here this season. The total quantity of roundfish prepared this season amounts to less than 3,000,000 fish, against nearly 14,500,000 prepared for roundfish last season, and of splitfish very little has been prepared, so if any stockfish will come it will be enormously high in price.

Norway reports a fair catch of very fine small summer sardines. Samples show excellent quality, but unfortunately the prices remain as high as ever, so it seems that the demand from the countries now at war continues and that European buyers are just as eager as before to secure all available supplies. The prices prevailing in Norway for these sardines are so high that only very limited quantities are being brought over here, prices being above buyers' ideas. Lots of American sardines packed in olive oil are being offered to the trade, but one may just as well compare a child's toy sail boat to a dreadnaught crossing the ocean than to compare those American smoked sardines with the Norwegian article. In Portugal the catch continues rather poor and unsatisfactory, prices continue high and supplies scarce. We have no definite reports in regard to the sardine catch in France, but no matter what they may catch, prices will be so high as to limit the sale of these French goods only to the fancy trade, and the quantities sold in this fashion do not cut any figure.

Retailers Agitated Over Chewing Gum Cut. Program Out for State Convention, August 7th to 10th. Weights and Measures Superintendent Attacks Trade Practices. Market Summary.

Special Correspondence of "Modern Merchant and Grocery World."

New York, July 21, 1916.

Many of the retail stores here are considerably agitated over the fact that the Liggett-Riker-Hegeman chain of drug stores have cut the life out of Wrigley's and Sterling chewing gum by including it in their 1-cent sale. They sell one package for 5 cents and give an extra one for 1 cent, making the actual price 6 cents for two packages, or 3 cents per package. This is practically below the average retailer's cost. There is talk about the appointment of a committee of retailers to take the matter up with the manufacturers.

The programme is out for the annual convention of the New York Retail Grocers' Association, which will be held at Ithaca August 7th to 10th. Fred. Mason, vice-president and general manager of the Shredded Wheat Co., is to be present and to make the principal address. This will occur on August 7th. Another important adddress will be by Henry Heins, of Brooklyn, on "Observance of the 10 O'clock Sunday Closing Law and the All-Day Sunday Closing."

* * *

John F. Farrell, Superintendent of the New York State Department of Weights and Measures, has issued a pamphlet to retail grocers during the week attacking certain practices which, he says, have sprung up in the retail trade—exaggerated advertisements, short weights, selling gross for net and other deceptive customs. Mr. Farrell particularly attacks the practice of selling by heap measure. He says that commodities that cannot be satisfactorily sold by stricken measure, that is, by giving a definite number of cubic inches to the bushel, quart or pint, should not be sold by dry measure at all, but by weight.

Summarized Market Conditions.

Tea steady and unchanged, with some holders making concessions. New Pingsueys have opened 2½ cents above last year.—Coffee somewhat improved, but still dull. Feeling in Brazil firmer. Milds very dull. Lower grades of coffee very dull and heavy.—Sugar unchanged both as to raw and refined. Still some cheap sugar about.—Dried fruits all dull, with prunes slightly easier. The balance of the line steady to firm.—Pink salmon firm and tending higher. All Alaska salmon firm; demand good.—Domestic sardines firm and rather scarce.—All canned vegetables, mainly tomatoes, corn and peas, steady to firm; moderate demand.—Wheat somewhat higher on account of bad crop reports.—Flour firm but tending higher and dull.

Getting Customers for Chain Stores.

Did you read that piece in the G. W. a month or so ago about a grocer that bought a lot of stuff cheap off the manager of a chain store that was next door to him? It was his scheme of beating the chain store and it wasn't so bad, was it? Except that it was a cinch that the manager was robbing his people, which maybe ain't the best thing to be mixed up with.

I've run across something that beats that. I got up against a grocer last week that can't say enough against the chain store, specially one that's only a couple of doors away from him, and yet he goes in there every day and borrows stuff that he's out of! How's that for high?

Gee, wouldn't you think he'd have too much pride to do a thing like that? Seems to me I'd starve to death before I'd blackguard a man behind his back and then go ask favors of him. That's being cheap to the limit!

However, this particular grocer would borrow of anybody. I don't know what in thunder's the matter with him. Sometimes I think he's plumb crazy. His business is slipping away from him over night. It ain't only the chain store that's taking it, but everybody else in the neighborhood.

He never seems to have what people want. To look at his stock it seems all right. His shelves ain't bare or anything like that. But I ain't been there once in the last six months, but somebody's come in for something that he's "just out of at the moment." That's his regular spiel, "just out of at the moment." He always agrees to get it, and does get it—borrows it all around the neighborhood.

I'll be blamed if I'd lend stuff to him all the time. I'd lend anybody once in a while. Everybody's likely to get in a hole. But as a regular thing—not on your life. If I had a store near that fellow, and was competing for the business, and I saw he was using me as a warehouse, he could go hang for all me. I don't believe anybody's called on to do a thing like that.

That's cutting a steak off your own rump, that's what that is.

And as for that chain store, I'd see him pickled before I'd lend a box of matches to a fellow that run me down like that.

I've heard that very grocer give that chain store the juiciest advertising it could ever have! Advertising that it couldn't buy with a peck of diamonds. He thought he was putting nails in its coffin. He was right about the nails and he was right about it being a coffin, but it was his instead of theirs.

And I've heard a whole lot of other grocers do the same thing. You wouldn't believe what chumps they are about that.

Here's something that happened right in the store I'm telling about. You know the chain stores are great people to sell Lea & Perrins sauce for 19 cents. There ain't one of 'em that don't do it, far as I know.

This grocer sees red whenever you mention a chain store. He's dippy about 'em—thinks they ought to be set on fire. (When he ain't borrowing of 'em). And he'll talk for an hour against the chain store to anybody who'll listen.

One day there was a woman in his store buying goods. I heard her give her order—there was a bottle of Lea & Perrins in it, that he always got a quarter for.

Some way he got started on the chain store while he was waiting on her. And in a minute he was on high gear, shooting along at 70 miles an hour.

"They're murderers, that's what those fellows are!" he said, "just plain murderers! They'll take a piece of goods and cut the life out of it, just to hurt us regular stores. If it wasn't for folks like you, Mrs. Simons, that stand by us, I don't know where we'd be. Why just to show you what they do, there's Lea & Perrins sauce. They sell that for nineteen cents! Just think of it—nineteen cents! Why I pay more than that for it! It's just a bait to get people in so they can stick 'em on something else. Why—"

"Do you mean that they sell the same sauce for 19 cents?" asked Ma Simons.

"The very same!" said this poor fish. "It's not right! I—"

"Well, if that's the case you cross that out of my order," said. "I've got to save all money I can. Just send me the of the things and I'll get the sa in there."

Could you blame her? The only one to blame and that's darned jackass that told her al it. She hadn't known anytl about that before!

That fathead got a new custo for a chain store, just by shoo off his fool mouth. Holy cats, it does make me mad!

It's all right to talk against chain store, if you've got anytl against it, but do it to wife.

The matter is you have flopped. You need shaking up. Your feet and legs ache because activity has stopped. Interest has waned. You're resting all over yourself and your main support is a tea bin. Lots of fellows get that way of their own accord, but it's blamed on the weather or the need of a "change," or worst of all, overwork.

The Ham Question

¶ More consumers are dissatisfied with the ham they get than with anything else in the grocer's line.

¶ Good ham is sweet, with a tangy saltiness, tender and close fleshed. Fried or broiled, it's as sweet as a nut, and if everybody could get that kind they'd eat ham ten times as often.

¶ The average ham is stringy and briny and tough. It doesn't suit it all, but by and by a lot of consumers come to believe all ham is like that.

¶ Vogt's Liberty Brand Hams are not like that. They are precisely the kind of hams we described in the second paragraph. It would be foolish to say this if it wasn't true, wouldn't it? You'll be glad you got in touch with Liberty Brand Hams and so will your customers.

ing the public sufficiently to protect it from being "shocked" by the transformation. The new system went into effect on July 1st. For many years the evil of returning goods to the stores, after giving them fair and unfair trials, has grown until it reached the point of an intolerable abuse. One of the large stores claims that it cost the concern $200,000 a year, and, of course, this loss has to be distributed eventually among the customers. Another Boston department store spent $10,000 last year on the single item of cleaning goods that had been sent out on trial and were returned by customers. In another instance it is reported that of the total sales for one day 20 per cent. represented goods that the customers returned later—these 20 per cent. being conditional sales made subject to approval after mature deliberation at home. The Boston stores now work under the following rules:—

Any article of merchandise which for some good reason is to be returned to a store, must be returned within a reasonable time—six business days.

No articles will be accepted for return unless they are substantially in their original condition; neither will merchandise of any kind which has been used or worn be accepted for return unless defective, or not as represented.

The sales check must accompany all returnable merchandise.

Gifts of all kinds (Christmas, wedding, birthday, etc.) if returned will be accepted only in exchange for other merchandise.

All goods cut from the piece at the request of the customer that would have remnant value only are returnable at one-third of purchase price.

Uniform tags will be used on articles bought with the privilege of returning. If such tag has been removed from an article it will not be accepted for return.

The following articles, for legal, sanitary or other reasons, cannot be exchanged or returned:—

Garments that have been altered for the purchasers and which are not salable. Shoes which have been altered, buttons reset, worn or damaged.

Combs, hair brushes and tooth brushes.

Hair goods and hair ornaments.

Rubber toilet articles.

A Letter to the Groceryman.

Everybody being out, and Bobbie and Dorothy having taken possession of their father's office, Bobbie proceeds to do business.

"You're my st'nogofer," he says to Dorothy. "Take this dictation." And Dorothy, at the typewriter, takes this letter:

"Mr. Groceryman: Send me and Dor two packages of Strawberry and two packages of Orange Jell-O and two packages of Raspberry Jell-O, and send real Jell-O and not that other kind."

"J-E-L-L-O"

That is a business-like letter and it shows for one thing, that Bobbie knows what he wants—"real Jell-O"—and doesn't want to take chances with anything else instead, as some other people do.

Jell-O is always put up in packages bearing the word JELL-O in big red letters on the front.

The grocer who sells Jell-O certainly has a chance to turn his Jell-O customers into very profitable customers, if the old saying is true that "A pleased customer is a good customer."

373.—Who Stands the Loss When Your Check is Raised?

In a recent article I discussed an exception to the rule that a bank that pays out a depositor's money on a forged check is liable for it. The exception was a case where the depositor had by some act of carelessness opened the way to the forgery.

The case brought forward by the following letter is somewhat different:—

New York, N. Y.

This firm is facing a very serious loss by reason of the defalcation of a confidential clerk, and I should like to have your opinion as to whether there is any way out of the mess, so that we can avoid the loss.

We have had a confidential clerk in our employ for several years. He did most of our everyday banking business, and made out checks to go out, which were signed by a member of the firm. He was taken sick recently and it became necessary to put a substitute on his books. He found out by accident that he had been for several months adopting a very simple method of raising checks. Each Friday we draw a certain sum of money for the office pay roll. He would make out the check for the correct amount, bring it to a member of the firm to sign and then take it to the bank himself to be cashed. Before he got to the bank he would raise the check an even hundred dollars, putting this in his pocket. When the bank returned the cancelled checks at the end of the month he would take out these raised checks and alter them back again to the proper amount. The defalcation will amount to about $4,000. Are we liable in this case or is the bank that paid out the money?

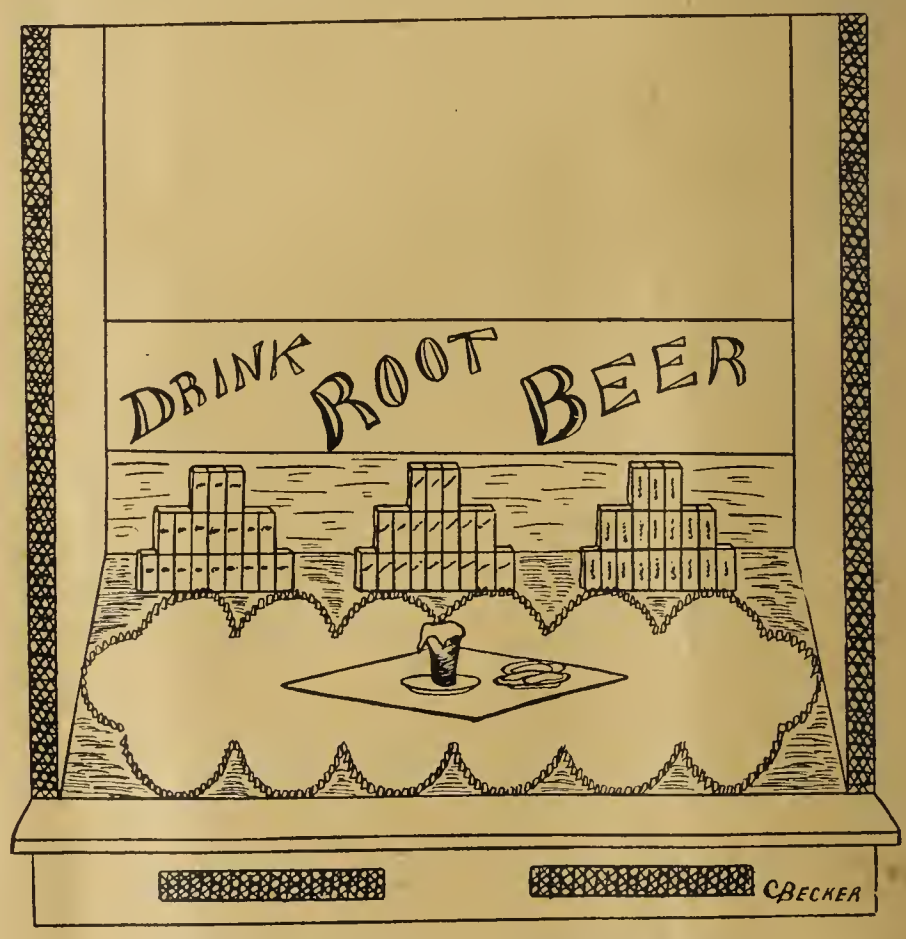
We have never used a check protector, so that the plan was easy. Needless to say, we shall use one from henceforth.

E. T. R. & Bros.

Upon such a state of facts as this, my judgment is that the bank that paid out this money is liable for every cent of it; that is, for the amount by which the checks were raised. The case is bound by the fundamental rule, before spoken of, that a bank is held to the very highest degree of care as to its depositor's money. It agrees to hold that money safely and to pay out only such sums as the depositor himself orders paid out. In the case cited above, it paid out $100 more each week than the depositor ordered paid out, and its absolute innocence in the matter does not relieve it from liability. There is no evidence in the above statement of facts that the depositor was himself negligent, and he would therefore have a right to demand that the bank pay him back every cent. The bank would have no defense, as I see it, for the following extract from a leading English case is the settled law practically everywhere. In this case the check had originally called for £3, and the clerk had raised it to £200:

The banker or the depositor of the customer's money is bound to pay from time to time such sums as the latter may order. If, unfortunately, he pays money belonging to the customer upon an order which is not genuine he must suffer, and to justify the payment he must show that the order is genuine, not in signature only, but in every respect. This was not a genuine order, for the customer never ordered the payment of the money mentioned in the check.

As I have before explained, banks always examine these cases with a microscope to see if they cannot convict the depositor of negligence. If they can, they are relieved, and the loss falls on the depositor. In the above case there was no negligence. The check when brought to the partner to sign was for the correct amount. When it got back to the partner at the end of the month, cancelled, it still called for the correct amount. Naturally there was no reason for suspicion.



But if the clerk had not been sharp enough or quick enough to alter the check the second time, and it had gotten to the partner, after cancellation, calling for $100 more than it should, and the partner had overlooked that, he would be guilty of negligence and the bank would almost certainly go free. For the law holds it to be a depositor's duty to examine the bank's statement and the cancelled checks, when they come back, and if anything is wrong, to promptly notify the bank, so that it will not make the same mistake again.

I have never yet had a case of this sort brought to me without finding some way in which the loss might have been avoided. Usually it is a very simple and very inexpensive way. In the case submitted to me an effective check protector would have stopped the whole thing. The partner would simply have had to make sure that the check was made out for the correct amount, and that the protector had been stamped in. No raising would then have been possible. This is so obvious that some day the courts are going to rule that the failure to use such complete protection is negligence. They have not taken this advanced position as yet, but I shall be surprised if they don't do it eventually.

Root Beer Display.

This makes a very neat display and is especially good at this season. This looks well done in two shades of green. First cover the bottom of the window with dark green crepe paper, then measure a width of light green crepe paper the length of the window, scallop the edge and place it on the dark green paper. Arrange corks around the edge of the scallops. In the center place a linen napkin and on this display a glass of root beer and a plate of Nabiscos or ladyfingers. Fill the glass almost to the top. Cut a round piece of pasteboard to fit over the top of the glass. Place some cotton on this to imitate foam or froth, pull one or two ends of the cotton so as to appear as if it were running over; the pasteboard is to keep the cotton free from touching the root beer. In the rear arrange pyramids of the different brands of extract. Run a width of the dark green crepe paper across the rear at the bottom and a width of the lighter shade above this. Letter in black as shown in illustration.

Domanskie owes me a bill of $26 for groceries. I had a suit brought against him and the case was tried before Squire McGill. The man was given to a certain date to pay the bill or put his property on constable's sale, but through the advice of the constable to wait for a couple of months until he paid his mortgage ($1,300). He has now taken a mortgage for $1,000 again and has done nothing in regards to paying me my money. I have notified the constable and I have not received a reply from either.

Mr. Smedley addressed the newly formed Lancaster Retail Grocers' Association on the evening of July 11th. The meeting was held at the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce and notwithstanding the heat, was well attended. This association is making rapid progress. It is establishing a credit rating and collection system, is planning for a full-page weekly advertisement in the daily newspaper to advertise the independent stores and will hold a big picnic at Hershey Park on August 16th.

The Lock Haven Business Men's Association automobile trip was a big success and was participated in by almost 100 of the members. Towns visited included Hemington, Mill Hall, Bellefonte, State College, Centre Hall, Penn's Cave, Milroy, Reedsville, Selins Grove, Sunbury, Danville, Bloomsburg, Milton, Lewisburg, Montgomery, Muncy, Montoursville, Jersey Shore and Williamsport.

Meetings were held at several of the towns and at Williamsport the tourists were entertained at a smoker and the Sunbury merchants provided a theatre party and luncheon. The trip enabled the business men to form many new acquaintances and to advertise Lock Haven most effectually.

Scranton Retail Merchants' Association has elected as delegates to the convention Wm. Farrell and Charles G. Rosar.

How One Town Fights Flies.

The town of Merrill is to have a "Fly Week." A committee has offered prizes for the best fly traps made by the boys of the city or others who are interested. A first prize of $5, a second prize of $3 and a third prize of $2 have been offered. The traps may be made of any combination of material suited for the purpose. A committee has been selected to judge the traps and award prizes. The traps will be located where the flies gather in large numbers and the traps catching the most will receive the above prizes.

BURK'S

Meat Loaf

SEASONABLE THROUGHOUT THE YEAR

Composed entirely of fine selected meats—contains no flour or cereals. Baked fresh daily in loaves of about six pounds.

Makes a quick and delicious breakfast sliced and fried in a little butter.

Can also be served cold for luncheon, cut in thin slices or warmed in the oven in one piece to take the place of a roast.

BURK'S

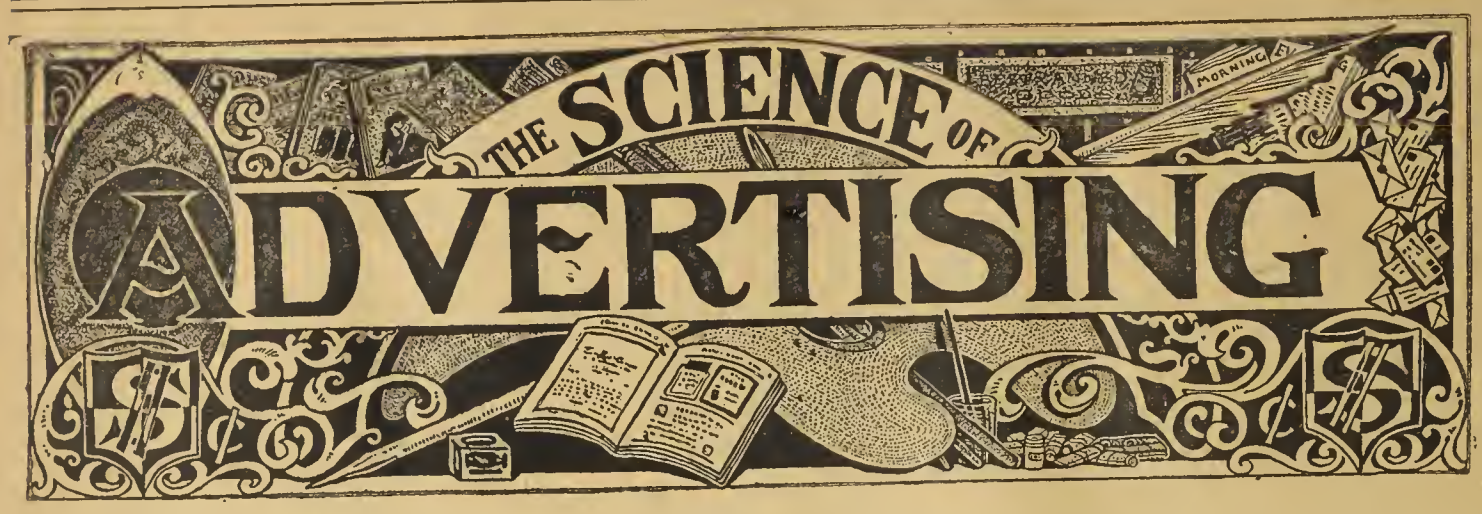
Lunch Roll

(Copyrighted)

SUBSTITUTE FOR BOILED HAM

Composed of lean, tender pieces of pork, mildly cured, stuffed in linen container and boiled.

Far superior and more delicious than boneless boiled ham, being juicy, mild and sweet; also less expensive and not near so wasteful—in fact no waste at all. Much finer in texture and just as easily sliced, or more so, as this can be done in a slicing machine.



The cover is readily removed by cutting the seam and then stripping off the sack as the roll is consumed. This prevents it becoming dry and is a sanitary feature that appeals to the consumer, as it keeps the product clean while displayed on the counter and untouched by hand while slicing, a vast improvement as compared with handling the greasy, unprotected boneless boiled ham.

MEAT LOAF and LUNCH ROLL were originated by us, now imitated by others, but none equal to Burk's, which are prepared from only the choicest materials.

Remember the old saying, "A friend in need is a friend indeed." Who was your friend in need? I mean when you needed credit. When your husband was out of work or on short time or away from home. Who was your lean post? The same post will stand by you all the time. But play fair. The store that you pay cash and carry your things home will turn their back to you the first time you are short a dime on your purchase. Just try and convince yourself. We will charge to any person that can prove himself worthy. When you pay your bills, no matter how fresh or stale they are, we will give you S. & H. Green Stamps. We solicit and deliver to all parts.

If Mr. Mann would advertise everything in about the same persuasive way he advertises his "Extra Special" at the top, I feel sure he would get better results only now but in the future. I don't deny that price-list advertising can get business, sometimes it can get a great deal, but obviously it is business done on price alone, which is the kind of business anybody can do. Never forget that anybody can sell goods, if he'll sell them cheap enough. It takes a merchant to sell them at a profit.

I believe that Mr. Mann can give his advertising a better appearance if he would change its make-up a little. I shouldn't break it in two in the middle like that; it is confusing. As a matter of fact I thought at first that his advertisement was simply the small paragraph at the top, with the name and address. I believe it would be a good thing for him to adopt as his advertising trade name, the single word "Mann's." That would stamp the advertising with an individuality, and would save some space. He might arrange it something like this, and use it both top and bottom if he likes:—

MANN'S

921-923 W. Third Street

I should also have the printer use a different type for the body of the advertisement. He has used the same type that he uses for the text of his paper, which is apt to submerge the advertisement in the bulk of the paper and lose it. It ought to stand out, not only on account of the way it is designed, but on account of the very type used in it. It is a good thing to give a border to an advertisement like this, that consists of a mass of closely set type.

NOTE.—This department is devoted to the criticism of advertising matter sent in, to the devising of new advertising ideas for special occasions, upon request, and to the suggesting of original advertisements when data is supplied. All communications sent for this Department should be addressed to the Editor of Science of Advertising. They will be taken up in strict rotation.

Court Issues Injunction Against Baking Powder Fake.

The United States District Court for the District of North Dakota has granted an injunction against Food Commissioner Ladd, of North Dakota, prohibiting him from condemning Calumet baking powder on the ground that it is a fraud. In the opinion, however, the court rather mercilessly roasts the Calumet Baking Powder Co.'s scheme of putting white of eggs in its powder and prohibits the company from using the fake water glass test by which it has falsely impressed thousands of consumers in the past. The following is from the opinion:—

> The Calumet Baking Powder Co. is a large manfuacturer of baking powder. In its product it inserts 15-100 of 1 per cent. of dried white of egg. This substance serves no useful purpose in the leavening quality of the powder, or in any article of food in which baking powder is used. Its sole object is to adapt's plaintiff's powder to the so-called "water glass test." The leavening property of baking powder consists of carbon dioxide gas. This is given off by all such powders when they are brought in contact with water. In dough the gas is sufficiently confined to cause the dough to rise. If, however, water alone is added to the powder, the gas is given off, and quickly escapes into the air unless some element is present to confine it. That is the object of egg albumen. It forms a thin, viscous layer, which confines the gas.
> The so-called water glass test consists in mixing two teaspoonsful of baking powder in a like quantity of water in an ordinary water glass. When this is done the gas is given off, the mixture foams and rises in the glass. In the case of baking powders which contain no egg albumen, a larger part of the gas escapes, and the mixture quickly collapses. In the case of baking powders which contain egg albumen, a thin, viscous film is formed on the surface by which the gas is confined, and the expanding mixture is made to register in the glass the quantity of gas contained in the powder.
> The addition of the egg albumen enables plaintiff and its salesmen and demonstrators to use the water glass test. This test does not show that plaintiff's baking powder is any better than it is in fact, but it does make it possible to cause all baking powders which do not use white of egg to appear, in comparison with plaintiff's powder, to be less efficient than they are. This is due to the fact that in plaintiff's baking powder the gas is confined by the egg albumen, whereas in other baking powders it is permitted to escape. Plaintiff's trade literature shows that it has made use of this fact for purposes of deception. This has not been accidental. On the contrary, salesmen and demonstrators are urged in the books put forth by plaintiff for their guidance, to use the water glass test for the very urpose of accomplishing this deception. Instructions are specific as o how that result may be attained. Plaintiff's trade literature has been mproved to some extent of late in his particular, but I am convinced y the evidence that plaintiff and its gents have in the past made use of he water glass test for the purposes f deception and fraud. It is because the presence of white of egg makes this imposition possible that Professor Ladd, as Food Commissioner, has condemned baking powders containing that element.

In spite of the above, the court finds that the addition of white of egg is not technically in violation of the law, but it forbids any more use of the fake test.

"Free Service Bureau for Retailers" ıe Interesting Plan Which Some Jobbers Have Launched to Help the Retailer Sell More Goods and at the Same Time Make the Jobber Stronger. Retailer Helped at Every Point.

Twenty-four wholesalers located St. Joseph, Mo., have organized at they call the "Free Service reau for Retailers" which is inesting enough to warrant some ention. We have received a nmunication from W. C. Griffith, rector, transmitting a statement arding the work of the Bureau. short, its work is to help retail- sell more goods and thus engthen the wholesaler's position the scheme of trade. Work of same kind is contemplated for coming fall by the organization Philadelphia wholesale grocers own as the Philadelphia League Wholesale Grocers.

Jobbers in all lines are members the Bureau. Particular attention given to helping retailers meet the il-order problem. Mail-order ods are bought and shown in the reau's offices side by side with ods sold regularly at retail in al stores. Printed matter inded to show retailers how to imve their condition in all sorts of ys is regularly issued to the rers of the territory. Besides s, special inquiries for advice and istance are answered. Here are ıe samples of the latter:—

I want to hold a clearance sale f seasonable goods that will bring ıe people in and have no bad fter-effects.

I want a display ad. for our telehone book that will call attention my stores in —— and —— and ring business to both of them.

Who has the selling agency for ıe Blank shoes now? I have some nes of these shoes, and want to ll up the lines so I can advertise ıem.

Our business is going down hill, ıd we don't seem to be able to op it. What shall we do?

We are going to run a half-page l. in the local paper. Will you fix ıe up, mentioning, etc.

Our 9-cent sale fell down last eek because of the rain. Shall e try it again, or some new stunt?

What kind of a bookkeeping sysm would you suggest for my siness?

We have no newspaper to adverse in, and want to get out form letters every week to educate the farmers to come to our store and get better prices.

What can you do to help a milliner? My busy season ends before my bills are paid. I have a good stock on hand. How can I turn stock into money to meet my bills?

We have changed from long-time credit to cash basis and want your help to stick to it.

I want to remove my produce department to the rear, so I can unload at the back door. Please suggest an arrangement.

I have $10,000 capital. How should I apportion my stock?

Over 700 merchants have visited the headquarters of the Bureau since it opened its doors. These visitors have been met by the Director and various members of the Advisory Board. Close attention has been given their personal needs. Advice has been offered. Suggestions have been made. Discussions of ideas brought to light by the Bureau in its contact with retail merchants the territory over were indulged in. The information collected has made it possible to furnish "mail-order" comparisons, ideas for sale bills, newspaper advertisements, window trimming, card writing, store arrangement, bookkeeping methods, cash to credit plans, premiums, trading stamps, rebates, how to handle merchandise, how to take inventory, how to figure overhead, how to interest the farmer, etc.

The jobbing houses that are supporting the Bureau are very enthusiastic about the results achieved thus far. When the two months of tryout had expired, they gladly renewed their subscriptions for another ten months. The best test of the efficiency of the Board is that merchants are buying more goods. The jobbing business of St. Joseph is the best it has been for ten years. Plans are under way for the extension of the service. A correspondence course for clerks is contemplated, and many other ideas.

Get Higher Prices for Eggs!

If the eggs you ship your commission man were all perfect wouldn't you get higher prices?

Your shipper protects himself by "candling." Heretofore this has required an expensively built "dark room," but now makes it possible to candle in broad daylight and at very small cost. The man who buys only a few dozen a day not only needs to candle but can do so with the Grant machine. The loss you now take on a few cases will pay for a Grant Candler.

Shippers are tearing out their costly dark rooms and installing the Grant. All you need is the machine. It makes its own "dark room" anywhere. Write us about how many cases you buy and we will give you some valuable information that will help you get higher prices. We make seven styles suitable for every purpose. Ask for catalogue.

GRANT MFG. CO., 234 Broadway, KOKOMO, IND.

The Subscribers' Bargain List

Have you got any goods you don't want? Anything—canned goods, groceries, hardware, dry goods, anything at all that's in good condition, but won't sell for you.

If you will make a price on it we can possibly sell it for you in a hurry. Write us about it, stating the quantity, condition and your best price. You might give the original cost, too. We will give it a key number and offer it to our 4,000 subscribers. Your name will not appear unless you want it to. All sales ought to be on a cash basis.

The point is that what won't sell for you may be in everday demand for somebody else, who will be glad to get your stock of it at a bargain.

There will be no charge for this service anywhere—we do it to help along.

that breaks all cereal precedents, that astonishes the oldest inhabitant by showing an unbroken record of increasing sales from year to year—

Shredded Wheat

That's because it is made right, is sold right and represents the best process ever discovered for making the whole wheat grain digestible in the human stomach.

The Biscuit is packed in odorless spruce wood cases which may be easily sold for 10 or 15 cents, thereby adding to the grocer's profits.

Don't Sell Unprofitable Wheat Cereals

Every grocer must sell at least one wheat cereal. Some wheat cereals actually cost him money to sell, instead of paying a profit.

Wheatena is the best wheat cereal made—the most carefully made—and has always paid the retailer a good profit. Merchandise which is at the same time good and profitable is the only kind to sell.

Criticising a Retailer's Business Stationery

This Paper Gives Its Views on the Proper Way to Set a Merchant's Bill-Head and Letter-Head and What to Put on Them—From Samples Submitted.

The "Modern Merchant and Grocery World" has received a request from a Pennsylvania subscriber that we criticise his business stationery—letter-heads and bill-head:—

Swengel, Pa., July 18, 1916.

"Modern Merchant and Grocery World,"
Philadelphia, Pa.

Gentlemen:—Will you kindly criticise this and the inclosed letter and bill heads in your advertising department of the "Modern Merchant and Grocery World"?

Think we might as well send you one of our mimeographed letters that we send out weekly to our customers and leave you tear this to pieces at the same time.

We can ourselves see considerable room for improvement and this is always true after stencil is cut and the "proof" is before us.

We would be especially pleased to have your suggestions as to how to improve the appearance of the letter and billheads.

Yours truly,
W. L. Burd & Co.

Two letter-heads and a bill-head are sent, and for the general good we reproduce them here, in somewhat reduced size, make such comments on them as occur to us, and present them reset by an expert job printer on the same scale of size:—

Sample No. 1.

W. L. BURD & CO.,

HAY, GRAIN, SEEDS, CASH DEALERS IN GENERAL MERCHANDISE, COAL, CEMENT, MYERS PUMPS.

Swengel, Pa., July 18,16

The type in which this is set is not considered a very good type for letter-heads, and it should never have been combined with the type in which "Cash Dealers in" is set. More than this, it is very clumsily arranged. We present our revision here:—

Bell and 59-7 ESTABLISHED 1891

Swengel, Pa., July 18, '16

Swengel, Pa., ... 191 ..

The trouble with this is that it is half a circular and half a letter-head. There ought not to be any advertising on a letter-head—it is not for that purpose. Many large merchants who take pride in their business stationery have nothing on their letter-heads but their name, address and date line. We should leave everything off this letter-head except the name of the firm, the lines "cash dealers in General Merchandise" and the date line. If it was considered important to put "we Buy" and "we Sell" on the letter-head—although we should leave it off—we should put it in the form of two long lines of small type running clear across the street, at the bottom of the letter-head. That is often done and does not detract from its appearance.

We do not reset this letter-head, as there would apparently be no reason for having more than one letter-head in a business of this kind.

National Canners Laboratory Says Ten-Cent Canned Goods Will Have to Go to Fifteen Cents.

High Cost of Sugar Responsible. Argues It Will Be a Good Thing, Because the Retail Margin of Such Goods Has Been Too Small for Some Time.

The National Canners' Laboratory of the National Canners' Association has issued a statement predicting that owing to the high cost of sugar the retail price of most canned and bottled products which have been retailing at 10 cents, would have to be advanced to 15 cents. The Laboratory expresses the opinion that this would be a good thing. Following is a portion of its statement:—

> The price of sugar has now soared upward to a point where every extra pound used in the manufacture of food products means an increase in the cost of production. Sugar is one of the most expensive ingredients used in condiments, and any increase in the price of this commodity throws the cost prices entirely out of balance. It is pretty hard to keep the price of manufacture low enough to offer different condiments so they can be sold for 10 cents retail. Of course, if the retail price could be advanced to 15 cents that would give leeway for any increase in the price of sugar.
> Some manufacturers reduced the size of their 10-cent packages in order to realize a profit as sugar was advancing, but sugar has kept on advancing, so that the manufacturing cost is now a very serious matter. I predict that a great many condiments which have previously been selling at 10 cents retail will have to be advanced to 15 cents—there is no way out of it; they simply cannot be manufactured so that a profit can be realized otherwise.
> If you could ever induce the masses to pay 15 cents for packages that are now selling for 10 cents the whole industry would be benefited. The margins have been entirely too close heretofore, even when sugar was as low as 5 cents per pound. There was an inducement to cheapen the product in other respects and not offer the quality that would really be a credit to the manufacturer. With the retail price at 15 cents, however, the manufacturer would have every inducement to improve his quality, using only the very best ingredient entering into the formula.
> Unless there is some relief there must be an increase in the retail price of nearly every kind of condiments that have previously been sold at retail at 10 cents. To be sure, the amount of sugar can be cut down so that very little is used in formulas, and every kind of package can be sterilized by heat so that it will keep as long as the seal holds, but that is as far as it will go.

Where Courtesy Comes In, in Selling Groceries

Two Clerks Who Got Prizes for Answering This Question From Their Own Experience. The System of a Girl Clerk Who Took Telephone Orders. The Man Clerk Who Worked Himself Up to the Highest Salary in His Town.

A well known magazine has just held a contest for the best papers on "Why It Pays to be Courteous." Two of the prize winners, oddly enough, were grocery clerks. The winner of the second prize was a woman and the winner of the third prize was a man.

We cannot reproduce both of their contributions, though they are worth it, but both supply more evidence that a recent statement by this paper was true—that the cheapest thing in the world is courtesy and the most effective, and that the merchant who has it can get by with very little business ability. The woman clerk was employed to take orders over the telephone and this is part of what she says:—

I soon learned that the average woman, with the burden of housekeeping on her shoulders, is the most irritable and unreasonable creature alive. A delivery ten minutes late can bring on your head a mighty wrath; a wilted lettuce can lose you your best customer. I had to stand between these women and overworked delivery boys, careless shipping clerks, and sometimes inferior goods.

One instance: A woman was to give a dinner party. Her groceries arrived almost at the last minute, with the fish order filled incorrectly. "My dinner is spoiled," she cried distractedly, over the telephone. "I never will spend another cent with you as long as I live." I shouldered the responsibility and persuaded her to bear with me until I could rectify the mistake. It took much soothing; a hint of irritation on my part would have spoiled everything. As it was, fifteen minutes later a messenger boy was delivering the fish at her door. We had kept our customer and made a lasting friend.

Soon I had a small private office next to the senior manager's, with two telephones all my own, and an individual speaking tube to the shipping department. My customers refused to give their orders to anyone else, and I found the readiness with which women responded to courtesy almost pathetic. In a few months my salary of $6 a week had stretched into $85 a month, which was at that time a very generous salary for a woman in the South.

The man clerk said he had been in a retail grocery store for almost ten years, and had learned that courtesy is the greatest asset a retail store can have, and it costs nothing." Here is a part of his experience:—

When I began working I resolved to make myself the best clerk in our town. I immediately saw that courtesy would help me to reach my goal quicker than any other one thing I could practice.

So I treated everyone that came into our store with all the courtesy I could command. Rich or poor, high or low, white or black, received the same attention from me. I gave everybody a hearty "Good morning" or "afternoon," as the case might be, when they came in. If I was waiting upon another customer I told them I would wait upon them next. I acknowledged every purchase with a "Thank you. Call again," whether it was a penny or a $10 sale, man, woman or child.

If a lady arrived at my counter with several bundles I suggested that I wrap them all together. If customers were from the country and had their rig hitched near by, I helped them out with their goods.

One day an elderly gentleman came into our store and purchased a number of items and I asked him if his rig was near; he told me it was, so I helped him with his goods. This was the first time I had ever seen him in our store, but it was not the last, for from that time on he was a regular visitor and his business amounts to quite a sum in a year's time. Each time he comes, I help him with his purchases. One day his wife came in, and she told me that her husband liked to trade with our store because we always helped him and that the place he had formerly been trading did not.

I meet all customers as soon as they enter. I drop whatever else I may be doing, unless waiting upon another customer. I give them my undivided attention. It matters not how unreasonaby exacting they may be, I try to give the impression that nothing is too much trouble if it will please. I try to bear in mind that for the moment the customer whom I am waiting upon is the only person on earth.

Through this method I won one customer for our store whose business amounts to over $1,200 per year. But it has paid me to be courteous, as I am now receiving more salary than any other grocery clerk in our city, barring none, and it has paid my employers, for many an extra dollar has been taken in.

The reader of the above will probably say, "of course we know that. Tell us something new." This is new to a very large number of retailers, judging by the careless, brusque, unaccommodating way in which they treat their customers. Without doubt there are men in the retail business who do not clearly know what courtesy is. They think that anything short of slapping a customer's face is courtesy.

What is courtesy? It is that warm and friendly manner of speech and conduct that creates in another person the feeling that "he evidently likes me," or "he evidently likes to wait on me." It is worth its weight in gold to anybody, particularly to a merchant or a clerk. Courtesy has sold more goods than any other quality on earth.

We Are Not Outgrowing Our Food Supply.

It can be said "with much definiteness," according to the Committee on Statistics and Standards of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, that the direful conclusions so generally drawn that the growth of population in this country is in greater ratio than the supply of food products, are distinctly unwarranted. This committee, of which A. W. Douglas, of St. Louis, is chairman, does not believe the time is fast approaching when we shall no longer be a self-contained nation as regards material substance. It cannot see the prospect of the United States depending upon outside countries for our very existence. From the production of the leading cereals and tubers, according to the committee, during the last fifty years, it is claimed that while the population increased about 200 per cent. during that period, the production of wheat increased 560 per cent., corn 270 per cent., oats 475 per cent, barley 2,000 per cent., Irish potatoes 250 per cent., and rice over 3,000 per cent.

Why Waste Time?

The following from "Success," under the head "Why Men Fail," arouses much irritation:—

> Business is a science. Men who study it as a science, succeed. Men who trifle with it, fail. It is reassuring to be told that success is not luck, but logic. The man who reasons, and adapts his business to reason, wins. Business failure, in most instances, comes from wanton disregard of principles that are only common sense. Men fail because they do things in the wrong way.

Why waste time trying to tell why men fail? You can never get anywhere, so far as laying down a criterion or rule is concerned, because men fail for a thousand reasons. Some are doubtless sent into the world to fail; others fail deliberately. Plenty of men succeed though they violate every fundamental business principle, while others fail though they observe every convention. Most of the talk on the subject is wind.

Protection to Outside Peddlers.

The exasperating protection which the law gives to peddlers from another State is seen in a brief item appearing in another column, reporting a decision by the courts of Somerset County, Pa., that a peddler licensing ordinance passed by the borough of Boswell, Somerset County, is unconstitutional. Boswell thought it would put a crimp in the peddlers that came in and stole the trade of its local merchants. It passed an ordinance taxing all peddlers and agents who come in from outside, from $1 to $50, according to the character of business done. One Lambert, representing a Michigan manufacturer of toilet articles, came in and took a lot of orders, having the goods shipped into Pennsylvania from Michigan. The Boswell borough authorities pounced on him with great glee and fined him $25 for not paying the tax. He showed fight and the court now holds that the ordinance was invalid because it was an attempt to tax interstate commerce. This has always been the law and doubtless always will be until the fundamental law is changed. Any concern that sells through agents or peddlers can always defeat the efforts of local municipalities to tax them, merely by operating in other States than their own.

The Way of the World.

It has always been the way of the world that the innocent must suffer for the sins of the guilty. Nowhere is this truer than in mercantile life. For the acts of a few crooks the Government finds it necessary to pass all manner of stringent regulations tying everybody up. Sometimes the innocent merchant benefits from these regulations, as in the case of the food laws. They were adopted because dishonest dealers lied and cheated, but nevertheless they have been a particularly fine thing for the honest dealer.

Another instance is just transpiring in New York City, where a most remarkable regulation has been made by the State Department of Foods and Markets. After September 1st every cold storage egg sold out of its original unbroken package must have "cold storage" stamped on its shell. Think of the tremendous bother and expense of that! The Commissioner of the above department admits this, but says that so many retailers have defrauded consumers by manipulating cold storage signs so they wouldn't be noticed, that in the interest of the public he simply had to adopt the new safeguard. The great majority of New York grocers are honest. They have doubtless sold cold storage eggs scrupulously according to law, but because a comparatively few have not, they are involved in this nuisance.

How can this be helped? Probably it cannot be, under present conditions, but before we are dead there may be legislation prohibiting a merchant who has cheated his customers twice from continuing in business.

Let Your Clerks Read This.

Of the giving of advice to clerks there is no end. Most of it is given by men who have never been clerks themselves, and who would have made an awful fist of it if they had been. Occasionally, however, somebody hands out a real good suggestion which is worth posting up. Here is one regarding clerks' reading. It is from the pen of an employee of Butler Bros., who writes under the name of "The Inspector":

> And so, young man, you think your career is going to be ruined through your lack of education—the kind of education that is gained in schools.
> Well, nobody with real good sense is going to say that an abundance of book larnin' is not a highly essential thing these days. But just because a person couldn't or wouldn't go to school enough is no reason why he should limp along through life not knowing the things he should know.
> Abraham Lincoln wouldn't be kept down through the lack of school facilities. They even wouldn't give him a light to study by at night or any paper to write on. He had to walk miles for his books—and got precious few books at that. Yet we know what Abraham Lincoln did.
> When Cato was eighty years old he took a notion that he needed a knowledge of Greek. So he laid to and learned it. Socrates did the same thing with Latin when he was old. Gladstone was eighty-three years old when he was prime minister of England, and yet he found time to gratify his lifelong desire to attain a working knowledge of Greek.
> Doesn't it make you a little bit ashamed as you note these facts, to say that you have "no time" in which to improve your mind so you may be a better clerk or a better merchant?
> There is just one thing these days that keeps a man in a retail store from knowing what he should know to get the very most out of life and business. This is HIS OWN LAZINESS.
>
> Here is a tip for you, young man. If it is wrong, never take another one from me.
> READ!
> Read and study these business books I have just spoken of. Read a good newspaper every day. Read one or two good magazines. Oh, yes, there are SOME good magazines. Read at least one GOOD book a month. By a good book I don't mean any silly, sickening love story that might be entitled "The Mistakes of Mary," or something of that kind. If you want a little fiction now and then read Kipling, Dickens, Tolstoy, Hugo, and other old masters.
> If you develop your mind to a point that will enable you to adjust yourself to conditions, you will rise. There is no man on earth that can keep you down.

This is fine! From my own observation I believe it can be laid down as a rule with almost no exceptions, that the clerk who reads systematically and intelligently will attain to any reasonable ambition he sets for himself. But there is no time-waster like unintelligent reading.

Jacksonville (Fla.) Retailers Want Their Papers Patronized by Outside Manufacturers.

Local Association Adopts a Resolution Contending That Manufacturers Who Sell Florida People Ought to Advertise in Florida Papers. "You Tickle Me and I'll Tickle You."

The Jacksonville (Fla.) Retail Grocers' and Butchers' Association have taken a broad and advanced attitude in the matter of advertising proprietary goods to consumers, which will probably attract attention all over the country. The association has adopted a resolution suggesting to the many manufacturers whose goods its members handle that instead of doing all of their advertising in the magazines, none of which are published in Jacksonville, that the manufacturers do some advertising in the Jacksonville papers. This for two reasons: First to come more closely in contact with the people of Jacksonville; and second, to contribute to the prosperity of the Florida people by patronizing their institutions.

Following is the resolution adopted:—

> Whereas, It has been noted that manufacturers outside of the city and State who sell their commodities to the citizens of this community through the brokers, wholesalers and retail dealers of this city hold it as their general practice to advertise such commodities chiefly through periodical and other publications, resident elsewhere, published elsewhere and contributing nothing to the prosperity of this city and State; and
> Whereas, It stands to reason that home papers, by the frequency of their publication, by the confidence reposed in them by the local citizens, by the reasonableness of their rates as compared to the publications referred to above, constitute not only the most effective medium for advertising purposes, but are beyond a doubt best calculated to exploit new articles and create new wants as well as to stimulate the sale of commodities that already ve been exploited and advertised rough the periodicals and publi- tions issued outside the city and ate; now, therefore, be it Resolved, That we, the retail gro- rs and butchers of Jacksonville, in ssion assembled, request and urge e co-operation of the brokers and holesalers of this city in procur- g the advertising of commodities ld locally to some measure at ast in our local publications and pers, thus promoting the interests the business men and industries Jacksonville.

eller Can Refuse to Sell Anybody.

efusal to sell on personal grounds is not a restraint of interstate merce which is punishable by law, rding to a ruling issued by the Fed- Trade Commission. The ruling as ished by the Commission reads:—

On application for the issuance a complaint, it was alleged that corporation engaged in the manu- cture and sale of goods in inter- ate commerce refused to sell to e applicant certain commodities anufactured by it. It was further leged that this refusal to sell was ade at the direction of an officer the corporation complained of, ho was also the president of nother corporation competing with e applicant. On investigation it peared that the refusal to sell was ade on personal grounds and was t made for the purpose and did t have the effect of restraining in- rstate commerce. Held: That a fusal to sell, made solely for per- nal reasons, without the purpose effect of restraining interstate mmerce, is not a violation of any w which the Commission is au- norized to enforce.

Something About the Cakes of the Five-and-Ten-Cent Stores

Six Samples Bought at Two Stores, Kresge's and Woolworth's. Kresge Samples Fair Quality and Sold Close. Woolworth Samples Very Poor and Yield a Better Profit.

Touching the question raised last week—why can 5-and-10-cent stores sell cakes and crackers so much cheaper than regular retailers think they can sell them, the "Modern Merchant and Grocery World" has bought samples of crackers and cakes from two 5-and-10-cent stores during the week—Woolworth's and Kresge's, both large and typical chain stores of the 5-and-10-cent type.

At the store of S. S. Kresge, 931 Market street, Philadelphia, three samples of crackers were bought, each costing 5 cents per half pound, or 10 cents a pound. They were "Elk lunch crackers," "old Abe," and "lemon bars," all of types well known to the trade. They were examined by an expert and pronounced to be of fair quality. An average wholesale price for the first and the third would be 9 cents a pound, although the Kresge concern, by quantity purchases, probably get them for somewhat less. The second sample is fairly priced at wholesale at 7½ to 8 cents.

From which it can be seen that the 5-and-10-cent store is probably making some money on its crackers and cakes even at 10 cents a pound. At least, on these particular brands. Its expenses are low and probably every 5-cent sale of these particular crackers yields a net profit of about ½ cent.

At the Woolworth store, 1020 Market street, three samples of a different character of cakes were purchased. These were fancy cakes of the marshmallow type. They too retailed at 5 cents per half pound or 10 cents a pound. According to the expert who examined them, they were poor—to use his own words, "I wouldn't want to give them to anybody to eat." No conscientious retailer would care to sell them. A fair wholesale price for good cakes of this type would be 13 to 14 cents. These probably would not cost the small buyer more than 10 cents, and it is probable that Woolworth got them for around 8 cents. He too is making some money, but apparently is not giving the quality. The Kresge store, on the other hand, is selling a fair grade of goods.

AMONG THE TRADE.

The Girard Grocery Co. rendered its annual report to its stockholders last Monday. The year's business amounted to $2,421,000, which was an increase of $400,000 over the year before. The company made 19 per cent. on its capital of $200,000, but declared a dividend of only 8 per cent., and put the rest to surplus. The Retail Grocers' Association will give a particularly elaborate food show in Horticultural Hall March 5th to 12th next.

The retailers who spend the least for advertising, and get the best results from it, are those who simply tell the people that they sell goods which some manufacturer, by his advertising, has made them want.

Retailers' advertising like that is simply telling people what they want to know. Advertising of unknown brands is very far from that.

Each Cold Storage Egg Must Be Shell-Marked After September 1st. Cans Advance Again. Gasoline Starts Long-Expected Decline. Expert Predicts No Lower Sugar This Summer. Market Summary.

Special Correspondence of "Modern Merchant and Grocery World."

New York, July 28, 1916.

After September 1st next, the State Department of Foods and Markets will adopt a revolutionary means to protect the consumers of this city against being sold cold storage eggs as fresh eggs. On and after the date named every cold storage egg offered for sale in other than the original unbroken packages must have "cold storage" printed on its shell in plain letters at least an eighth of an inch high. An order to that effect has been issued by the Commissioner of the State Department. The Commissioner admits that this is going to be a tremendous nuisance for retailers, but justifies it on the ground that a number of frauds were practiced by retailers, who arranged their cold storage signs so that the consumers were not properly advised of the character of what they were getting.

The American Can Co. has advanced cans again this week. This time $6 a thousand, while some manufacturers have advanced $10 a thousand. If the canners had to pay this advance it would obviously make a difference in their cost of 7 to 12 cents a dozen, but most canners have their cans bought and therefore the advance will not amount to very much at this season, any way.

The European war has affected no food product more remarkably than it has affected sugar. In July, 1914, when the war broke out, granulated sugar was greatly depressed, the refiners were cutting prices among themselves and the average price to the retailer was 4⅓ cents per pound. Within a month, as soon as it developed that foreign countries would have to come here for their sugar, the price advanced 2 cents, and although there was subsequently a reaction, the price has continued to advance until to-day, as the trade know, the quotation is 7.65 cents. Coffee also started to advance, but there were no basic conditions to warrant it and the price reacted again, and in the last few weeks the market has lost practically every trace of its former firmness.

The market for gasoline has taken a small tumble here and is expected to go still lower in the very near future The Standard Oil Co. has dropped its price 1 cent a gallon, and other companies are expected to follow immediately. Crude oil is on the verge of decline in most Eastern markets, it is said, as production is now greater than consumption. The over-production has been caused by the extraordinary activity in drilling, and the unfavorable weather has resulted in an accumulation of gasoline.

Merrick P. Willett, the sugar market expert, does not expect refined sugar to decline this summer. He thinks the demand during August will probably be too heavy. Here is a statement he has issued on the subject:—

This appears to bear out our opinion that the majority of grocers in the country would soon be short of supplies. They have held back as long as possible, feeling that prices were too high, and that what goes up must come down, as it did last fall. But conditions are quite different this year, as there is no such surplus supply in the world, as there was last fall and grocers have apparently now, as a whole, waited so long that there is good prospect that they will all wish to buy at once in order to fill their immediate needs.

There is, therefore, every indication that it will not be many days now, August 1st at latest, before a general and good demand for refined sugar will begin. As it is entirely impossible for refiners to supply such a demand, without becoming oversold and backward in deliveries, it would seem as if grocers who have insufficient supplies for the next four weeks would do well to place their withdrawal and new orders at once before the rush comes.

By waiting they merely increase the danger of an overdemand, which enables refiners to rapidly advance prices in the same manner as in February, 1915, and 1916, and in November, 1915. In fact, there is nothing else that refiners can do, as they should buy raws to cover the sales of refined, and, with the present small margin in world supplies, the minute they buy over a week's meltings of raws, within one week, planters will rapidly advance prices. By buying moderately and at short intervals the net advance is not likely to be nearly as great.

However, the majority of grocers appear to wait until the last moment in the hope that some individual refiner may become tired of waiting for business and reduce his prices, as the Philadelphia refiners and Arbuckle have done lately. At present the prospects of such declines are very slight. The two Philadelphia refiners are already greatly oversold and have large contracts on the 7.45 cents basis still to deliver; there appears every reason to believe that there is not over 25,000 tons more of Porto Rico sugars availabe for purchase and these are held almost on a parity with Cubas. Of the latter any appreciable purchase would at once remove all low-priced offerings. Under these conditions no refiner appears very likely to make any decline, as there is every indication that such a move would result in so heavy bookings that before he could again shut off the flow of orders, such raws as he may have previously bought would be much more than covered, and he would be obliged to purchase new supplies. Considering the strong hands now holding the major portion of the available raw sugars, any such buying would quickly advance values beyond the present level and reduce the differential with refined below the cost of refining.

Conclusions.—We can therefore only repeat what we have said before, that we see no prospect of further declines and believe that with further holding back from refined, a sharp advance is possible at any time.

Summarized Market Conditions.

Tea feeling is a little better, but business very dull and sellers are still willing to make small concessions. India-Ceylons are about unchanged at the sharp decline recently made.—Coffee is in quiet demand, but as to Rio and Santos the feeling is better and a slight advance prevails. Brazil advices are stronger. Milds quiet and heavy.—Sugar unchanged as to refined, but raws a little easier on account of pressure to sell; demand only fair.—Salmon unchanged and firm on spot. Sardines firm and fairly active. Tomatoes weak on account of advent of new pack goods at around 90 to 92½ cents. Balance of canned vegetables steady to firm; quiet demand. California canned fruits active on account of coming freight advance. Prunes weaker on account of lower offerings from the coast. Balance of dried fruit list very quiet, but steady to firm. Apricots somewhat weaker.—Wheat excited on account of reported crop damage.—Flour about 25 cents per barrel higher for the week; demand very light.

Pennsylvania Organization Notes.

Mr. Smedley made an address before the newly organized Board of Trade of Barnesboro on Monday, July 17th. There was a good attendance and much interest shown in the work of organization. The new association now numbers 81 members. It will divide its work along civic, industrial and mercantile lines. One of the first results of the organization is an earlier closing hour for stores. Barnesboro is a good town, with some wideawake business men. It was one of the first towns to provide a public playground for its children—this playground was provided by the business men and is fully equipped. A swimming pool is about to be provided.

Mr. Smedley visited Johnstown on July 20th and found the association there exceedingly active. A big picnic is being planned.

Big Publicity Planned on Aunt Jemima.

Advice comes from Mr. Robert R. Cla president of the Aunt Jemima Mi Co. of St. Joseph, Mo., that plans under way for the largest and most fective advertising campaign on Au Jemima Pancake Flour that his co pany has ever before attempted.

In an interview with Mr. Clark says: "We have contracted for co siderable space in many of the leadi magazines read by women, the adve tising to start with the opening of t fall and winter season, and many the ads. are to be full pages, in bea tiful three and four-color work."

He further adds that "The introducti of powdered milk to the Aunt Jemi formula the past season has proved wonderful success. Reports from quarters indicate that this feature our product has been the chief reas for the steady incrase of sales. Th naturally added to the cost of man facture, but with the additional volu we were enabled to reduce our ove head and maintain the usual liber grocers' profit.

"The extra convenience of Aunt J mima's Pancake Flour with the milk a ready mixed in it is certainly appreciate by women everywhere, as they have r sponded by an increasing demand, gi ing to our product a trade stimulus o unusual proportions. As a result, Au Jemima has moved off the grocer shelves faster than ever before, givi the grocer an easy seller with a re markably quick turnover.

"The big success Aunt Jemima ha met—particularly the past season—ha encouraged us to enter into this greatly enlarged advertising campaign and w feel certain sales will multiply over an over, giving the grocers of Americ and ourselves mutual benefits."

Mr. Clark is very sanguine over th business outlook and predicts a trade boom this year outsripping all former records.

he sugar market is absolutely un- ıged from last week. Raws fluc- e a little from time to time, but v no material alteration. All re- s are quoting exactly the same es as they quoted a week ago. The demand is only fair, but is expected to be very much larger in August. In fact, upon the expectation of it being very much larger in August, experts are predicting that prices will not be any lower, but may be higher.

Fish.

New shore mackerel, instead of going lower, as it should at this season of the year, is going higher. Holders advanced prices at least $1 a barrel during the week. Quotation now, in a large way, is around $18.50 or $19, against the normal price of around $12. The catch has not been satisfactory up to the present time. Comparatively few Irish mackerel have come to this market as yet. Prices are unchanged from the last quotation. Sardines show no change, speaking now of the domestic brands. The market is steady to firm, demand light. The imported sardine situation is almost unprecedented. There are some new Portuguese sardines in market, the price on which has been advanced to $20 for boneless halves, in a large way. A short time ago it was $18, and the normal price would be $13 or $14. There are no old Portuguese sardines available, nor are there any new French sardines. There are a few old about, but they are poor and not wanted. Old Norwegian sardines are cleaned up. A few new ones have come over, but have not sold well, as holders are asking $13 to $14 a case; normal price would be around $8.50. Salmon of all grades is wanted at unchanged prices. It looks as if new pink Alaska salmon would open up not less than 90 cents per dozen, f. o. b. coast, in a large way. The spot market rules slightly above that. Red Alaska, which is ruling now at around $1.75 in a large way, is expected to open around $1.40.

Canned Goods.

Tomatoes are in somewhat of a peculiar position. The Southern packers have already produced some new goods and are offering them at 90 to 92½ cents. The trade have bought a few The holders of 1915 goods are meeting this price, which involves a decline of about 5 cents per dozen. Futures of the regular pack are unchanged. The outlook for tomatoes is very good. Crop is moving forward satisfactorily and if not interfered with, will undoubtedly be large, as will the pack. If the pack is as large as is possible, providing that there is no interference due to the weather, the chance is that even the present price of future tomatoes, viz., 80 to 82½ cents, will look high. Corn and peas are unchanged for the week. Corn is looking fairly good now in the growing sections. Both corn and peas are firm. Apples are unchanged and dull. California canned goods have been quite active recently, owing to the prospective advance in California freights, which is scheduled to take place September 1st. The various interests involved are petitioning the Interstate Commerce Commission to hold the advance off until January 1st, but already there has been considerable buying done on the strength of it. Part of this, however, is undoubtedly due to the fact that stocks were low and buyers actually in need of more goods Small Eastern staple canned goods are unchanged and dull.

Dried Fruits.

The large sizes of prunes are weaker, apparently due to the fact that when there is a short crop, which is predicted for this year, the fruit almost always runs to large sizes. Both 40s and 30s this week have been quoted at a substantial fractional decline. Small and medium sizes are unchanged. Peaches, apricots, raisins and currants are all neglected, but firm in price.

Beans and Peas.

The demand for pea beans fell off so much when prices got high that there has been a reaction, and the present price in a large way is $5.90 per bushel, f. o. b. Michigan. This is a drop of $1.10 from the highest point, but is still very high. Marrows are quoted around $6 in a large way. California limas, 7 to 7¼ cents a pound. Green and Scotch peas unchanged and dull.

Butter.

The receipts of butter are about normal for the season, but a considerable percentage is sho ving the effects of the heat and the percentage of strictly fancy butter is much lighter than it was some time ago. The make is healthy on the present basis, as the consumptive trade is very good, and there is also considerable inquiry for storage purposes.

Eggs.

The egg market is firm, with unchanged prices for the better grades. There is an extremely good consumptive demand and the percentage of fine eggs is very light. Much of the receipts show heat and are being sold at various prices, according to quality. The market is firm, without indication of immediate change.

Cheese.

The cheese market is somewhat unsteady, owing to the demand for export from Canada. There is also a good demand from this country, and as the make is only about normal for the season, the above conditions create considerable firmness. The market is likely to remain firm for some time and will possibly make slight advance.

Provisions.

All cuts of smoked meats, including picnic, regular, skinned back hams, bellies and bacon are firm and unchanged, with the usual consumptive demand at this season. Pure lard is steady and unchanged, with a normal consumptive

JAR TOPS—You will most likely need some extra Jar Tops. The preserving season is here. We quote the new Sanitary White Crown Cap, self sealing, fits any Mason jar, half gross in box, per gross, $2.00; the old style zinc P. L. Caps, per gross, $2.25. All grades Jar Rubbers.

PORK AND BEANS—Quaker City Brand. Probably you know how well the market is cleaned up on canned beans, the present high prices on dried beans, too much for the packers. We still have a stock of No. 3 cans of our Quaker City Brand, while they last we will sell Plain at $1.40, and in Tomato Sauce at $1.45. Don't delay if you can use them.

CANNED PEACHES—Here is another lot of goods we advise you to buy, Elysian Park Brand Yellow Cling Peaches, standard quality, in syrup, regular size California tins, 2 doz. in a case, per doz., $1.50.

demand. Compound, however, is dull and slow at a decline of about ½ cent. Dried beef, canned meats and barreled pork are firm at unchanged prices.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Evaporated Apples, Etc.

The evaporated apple market is without any change here this week. Asking prices on futures are firmly held at a basis of 5¾ to 6 cents f.o.b. in 50-pound boxes for prime quality, with not much demand, however. Spot goods are moving out of cold storage in small quantities, at from 5½ cents per pound up, according to grade. The uncertainties of the demand next fall, as well as the uncertainties of the quantity dried, are keeping the specualtors out of the market.

The raspberry market is firm. The driers are late in getting started and it is too early to get a line on what the output will be. Very few new goods are offered. A few shippers are taking orders at 25 cents per pound f. o. b. in barrels, but it is very difficult to buy any quantity at this.

Wheat and Flour.

Twelve years ago black rust brought about a calamity to the spring wheat crop, and to-day much alarm is felt because of the repeated, and confirmed, reports of its presence in our own, as well as the Canadian Northwest. It will be of especial interest at this time to recall that in July, 1904, similar reports came pouring into the market, but little attention was paid to them. In its crop report of August 1, 1904, the United States Department of Agriculture referred to it in the following language:—

> Rust has made its appearance in a number of the counties in the Northwest, but except as to South Dakota, it is chiefly in late or supplemental reports that reference is made to it, and such reports being somewhat conflicting in character, it is evidently too early to estimate definitely the extent of the damage resulting from it. Condition August 1st, 87.5 per cent., against 93.7 per cent. on July 1st.

Yet within the next 30 days the crop was practically ruined. We sincerely hope that no such calamity will befall the crop this year, for its effects will be more serious than in 1904. We cautioned our friends to keep an eye on the Saskatchewan crop, for last year that province raised 195,000,000 bushels, or one-half of Canada's 366,000,000 bushels crop, hence confirmed reports of the presence of black rust on that side of the international boundary is greatly adding to the general uneasiness.

We concluded our letter of four weeks ago with the statement that we were confident that notwithstanding the pressure at the moment of the abundant stocks that the market was at, or near, bottom. At that time July wheat in Chicago was less than $1 per bushel, and we calculated on a normal spring wheat crop.

We shall be sincerely sorry to see a "runaway" market. It makes business difficult and in many cases impossible. In 1904 it cut our exports down to 44,000,000 bushels, or barely one-third of the preceding year, and for months no export business in flour was possible. It completely demoralized domestic business and at the end of the crop the adjustment of prices to a new crop basis was very costly to many and disastrous to a few.

It makes better business all around to have a surplus of wheat for export. It stabilizes prices and encourages trade. We shall be very sorry indeed to have our crops curtailed to a point where we will need our whole production at home with none to spare for export, yet this is in prospect if the crops suffer as they did twelve years ago.

It is estimated that the European wheat crop is 500,000,000 bushels less than last year and if any disaster befalls the spring wheat crops of Canada and the United States the results would be far reaching.

Wheat is the very life blood of the civilized world, and a crop calamity now may change the fate of nations, therefore it is no wonder that the market is very sensitive to the news from the Northwest.

We hope that reports are exaggerated, but only time will tell.

Spices.

The market is gradually becoming broader and shows more activity. Prices are generally unchanged, but stocks are not larger, and any unusual demand would have a tendency to greatly advance values.

Pepper.—Prices are firm and have advanced slightly. The Lampong crop is reported small and we have also had reports of a shortage of Malabar crop. We look for higher levels in both black and white peppers during the late summer and fall.

Red Peppers.—In better inquiry and the market is firmer.

Cloves.—Are in fair demand at generally unchanged prices.

Pimento (Allspice).—Is unchanged and low in price. The demand is fair.

Mace.—Rather quiet and unchanged in price.

Nutmegs.—Much firmer in the East. The market here is firmer and we believe prices will react and go higher.

Cassias.—Saigon grades are firmer. Batavia is in better request at steady prices. China grades steady and distinctly higher for futures.

Gingers.—In better demand at generally unchanged prices.

Green Ginger Root.—Now in very active request. Stocks are not large and import lots are generally sold from dock.

Tapiocas.—In fair demand at firm, but unchanged prices.

Paprikas.—The market shows signs of increased activity. There have been no price changes during the week.

Seeds, Herbs, Etc.—Seeds are generally unchanged. Celery and mustard will soon begin to move. Thyme, savory and marjoram are scarce and firm. Sage is in more plentiful supply.

Foreign Grocery Specialties.

The olive oil market in Italy is exceedingly strong, with an advancing tendency, and the demand in America continues splendid and is likely to continue so while the prices for cottonseed and other substitute oils continue as high as they are now. At the small difference which exists in the price of pure olive oil and substitutes, naturally everyone will be inclined to buy the pure article, which is so infinitely better.

The market is overstocked with garlic, but prices continue rather steady, as they are now way below the point of importation.

Spain reports prospects of a large crop of pimentos (Spanish red peppers), but the scarcity and the enormously high prices prevailing for the lithographic matter, the scarcity and high prices of labor, will not permit to offer these goods at low prices this coming season. Besides, freight is higher, so is insurance, and stocks of last season's c are practically exhausted. We, the fore, do not look for a material decl in the market for pimentos.

Imported Fish Specialties.

The demand for all kinds of salt f is naturally rather small at this seas of the year, but business has been f ther handicapped very materially by scarcity of cold storage space. Ev ice house in this city is filled to its pacity with both Scotch and N Foundland herrings. The quality those Newfoundland herrings which have received is so exceptionally f that there is no doubt that they will f a ready sale at good prices when weather moderates.

In view of the prevailing high pric there is only a hand-to-mouth, but good business done in imported s dines. They are being bought in sp of the high prices by people who w to eat a sardine. Our people in Fra write that the catch of sardines h been very small, and that it would useless to offer them to the Americ trade, because the supplies are taken readily by the French, English and R sian Governments, which makes pri prohibitive to the trade in general.

The catch in Norway continues in fair way, but prices are very high, wit out showing any inclination to decli as all that is being packed find rea sale in Europe.

In Portugal the catch is poor and o limited quaitites find their way to t American market.

We now have a final report of t Norwegian catch of codfish, whi shows conclusively that there will a great scarcity of all kinds of codfi and that enormously high prices will paid for small stocks which will be r ceived in America this coming season.

The Girard Grocery Co. and the Grocers' Supply Co.

Oley, Pa., July 24, 1916.
To the Editor.

Dear Sir:—Will you kindly give us information concerning the Grocers' Supply Co., 617 Lafayette Building, and the Girard Wholesale Grocery Co.

We do not know the street address of the Girard Wholesale Grocery Co., but both concerns are located in Phliadelphia.

Thanking you for your information, we remain,

Yours truly,
P. L. Glase, Son & Co.

The Girard Grocery Co. is the wholesale grocery company owned and operated by members of the Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association, though conducted as an independent organization. It is a large, wealthy and prosperous concern, doing a business of several million dollars yearly. Its address is Bourse Building.

The Grocers' Supply Co. is a small concern with a few thousands capital, doing business at 525 Lafayette Building. It is supposed to be an adjunct of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Co. and is run by Ralph Earle, son of the president of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Co., and T. Rex Graham, who was formerly in the employ of the Pennsylvania Refinery. It sells, as we understand it, sugar direct to small retailers, but only Pennsylvania Refining Co. sugar.

The American Grocers' Society.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 22, 1916.
To the Editor.

Dear Sir:—Will you kindly give me at your earliest convenience any and all information you may have on the American Grocers' Society, also going under the name of the American Buying Association, 31 Clinton street, Newark, N. J. I have had inquiry from some of our members whom they have solicited to buy stock.

Thanking you for the favor, I am,

Very respectfully yours,
C. A. Bell,
Secretary Retail Grocers' Protective Union.

The American Grocers' Society has frequently been mentioned and discussed in this paper. It started out by selling well known trademarked specialties to retailers at very low prices—little more than the jobber's cost, in some cases. Goods were sold only to retailers who would buy stock in the society. Later it appeared that the main plan was to pack goods under the society's private brands and to ask the grocers who had bought stock to distribute these.

We have no reason for believing that the scheme is dishonest in any way. We have criticised it because it appeared to be selling goods at prices below cost as a bait to sell its stock; a practice which we thought it could obviously not continue. We are frank to say that we have received letters from retailers who bought some of the society's stock, and some of its cut-priced goods, testifying to having made large savings, and we have no doubt that these savings were made. They must have been at the prices paid. Whether the society can and will continue selling at the cut prices remains to be seen.

As to the quality and character of the goods packed under private brands, we know nothing.

Various Questions Answered.

Uniontown, Pa., July 22, 1916.
To the Editor.

Dear Sir:—Please inform us where we can secure bonafide reports on wheat and other crops to include the general condition of the market.

2.—Also inform us whether there are any other grocery publications and where we can secure them.

3.—Where do you think is the best place to buy olives?

Yours very truly,
J. H. Auslander.

1.—You can get reports on the wheat market from the "Journal of Commerce," New York. Also, the "Modern Merchant and Grocery World" publishes weekly a very good report from Shane Bros. & Wilson, this city. Or you can go straight to headquarters—the Department of Agriculture of the United States Government. If you write them at Washington they will be glad to put you on the list for every crop report issued.

2.—There are other grocery publications, though none circulati much in Pennsylvania except th published by the Philadelphia R tail Grocers' Association, the "G cers' Review." Excellent groc publications in other States are "American Grocer" and the "T and Coffee Journal," both publish in New York. The "Modern G cer," published in Chicago, is a good.

I read this article closely, a inasmuch as the conclusions we contrary to general practice, I c out the article and referred it—you will note from pencil memora dum on the bottom of it—to one my personal friends, who is prom nently connected with the freig claim department of one of o great railroad systems.

I am enclosing you his reply, t gether with copies of the Cummi amendment and Supreme Cou ruling, together with his own co clusions. This man himself handl thousands of claims in a year.

Do not misunderstand me. I a not taking this up in a controversi spirit nor for publication, but seems to me that some of you patrons might go to unnecessar trouble and even forego makin claims for rightful damages if the had to follow the procedure out lined.

I trust you will take this in th spirit that it is sent.

Would be pleased to have you re turn to me these enclosures whe they have served your purpose.

The way the matter is handle practically is that claims are mad against the initial road which ap portions losses and damages amon the other roads, collecting for it and the initial road settles with th shipper.

interstate business. Perhaps the author was responsible for that mistake for not specifically saying in the article that he was referring to intrastate business, that is, freight business wholly within a State. He supposed, however, that it would be understood that the law which he was discussing was the law of the particular case which was submitted to him, which was purely an intrastate matter. The law of interstate freight business is undoubtedly as this correspondent states it. The law of the States, that is, intrastate business, is as stated in the article referred to, and it has been held to be the law of practically all States in a decision by a Pennsylvania Court not more than four weeks old.

A Railroad Held Responsible for Damage to Goods While En Route.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals in the case of the McNeill & Higgins Co., of Chicago, against the Old Dominion Steamship Co. has decided that a railroad is responsible for the condition of the goods it is carrying, so far as quality may be impaired by floods and similar visitation. The Chicago jobbers consigned on March 15, 1913, 273 bags of coffee to the railroad company for shipment from New York to Chicago. At Peru, Ind., the shipment met the Dayton, Ohio, flood and windstorm and the top of the car was blown off and the coffee was soaked by the rain from above and from the water rising until it entered the car. The car was held at Peru from March 24th to April 10th, and the wholesale grocery firm claimed that it was during this period that the coffee was made worthless commercially, contending that it was only partially damaged by the water at Peru, such damage not amounting to over 2 or 3 cents a pound. The railroad company finally sold the coffee in Chicago for $101.01 after all freight charges were paid, although its original value was $10,000. The railroad won in the lower court, but the Court of Appeals reversed the decision and remanded the case for a new trial. In handing down the opinion the court said in conclusion:

> The duty of a carrier to use reasonable care to protect the shipper's property from damage after the shipment has been overtaken by a storm that may properly be classed as an act of God, is well established.

NEW YORK CITY

No. 374.—One Kind of Wildcat Competition and What Can Be Done About It.

The question asked by the letter which I am reproducing below may arise in anybody's experience at any time. Therefore I discuss it here instead of sending a personal answer, withholding the writer's name and address as he requests:—

We present below a situation on which your opinion is desired.

A, a patentee, is manufacturing and selling, through the jobing trade, a device on which he has spent several years' time and considerable money in creating a demand and building up a business to the point of reasonable profit. He now has a line of jobber customers covering practically the entire field in which the device may be sold. This field, however, is limited and the article a "short season" one and A can easily supply the entire demand, which makes a fairly good business for one firm.

At this point B enters the field, copies A's device, makes it with less care and less taste and goes after A's customers, offering to supply them at a lower price, and is meeting with some success, to the serious injury of A's business. As B's device looks exactly like A's, it is, of course, being sold solely on the reputation of A's product. As no change in illustration is necessary, the same cuts which the jobbers used for A's device (electrotypes for which were furnished by A) are being used in some instances, at least, for the sale of B's.

A notified B that he was infringing his patent. B replied in a rather defiant manner, but on being threatened with a suit, promised to discontinue the manufacture of the alleged infringing device. After one year A discovers that B continued the sale of the device in question, and in the meantime, with the assistance of a patent attorney, has devised certain minor and unimport changes in the structure in an effort to avoid the claims of A's patent. B now cheerfully informs A that his patent attorney advises that the device as now constructed avoid the claims of A's patent. These slight changes have apparently been made with a view of retaining the essential features and general likeness to A's device in order, as seems evident, that it may pass in the trade as substantially the same thing. The same cut or illustration will still answer for both.

One of the slight changes which B made seriously impairs the efficiency of the device, but this change cannot be determined with the eye, nor can the user determine the cause of the inefficiency without considerable intelligent study of the mechanical construction. Now, if B is permitted to continue in his course his device will still pass in the market as substantially A's product, and the sales made will be solely on the reputation of A's device. Thus B is not only practicing a deception on the trade and the consumer, but this deception will, as a matter of course, eventually affect the reputation of A's device.

As a last resort A will certainly bring suit for infringement, as his patent attorney believes the changes in structure are "colorable" only and do not depart from the spirit of the invention.

We have gone into this in detail because there seems to be other questions involved than those of technical patent law, and on which your opinion is desired, viz.:—

In the meantime, what may A do to combat this competitor, if such he may be called, and to prevent the ruin of his business before the final termination of a suit? What may A say to his customers, whom B is endeavoring to draw away, in regard to this bold invasion of his rights? What may he say of the deception in B's device?

Your recent articles would seem to indicate that it might be unsafe for A to do or say anything other than bring a suit, and even in this event, should he fail to sustain the charges, he might be subjected to a suit for damages in return. Personally, we believe in a case like the above the law would permit or give A considerable latiture in combating such a bold invader.

The question is, what can A do to save his business here? Is he helpless? Must he await the long and uncertain process of the courts, with B meanwhile going ahead and stealing his trade, or is there some quick and effective method by which he can settle the matter, or at least prevent B from doing any more harm until it is settled?

As bearing upon the lengths to which competition can legally go, the question is interesting.

What I should do if I were A, and were confronted by wildcat competition of this sort, is this:—

I should at once institute suit against B in the United States Courts of his district. This will not be cheap or easy, but it will probably be worth all it costs. I should ask for a preliminary injunction against him on the two-fold ground that he is infringing upon my patent, and that he is guilty of unfair competition. From the above statement of facts, there is plenty of ground for an injunction, which if the court grants it, will peremptorily stop B, and indirectly all of his customers, from selling B's device until the suit is decided. My judgment is that the court would very likely grant it, under the circumstances above set forth, if they c be proven.

Unfair competition, which m exist even if there is no infring ment of patent, lies in the atten B is evidently making to get t benefit of A's work—to palm his own device as A's.

A will either get a prelimina injunction or he will not. If he refused it, he may still get a p manent injunction, when the ca comes on for final hearing, wh will not be, however, for seve weeks. He will get the prelimina injunction, if at all, within a f days.

Whether he gets the prelimina injunction or not, the next st ought to be to go straight to eve customer with a fair story of t controversy. If he has the injun tion he can of course say he has If he hasn't it yet, he can say has applied for it. And he c state the facts of the dispute, fu

Cake and Cracker Display.

This makes a very good display and should make your sales increase wonderfully. First cover the bottom of the window with white crepe paper. Arrange plates of cakes in a semi-circle on the bottom of the window. In the center of the window in front build a pyramid of ginger snaps and lay a row of them to each plate of cakes. Back of the plates make a semi-circle of milk lunch and place a box of Uneeda biscuits at the ends of the milk lunch boxes, as ilustrated. Arrange white crepe paper to form a curtain at the back. Suspend a large neat sign card, as shown in illustration.

This Tells the Tale

¶ A product which has been on the market fifty-eight years is a product which has stood the hardest of all tests—the test of time. "Knight's Cooking Extracts" is a phrase familiar to man, woman and child, from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Lakes to the Gulf. It is easy to tell why; no housewife ever had a bottle go back on her and no housewife ever will. Good extracts must be on your shelves. Grocers, if you sell Knight's Extracts we need say nothing more to you; if you don't, we want one order from you—we are sure of more. You are certain of their absolute purity and a good profit.

and fairly. A United States Court, in a case recently decided in Indiana, enjoined the defendant from sending notices to the trade accusing a competitive article of being an infringement, the evident object being to destroy the competitor's trade. This decision does not go so far, however, as to forbid every merchant or manufacturer who considers himself aggrieved and who is obliged to go to law to redress his wrongs, from telling his customers about it. On the contrary, he can undoubtedly tell them with perfect legality about it. Any man who is facing competition of this sort, which he believes to be in a sense fraudulent, can go straight to his trade and state his side. He can do it by word of mouth, or by letter, or by advertising, or in any other way, and no action for damages can successfully be brought against him—if what he says is true and is said in good faith. That is the only chance he takes—he may be compelled to prove the truth of what he has said, and its good faith. If he can do that, he is safe.

It seems reasonably clear, if B has a preliminary injunction granted against him, and the trade is then completely covered by A's statement, that a crimp will be put in B's business which will practically eliminate him. And if A's statement is true, very properly. There is no remedy so speedy and effective as the injunction in cases where competitors are either infringing on some patent or trademark right, or are indulging in unfair competition. Through an injunction the United States Government reaches out its hand and seizes by the throat the business man who has not been willing to play the game fairly. It is expensive, but if you have good grounds for it, you will always find that it pays.

Question: W., N. Y.—The chain stores here have marked Kirkman's soaps 7 for 25 cents. Has the manager the right to refuse to sell same to my boy? If he has no right what can I do?

Answer.—He has the right to refuse, and if I were he that is precisely what I would do, of course. If he sold you he would merely be supplying you with ammunition to shoot back at him with.

Teaching a Nation the Value of Raisins

Europeans eat nearly five times as many raisins per capita as Americans. That's because they appreciate them. Americans will be soon using as many raisins per capita as Europeans as a result of our national campaign on

SUN-MAID Raisins

And you grocers will sell these raisins to them.
This is the only brand of raisins ever nationally advertised. We are spending thousands of dollars telling Americans about this brand in full pages every month in The Saturday Evening Post, colored pages in The Ladies' Home Journal, and local newspaper advertising.
Grocers everywhere are feeling the results. Capitalize on this sensational expenditure of money. Get the full benefit of this new impetus to your raisin business.
Three Varieties—Sun-Maid Raising come in three varieties: Seeded (seeds extracted), seedless (from seedless grapes), and cluster (on stem, not seeded).

Dy'e You Blame Mrs. Adams?

If there's one kind of blame jackass business that gets me going more than another, it's that kind that makes a storekeeper get sore because some customer don't buy everything of him.

And not only get sore, but show the customer he's sore.

Oh me, oh my, but that looks to me like the limit!

You'd be surprised how many fellows do that. It's a peach of a way to get business, ain't it?

The other day I stood in a store and saw a thing like that happen. This time I did what I never did before and so help me, never will again—I butted in and told the boss.

Did he put his arms around me and kiss me? Not yet. It was his son that did this thing and come to found out, he felt just as the same as his son did.

All the same, I butted in because I thought I was doing him a good turn, and when I go to Heaven I ain't going to speak to him.

Here's what happened. A woman come in asking for some corn on the cob. They do a big truck business, and they had some corn. Sam, the boss's son, waited on her.

"Is that corn any good?" asked the woman. "It don't look very good to me."

"There it is," said Sam, as surly as he could be.

"I know it's there," said the woman, "I didn't ask you that. I asked you if it was any good."

"It's sweet corn," said Sam, still surly as all get out. Didn't make any move to show it to her or anything.

"Well see here, young man," she said, "if you don't want to wait on me, you know, you don't have to. Seems to me you're about as disagreeable as you can be. I'm not the only one that has noticed it; others have told me about the way they get treated in this store and if I come in here again you won't wait on me, I'll be sure of that."

"I don't want to wait on you," said Sam, as ugly as a dog.

All this had been going on pretty loud. Everybody in the store heard it, for the woman was pretty well het up.

The cashier of course heard it too and she came around and finished waiting on the woman.

Now she may come in there again. Chance is she will, for they do the biggest truck business in the neighborhood. But she won't come in there for what she can get anywhere else, that's a cinch.

I made up my mind I'd go to the boss with that. Then I called myself an old fool and decided I wouldn't. Then I changed my mind again—seemed to me it was the only decent thing to do—and when I got at him in a minute I handed him the whole thing.

"You can call me a butter-in if you want to," I said, "but I'd want to be told a thing like that if it was my store."

"D'ye know who the woman was?" he said.

"I heard the cashier call her Adams."

"Oh, Mrs. Adams. She never comes in here except for something she can't get at the chain stores," he said. "I wouldn't kow-tow to her any more than Sam did."

If he'd hit me in the face I wouldn't have been any more flabbergasted. I started to hand out a line of argument, but cut it off short. What was the use? The only thing it was up to me to do was to get it to him. If he knew about it, I was out of it.

But can you beat it? Here's a man thinks a customer owes him all her business! And if she don't give it all to him she ain't paying a debt and he has a right to get sore! The way he feels is—if you don't buy everything here, you needn't buy anything! If I can't sell you $5 worth a week I don't want to sell you $1 worth and you can get the hen out of my store! Oh put a muzzle on me before I go mad!

I might have told him I did wonder she didn't come to him anything she could get at the ch store. Chance is they treated like a white woman at the ch store.

Selling Talks With Clerks

BY A MAN WHO HAS BEEN ONE

Conducted by W. E. SWEENEY, Manager for L. Lehman & Co.'s Department Food Store, Dover, N. J.

Work for Volume.—If you are at the head of your department, whether that department is groceries, meat, butter and cheese or vegetables, you must everlastingly work for volume in order to bring down your overhead charges. This, of course, applies where departments are separately kept, and no store can be successfully, or at least accurately and scientifically run unless this is done. If it isn't done, how on earth does the office know which man is making good?

Tuesday morning is an anxious morning with the heads of our departments, because it is then that the statements are issued.

So the higher your sales go with normal help the lower your percentage of expense. This, then, is the test of your business ability, and business ability in your case represents push, energy, discretion, display, courtesy and the proper pricing of your goods.

The last is perhaps the most ticklish thing to handle—to know when to drop and when to advance a price requires rare judgment. Theory men will tell you to mark your goods at a certain per cent. of profit, no higher, no lower.

Practical men, men who are on their job, know who are up against good and bad, and sometimes even wild competition, know better. Certain things this week can be sold at 35 per cent. profit on the sale and maybe next week 20 per cent.

Fixed percentage is all very good, the principle is right. But meeting conditions and thereby holding your trade better business.

Mistakes.—Mistakes are the res of inattention. What causes you forget to copy an order? Why do y enter the wrong price? Why get wrong street number?—Inattention. see it illustrated daily in and out of o own place of business.

Do you know the cure for it? T cure for it is attention, and it can acquired simply as any habit is acquir

The other day a man sold a gall can Wesson oil for $1.10. The list this oil is $10 a case of eight cans; had in mind a very old price.

The way and the only way to get t "attention" habit is to listen to o thing at a time, getting that thi planted solidly in your head. Have y ever had a clerk come back to you a say, "What new price was that you ga me just now?"

There is positively no excuse for young fellow acting that way. Old m are excusable. But you young ch had his thought elsewhere, and so lo as thought is elsewhere, mistakes w occur and the oftener they occur t nearer they bring the victim to the i evitable receipt of a blue envelope.

Be an attention clerk, concentrate o your work. Play when play time come but think when thinking time comes ar you will find that the practice of th habit will save you many a troublesom hour. It will make you a more valuab man to your employer and your facil ties a better servant to yourself.

I have from C. M. Hertzog, East eenville, Pa., a circular which ows that he is quite a schemer. e is working an advertising heme which seems to me a good al like playing with fire—offer- g a prize for the most popular arried woman in the town. It esn't end until September 1st, d I can see knives drawn and fly- g in the town of East Greenville ig before that. Here is the cir- lar. It measures about 4 x 9, d is printed on rather flimsy ocolate colored paper:—

C. M. HERTZOG
EAST GREENVILLE, PA.

These contests are exceedingly ood things, in small towns. They ardly go at all in the larger places, ut in a town of say a couple of housand people, where everybody nows everybody else, I have never een one fail when conducted prop- rly. They arouse an astonishing nterest and some of them really let the town on fire. And there is o doubt that they are business- etters. The trouble is that most etailers who use these schemes don't realize that the most of the new business they get is reasonably certain to be transient business unless they work plans to make it permanent. I remember one grocer who tried practically this very scheme. And he did a whacking business with new people all the time it lasted. But when it was over all the transients who had just run in to buy a few votes went back to their regular stores. He had made no systematic effort to hold them while he had them in his net. There are various ways in which he could have done that—gotten them interested in some special line while they were in the store, called them up on the telephone to say that he had something especially good in fruit, or whatever it might be, putting them on the list to send advertising to, and so on. Making in other words, a careful, methodical campaign to keep the transients coming to the store regularly. Any grocer who will do that can get a lot of good business out of a scheme like this.

Outside of the scheme, the circular is a little barren, although these specials may be good enough to stand alone. I confess I don't like this laconic way of advertising. "Peas, 7 cents a can." Not even "Good peas." "Shad, 9 cents a can." Not a word about it. Even the name of the packer—"Jones' famous Shad"—would have been better than "Shad." I don't know what luck Mr. Hertzog is having with his specials, but I feel sure he would get more direct orders if he would dilate a little on his goods. Be more communicative about them. He is now leaving the price to do it all, and while it may be low, I don't believe it is low enough for that.

Forcing That Smile!

DID you ever smile pleasantly at a customer whose account is costing you from 15 to 20 per cent. to carry it?

¶ When you figure it out, you will probably find a number of accounts which are worth very little in net profits by the time your collections are made.

¶ Well!—it takes a brave man to deny further credit when eventual payment is absolutely sure and the only trouble is the customer insists upon doing business his way instead of yours.

¶ Why not make it worth while for your trade to pay you promptly? What is ready money worth in your business?

¶ S. H. Green Stamps go a long way towards producing the results you are after. In twenty years of thorough trial they have made a record that leaves no room for argument. Let us tell you about it!

The Subscribers' Bargain List

Have you got any goods you don't want? Anything—canned goods, groceries, hardware, dry goods, anything at all that's in good condition, but won't sell for you.

If you will make a price on it we can possibly sell it for you in a hurry. Write us about it, stating the quantity, condition and your best price. You might give the original cost, too. We will give it a key number and offer it to our 4,000 subscribers. Your name will not appear unless you want it to. All sales ought to be on a cash basis.

The point is that what won't sell for you may be in everday demand for somebody else, who will be glad to get your stock of it at a bargain.

There will be no charge for this service anywhere—we do it to help along.

Read What Happened to An Unstamped Specialty Order the Other Day

A retailer whom we will call Smith had a call for a certain specialty, just a day or two before the specialty salesman for the manufacturer called on him. This manufacturer did not use the stamps on his orders. Smith signed a trial order.

Twelve days passed without the filling of the order. Then the salesman for the jobber through which it was to be filled called in. "By the way, Smith," he said, "do you want that order for ———? The boss thought you might have signed it just to get the specialty man out."

"I did want the order," said Smith, "but you've been so long about it that my customer may have connected up somewhere else. If you're going to send it at all, send it right away or I don't want it."

Six days more elapsed and then the goods came. Smith inquired of the customer who had called for it, but found she had left for the summer, after buying two dozen cans somewhere else!

If the order had had either of the above stamps on it, it would have been filled right away. Do you see a moral in this, Friend Retailer?

If it wasn't for nationally advertised goods, one of two things would happen to the average retailer's business :—

1. It would either be confined to staples, or
2. It would be very greatly curtailed, for if he actually had to sell specialties, instead of simply filling orders for them, he couldn't do anywhere near the business he does.

Have you ever fully realized that nationally advertised goods grease the wheels as nothing else on earth can do ?

No matter how hard you try to avoid it, your store will look like a junk shop if its shelves are overcrowded.

Of course you can overcrowd shelves supported by Baines' Brackets, but you won't reach the crowded point until you've got 25 per cent. more goods on the shelves than you can put on the old-fashioned shelves.

Baines' Brackets hold up shelves without the old-time uprights that eat up space. The whole, unobstructed shelf-length is available for goods. We've figured up the gain many times—it amounts to a clear increase in shelf room of 25 per cent.

More About the Albert Nelson Co-Operative Scheme

Wants Grocers to Sign a Contract to Pay Ninety Dollars a Year on Promises and Representations Which Do Not Always Ring True. Problems to be Solved. The Scheme Dissected and Discussed.

The following letter gives us an opportunity to discuss the latest co-operative scheme offered to groceries in this territory. Brief reference was made to it in a recent issue, but it was not discussed in full:—

Lancaster, Pa., Aug. 1, 1916.
To the Editor.

Dear Sir:—I inclose letter from the Albert Nelson Co. What do you know of them? Are they a reliable concern?

It appeals to me. As I understand their plan, they buy the goods for the retailer at the same price the jobber and chain-store concern buys them and the retailer pays them $7.50 a month for their services. To buy goods on this basis would seem a big saving to me. I inclose stamped self-addressed envelope and would like to hear from you. If you use this in your paper kindly do not use my name, and greatly oblige,

Yours very truly,

* * *

This paper has explained that the "Albert Nelson Co." consists of one Albert Nelson, who has had some experience in the retail grocery business and some in other co-operative enterprises. None of this experience appears to have been very large or important, and he has, we understand it, extremely limited capital.

The scheme is still in its extreme infancy, which fact makes the statement on the letter head "The Largest Retail Buying Organization in America" seem like a piece of rank exaggeration. Following is a portion of the letter which is being sent to retailers in an effort to induce them to subscribe $7.50 per month to the service:—

Dear Sir:—Marshall Field once said, "I am convinced that co-operative buying is the most powerful movement of the age, so far as the future of the retail grocer is concerned."

Many merchants are to-day getting 60 cents worth of merchandise and 40 cents worth of "middlemen's profits" and pay $1 for the lot. What is the excuse for this useless extravagance?

We can buy many classes of standard goods for you at a saving of from 10 to 33 per cent., not merely shelf goods, but salable, standard merchandise.

Under our co-operative buying system we honestly believe that within six months we will be able to buy your merchandise for you for less than the chain stores are paying for the same article to-day.

The cash chain store is a menace to the retail grocery business and is growing more and more so each successive year, and this company was organized for the sole purpose of enabling the retail grocer to protect himself, for protection in his buying is his only salvation.

One thousand stores will give us a buying power of over $15,000,000 annually, and at a saving of only 7 per cent. (which is a very low estimate) will save the dealers who co-operate with us over $1,000,000 per year. Please think of this rather seriously, Mr. Retail Grocer.

Mr. Albert Nelson, who has charge of the purchasing department of this organization, has had over twenty years' experience as a buyer in the grocery business. He has the enviable reputation of being one of the best informed, keenest, practical buyers on the street to-day.

He has just resigned a lucrative position with one of the large chain-store organizations, which will enable him to give his whole time and attention to the conduct of the business of this company.

The whole cost to you is but $7.50 per month on a yearly contract payable monthly in advance. Will you join us? Yours very truly,

ALBERT NELSON.

Apparently the retailer who joins the service must sign a contract to pay $7.50 per month for one year. We are compelled to advise against it. The scheme may go, but if we were a retailer we should not agree to pay $90 to it until it had started.

Acting on behalf of many of the retailers to whom the above letter has been sent, the "Modern Merchant and Grocery World" would like to ask the Albert Nelson Co. how it can reasonably promise to save them 33 per cent. on any staple articles.

One other statement we take serious issue with: that in six months this scheme will be buying for less than the chain stores. This we believe to be insincere. In buying there is an absolute minimum, below which no buyer can get no matter how much he buys. It is believed that the chain stores have reached that minimum, and it is idle to hold out as bait the possibility of such a scheme as this getting below it.

If we were a retailer, and were approached with this scheme, we should say "come back after you have actually commenced buying goods, and quote me some prices."

Another great difficulty any scheme like this must face is the matter of freights and shipments. Evidently the Nelson concern expects to buy direct from the manufacturer, although originally we understood it would buy through the jobber. Suppose it buys from the manufacturer and places an order, for example, with the Kellogg Company for a large order of goods. If it ships to a Lancaster retailer one or two cases of Toasted Corn Flakes, and nothing else, the freight will be so high, compared with what it would be if the cases went out as part of a jobbing order, that the saving on the purchase would be more than eaten up. This problem must also be solved before anything can come out of this scheme for the retailer.

All Retailers Who Employ Clerks Should Read This.

Well-Known Coffee Jobber Issues "Suggestions to Dealers," Embodying Pointers for Increasing the Efficiency of Clerks.

We have received a copy of a recent paper "Suggestions for Dealers" which was circulated by the Widlar Co., wholesale coffee dealers of Cleveland, Ohio, among the retail grocers of that territory. For the general good a part of it is here reproduced:—

The businesses throughout the country which show the most noticeable progress are those where proper consideration is shown clerks.

Your clerk is the most valuable asset in your business. He can bring you success or he can bring you failure.

Treat your clerks as partners, and not simply employees. Confide in them. Be courteous and kind to them, thereby setting an example of the courtesy and consideration you wish them to show your customers.

Show them the fundamental principles of business and help them progress.

Attend your association meetings regularly and take your clerks with you. Oftentimes points are suggested which your clerks can use to splendid advantage in improving your business.

Let your clerks visit other stores and gain ideas how to improve the appearance of your store.

A great many failures in business to-day are due to clerks venturing into business with a false conception of profits. This is not strange when considering that the clerk has never been shown how small the profit on a great many goods you sell is.

The clerk stations himself behind the counter day in and day out, and doesn't become familiar with anything but the receip When he sells a pound of sugar feels that either all or the maj portion of it is profit.

He is not to blame for that. Y are to blame, because you have taken the trouble to explain to h what it costs to run your busine

Familiarize your clerks more fu with the merits of the various goo you carry, and give them talki points to sell them. If you cann do this yourself, then you shou insit upon the salesmen who s you explaining the merits of th products to your clerks.

When you get in a consignme of canned peas or canned corn, op a can and show your clerks h good the quality is.

You carry one brand of peaches 15 cents and another brand at cents. Are your clerks in positi to tell your customers why the 2 cent grade is worth the difference price? They should be.

I am in favor of manufacture packing a circular in their cases e plaining the merits and giving yo clerks talking points on their pro ucts.

Aside from quality, service a courtesy, being thoroughly post and able to explain the merits the goods you sell appeals to t customers more than anything el Educate your clerks to sell yo customers additional items to wh they ask to buy.

Don't let them feel that they a simply stationed in your store hand out what people ask for.

There are lots of items in yo line which your clerks would s and which your customers wou buy if they were properly suggest to them.

Analyze your accounts and s just what items your customers a and are not buying of you.

If you find Mrs. Jones or Mr Smith is not buying coffee and t of you, call your clerks togeth and say to them:—

"See here, boys, we are not sellin Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Jones coff and tea. There is no reason wh we can't sell them these item Now the next time Mrs. Jones a Mrs. Smith come in, I want you t make an extra effort to sell the coffee and tea."

If necessary, offer your clerks a extra inducement to get this bus ness.

Install beside your telephone bulletin listing certain specials an ask your clerks to feature the when taking telephone orders.

Last, but not least—show th proper interest in the advancemen of your clerks. Keep them satis fied and help them to progress.

One Way to Take a Grocery Store Out of the Class of "Just a Grocery Store"

One Grocer Gives a Reception to Celebrate the Completion of His Refrigeration Plant. The Local Newspaper's Account of It. Advertising Value of Such Schemes Considered.

The "Modern Merchant and Grocery World" has received a copy of a newspaper account of a reception which a country grocery store gave to the townspeople in order to celebrate the completion of its new refrigerating system. We have always argued that these store functions, which any store can have periodically, are worth ten times their cost as advertising of the most valuable character.

Read the following extract from the local newspaper's story:—

> The reception Monday evening at the Lehman Store was so different from the established affairs of this kind that the occasion may well be called unique.
> At the very least twenty-five hundred people entered the store between 7 and 10 and very likely three thousand would be nearer the mark.
> There was an orchestra of six pieces in charge of Prof. Hiler. The music was a treat and the Lehman guests very plainly showed their appreciation of the "concord of sweet sound."
>
> Very interesting and very generous samples were given away during the evening.
> The real occasion for this unusual getting-together time was to celebrate the completion of the Lehman automatic refrigeration plant. Everybody was invited to pass through the cold rooms, which comprise four distinct compartments, viz: Meat, butter and cheese, fruit and vegetable and the freezer rooms. The compactness, sanitary arrangement and the splendidly regulated temperature of this cold air plant was a revelation to our people.
> The wonderfully delicate adjustment of this system of refrigeration causes the electric motor to start when the temperature rises half a degree above that required for the proper keeping of the goods. With the old system of ice storage uniformity of temperature was impossible. Hanging meat keeps best at 30 degrees and the automatic system regulates that perfectly.
> Miss Charlotte VanVliet sang "My Own Venetian Rose" and other popular songs in response to encores.
> Dancing commenced at 9 and continued until 10 o'clock. The guests formed a double row around the store, leaving sufficient space for the dancers in the center of the aisle. The scene was one of the most remarkable in the history of our town.
> Everybody joined in singing "America" as soon as the orchestra started.
> Mr. Heller, the president, and Mr. Sweeney, the manager, along with the Dover Lehman force, welcomed the guests. The event resembled a family gathering. It was a spontaneous expression of mutual good will and a demonstration of the friendly attitude between buyer and seller.
> Mr. Heller invited his employees, their wives, kiddies, sisters, brothers and best girls over to "Patsy's." There was cream and soda galore.

The above is printed as an object lesson on how to take a grocery store out of the category of just a grocery store and make it a local institution. It can hardly be doubted that consumers who had been the guests of a grocer, as in the above reception, would feel quite different toward it than if it was just a hum-drum grocery store doing nothing whatever to make itself distinctive.

Home Canning is Going to Fall Off This Year.

High Price of Sugar the Cause, as Fruit is Plenty and Cheap. Demand Both for Jars and Sugar is Affected.

It is becoming evident that housewives are not going to can and preserve anywhere near as much fruit this year as they have been accustomed to do. The only known cause is the high price of sugar. Fruit has been comparatively plentiful, and comparatively cheap. Undoubtedly the coming two months will see lots of fruit, and from all appearances it will be within everybody's reach so far as price is concerned.

The falling off in home canning has had a marked effect on the demand for glass jars and glass canning tumblers. One jobber who sells a good many jars is this year selling not 75 per cent. of his usual sales. And without question the same condition has also helped to make the demand for refined sugar poor, although the principal canning demand would be felt from now on.

The National Housewives' League has taken the matter up and has issued the following statement:—

> Housewives are losing an opportunity to save money for themselves and for the producer in not canning the usual amount of fruit at this season. The reason given is the high price of sugar. Investigation shows that this is a false conclusion.
> While sugar is higher this year than last it is only 3 cents above normal. Many have not stopped to think that it takes approximately one-third of a pound for a quart can. This means an increase per quart can of but 1 cent over normal price, an amount so small it is not worth considering compared with the advantages which accrue in question of economy, the health of the family next year and the advantage to the producers of the country.
> This is a home canning season if ever there was one, and we are asking the women of the country not to lose this opportunity to fill their own larders with delicious home-made canned fruit which will produce both economy and health in the family and greatly aid the producers of fruit.
> Fruit is cheaper than usual and we should take advantage of this opportunity.

The sugar refiners are also taking notice of the matter and are circulating literature designed to show women that the advance in sugar would only amount to about a cent a quart jar. Women, however, are hard people to move in such cases and all they see is that sugar is 3 cents a pound higher than usual, and that the ten pounds they want for canning means an extra expenditure of 30 cents.

Any grocer who will put his mind to it can easily convince any reasonable woman that the advance in sugar is not sufficient to cut any important figure in her canning operations.

"If Your Store Should Burn Tonight What About Insurance?"

The Inquiry Which the Kansas City Credit Men's Association Addresses to the Retailers of That Territory Is Just as Applicable to You.

The Kansas City Association of Credit Men has issued to the retailers of that territory the following excellent reminder of their obligation under their insurance policies:

> IF YOUR STORE SHOULD BURN UP TONIGHT, WHERE WOULD YOUR BUSINESS BE?
> Your credit is what makes it possible for you to conduct a successful business. This is not a new fact—it is a common saying and a true saying.
> Your credit will be stronger and better in every market where you buy goods if your financial statements given to commercial agencies show that you have adequate fire insurance on your merchandise. It is presumed that you have some fire insurance, but here are some questions it will pay you to consider well, because there is always a chance that your place of business may burn up during the night and cause you a serious, if not fatal loss:—
> 1. Is your fire insurance equal to at least 80 per cent. of stock on hand? It should be.
>
> 2. How do you know it is?
> 3. Do you take inventory at le once a year? This is positive necessary.
> 4. How do you determine val of stock on hand at any other tim With annual inventory at cost pric plus freight as a basis, it can estimated, twelve or twenty-fo times—even oftener each ye There is a simple way of doing thi Do you know how?
> 5. If you have the co-insuran clause on your policies, do you kn just what effect it has on your ris Are you aware of the fact that case of partial loss, you have share your stipulated percenta and that the insurance compa will not pay the full claim for dam age unless you carry policies equ to or more than the stated per ce mentioned in the co-insuran clause?
> 6. Are your inventory record your books of accounts and yo invoices of purchases for at lea a year back kept in fireproof sa or vault? They certainly ought be. The insurance companies a ready to be fair in adjusting a lo —but they must be shown what yo claim the loss is.
> 7. Do you realize that you ca have your rate reduced if you wi make certain important improv ments in your premises—water ba rels and buckets, hand extinguis ers, metal trash cans and packin material boxes, electric wiring conduits, windows without broke glass, elevator traps, sprinkler sy tems—and perhaps even more im portant still if you never perm any rubbish, paper or old rags kindling or paints or oils, to accu mulate?
> 8. Do you realize your insuran policies are definite contracts, an that you are bound thereby?
> These are pertinent questions an deserve your careful answers. will pay you to take these questio to your local insurance agent an discuss them with him. If he ca not satisfy you completely, the in surance department of this associa tion will gladly furnish you the in formation. We will welcome an inquiries of this kind.

AMONG THE TRADE.

The Philadelphia Retail Groce Association will hold its annual p nic at Willow Grove next Wedn day. The usual big affair is e pected.

How Would You Like to Be a Cre Grocer in Tampa?

Apparently the little city of Tam Fla., has achieved new fame; fame no very enviable type. If it be true, stated at a meeting of its retail groc a few days ago, that its 40,000 peo owe the retailers of that city bills $300,000, all more than six months o it will go far to justify some of t recent contention in associated tra circles that cost accounting and sharp credit observances are among the mo important considerations in the efficie distribution of the public food supp The reports say that fifty grocers wh attended the first meeting had outstan ing claims of $175,000.

Keep That Trade at Home!

IN one of our Western Branches, recently, a number of "S. & H." Stamp Books were redeemed, coming from a small town easily 25 miles away.

¶ These books represented some $1400 worth of trade which had been lost by the really good stores in the small town, simply because they were doing business in the same old way and their wise townspeople could do better elsewhere.

¶ The owner of a large general store in the small town heard the news and called to see our Branch Manager who gladly showed him our redemption records.

¶ He found, by basing his figures on the number of filled books of "S. & H." Stamps which had been redeemed by people he knew personally, that at least $3800 worth of business which he should have had, had gone to the Big Town.

¶ He is now getting that business. He is giving "S. & H." Stamps and already shows a 20 per cent. increase of which 10 per cent. is new cash business.

¶ He is a wise merchant who learns what his customers want and profits by that knowledge.

BURK'S Meat Loaf

SEASONABLE THROUGHOUT THE YEAR

Composed entirely of fine selected meats—contains no flour or cereals. Baked fresh daily in loaves of about six pounds.

Makes a quick and delicious breakfast sliced and fried in a little butter.

Can also be served cold for luncheon, cut in thin slices or warmed in the oven in one piece to take the place of a roast.

BURK'S Lunch Roll

(Copyrighted)

SUBSTITUTE FOR BOILED HAM

Composed of lean, tender pieces of pork, mildly cured, stuffed in linen container and boiled.

Far superior and more delicious than boneless boiled ham, being juicy, mild and sweet; also less expensive and not near so wasteful—in fact no waste at all. Much finer in texture and just as easily sliced, or more so, as this can be done in a slicing machine.

The cover is readily removed by cutting the seam and then stripping off the sack as the roll is consumed. This prevents it becoming dry and is a sanitary feature that appeals to the consumer, as it keeps the product clean while displayed on the counter and untouched by hand while slicing, a vast improvement as compared with handling the greasy, unprotected boneless boiled ham.

MEAT LOAF and LUNCH ROLL were originated by us, now imitated by others, but none equal to Burk's, which are prepared from only the choicest materials.

WITH THE EDITOR

Mean and Low.

Read this from the Philadelphia "Record" of last Tuesday:—

CANDY DID NOT KILL CHILD

DEATH WAS DUE TO INTESTINAL DISORDER, SAY OFFICIALS.

Mildred Allen, three years old, No. 6127 Baynton street, died from intestinal trouble and not from poison in a colored piece of taffy, according to officials of the Coroner's office. The child became violently ill Saturday shortly after eating a lollypop. It was thought at first that there might have been some impurities in the candy.

This is the sequel to several scare-head newspaper stories which appeared on Sunday and Monday about a child who had been "poisoned" by the dye in cheap candy. The "Press" fathered the story. It gave the name and address of the retailer who sold the candy, talked at length about the danger of cheap candy when sold to children and probably put a crimp into the business of a totally innocent retailer which will stay with him for some time. The climax was an interview which the "Press" presented with "Expert" Harry P. Cassidy, who of course knew nothing more about the case than he used to know about the sale of rotten eggs for food in his own territory when he was a State food agent.

Later other papers took up the case. Naturally the whole brunt of it fell on the retailer, whose name was the only one given, but who knew nothing more about the composition of the candy than I did.

It now develops that the whole story was a cruel injustice. The child died, not from candy poisoning, but from "intestinal trouble," caused, according to other papers, by undue indulgence in pork chops!

Did the scrupulously fair newspapers that printed the original story give the same prominence to the correction? They did not. They gave an inch to the correction where they gave half a column to the original. Nothing could be meaner and lower than this.

A Remarkable Advertising Experiment.

The Wanamaker Philadelphia store—I assume the New York store is doing the same, has cut away from the old traditions of advertising, and is doing something now which nobody in my time has ever tried to do before in the same way. The Wanamaker store itself has never tried to do it up to now.

It is advertising bargains without telling the old price. If it gets the same business that the old method got, it will be a remarkable achievement.

The Wanamaker page in a Philadelphia paper of Thursday, August 3d, is before me. Many of the goods advertised are represented as being reduced—bargains, in other words. Yet not a word is said about former values.

Imported frocks are advertised at $18.75, "just reduced."

"Women's Pretty Pongee Coats Have Their Prices Clipped." $18.75 to $50.

Crash curtains and couch covers reduced. "Prices now," $2.75, etc.

"Queer Time to Reduce White Corduroy," 50 cents a yard, etc.

"All our Mattresses, Pillows and Bolsters at Special Prices in the August Sale." From $8.30 up to $35.

This is indeed a very bold thing. If it can be pulled off, it will rid the Wanamaker store of a millstone which hangs about the necks of most stores to-day—the burden of making goods advertised as bargains seem bargains. Of course the only way to do that, according to common belief, is to tell the old price, and right here has crept in the greatest frauds of the advertising business. In order to make a bargain seem bigger, its "value," or its "former price," has been and is being grossly overstated. If Wanamaker can quote a bargain and sell it merely as something "reduced" or "special"—absolutely on its merits—other people can do it also, and there is a chance that the thing that has thrown advertising into the deepest disrepute may be eliminated.

Getting Along Without Indispensables.

Not long ago I suggested that retailers might save themselves a lot of argument if they would cease all effort to explain and justify the high prices of meat, and concentrate their attention on pushing substitutes for meat.

During the week a little more evidence has dropped in that people can get along without a whole lot of things that off hand they would be apt to consider indispensable. A coffee broker was commenting a day or two ago about the decline in the prestige of Java and Mocha coffee. Java and Mocha have been powerful names in the coffee business of the past. To-day they amount to very little. Java is so high that the demand for it is reduced to almost nothing compared to what it used to be. Other East Indian coffees are being bought, but none of them are being so as Java, though formerly some them were. People are using t same quantity under the oth names.

Mocha doesn't amount to t cents any more. When it got hi several months ago roasters a blenders started to use somethi else in their blends and they got j as good drinking results. The isn't one consumer out of a tho sand who can't be as well satisfi with another coffee as he can wi Mocha. Mocha has come dow again now, but many of the blen ers who dropped it are still usi the substitute, and they will pro ably go on doing it. Mocha not a nice coffee to handle an way.

Most consumers who were a customed to demand "Mocha an Java" drank the name and not t coffee, and in years gone by, t name was often all they got.

The worst drudge of storekee ing—the thing that steals all t interest and the profit from bus ness, is trying to force somethin on people that they don't wan This means either goods or price If the price of something sharp advances, the retailer almost nev gets the full advance, not at th start anyway. He dreads fussin with his customers, and he pays pa of the advance himself. In othe words, the particular merchandi has become for him unprofitab merchandise, and the logical thin for him to do, if he can't make profitable, is to let it alone and pus something else that is profitabl Some substitute, in other words.

Nothing in the world but has substitute.

I ca give you a straight tip for I hav looked into the matter some, as thi condition has until recently existe in our city quite to the disadvan tage of the regular retail grocery stores.

The fact is that a cheaper grade goods was made especially for is trade—goods which a real good tailer who meets his patrons, iows them and is looking for re- at trade would not care to handle. he bargains in the chain stores st for a day or two; the buyer or nsumer sees just an employee and e purchase by everyone is small id probably no complaint is made. could mention a manufacturer ho has, because of the higher price all materials, ceased entirely to ake this class of goods.

Storage Egg Ruling Excites Comment. Loss of Raw Sugar by Explosion Did Not Affect Market. National City Bank on Business Conditions. Market Summary.

Special Correspondence of "Modern Merchant and Grocery World."

New York, August 4, 1916.

The ruling of State Market Commissioner Dillon, reported last week, that after September 1st all cold storage eggs sold out of their original package must bear the words "cold storage" upon the shells, has aroused a great deal of protest among the trade here. Egg men say that it will be entirely impossible to comply with this ruling without advancing the price of cold storage eggs beyond the price of fresh. There is likely to be a test case in order to ascertain whether the Commissioner has the right to make such a ruling. One egg man who was interviewed during the week said that if the ruling stands, probably 2,000,000 cases of cold storage eggs, containing 720,000,000 of eggs, would all have to be individually branded. How much it would cost to do this is, of course an unknown quantity, but it seems sure that it would cost several cents a dozen.

There has been considerable speculation during the week as to how the sugar market would be affected, as 30,000 tons of raws were destroyed by the explosion of munitions on Black Tom Island last Sunday. It is expected that there will be some of this saved. Part of it was granulated and part raw. When it was first learned that this sugar was destroyed, the market strengthened a little, but later this was lost and as the week closes the market is really weaker than it was before. Two local refiners dropped the price of granulated in spite of the above loss of raw, to 7.40 cents.

The gasoline market continues to be weak here and crude oil has made a number of declines. The only decline is gasoline has been a drop of 1 cent, but the crude oil market has shown such a decided sign of weakness that everybody has expected a decline in gasoline almost any time.

The National City Bank, one of the largest and richest financial institutions in the country, has issued during the week the following statement regarding the present condition of business:—

Notwithstanding the influence of mid-summer weather, there has been practically no let up in industry during the past month. Trade has been slightly less active, for it is between buying seasons, but mills and factories are sold so far ahead that there has been no relaxation of the pressure upon them. The market for munition stocks has been affected by reports that war business was nearing an end, but later news shows that there is no warrant for this opinion. All present signs are against an early termination of the war. The allies have been inspired with new confidence and the Germanic powers are not disheartened. After two years of war, money is raised as easily as in the first six months.

The steel industry is working at high pressure and earnings for the last six months, and particularly for the last three months, have been phenomenal. The net earnings of the United State Steel Corporation for the second quarter of the year were $81,000,000, and for the third quarter are likely to be more rather than less. In view of the very favorable results and in partial compensation for the suspension of dividends last year, the directors have authorized an extra dividend of 1 per cent. upon the common stock.

The expansion of industrial capacity is very general. Despite the present high costs, building operations are active over the country. A compilation of building permits for 164 cities shows an aggregate in the six months ended June 30th of $522,300,000, as against $452,716,573 in the corresponding period of 1914. The figures have never been exceeded except in the first six months of 1909, when they were $525,000,000. The explanation for this activity is that floor space, storage room and housing capacity have been imperatively demanded.

The railroads continue to have an unprecedented traffic. The returns for May were quite as satisfactory as in other months preceding, and for the year ended June 30th have doubtless set a new record in both gross and net earnings. Within the last week the principal carrier in New England has found it again necessary to set restrictions upon freight offerings. Unfortunately, the danger of a strike still hangs over the country, the trainmen having undoubtedly given their officials full authority to call one.

Summarized Market Conditions.

Tea quiet, with unchanged prices, still possible to get occasional concessions.—Coffee very dull and Brazils steady at slight fractional advance. Milds, Java and Mocha very much neglected.—Sugar weaker, raws having shown a fractional decline. Some refiners are quoting granulated at 7.45 cents; in fact, the majority of the refiners here and in Philadelphia are selling at that price. Balance 7.65 cents. Demand unsatisfactory.—Prunes demoralized and selling at 4¾ cents basis, f. o. b. coast, in a large way. This is a decline of 1¾ cents from the highest point. Apricots slightly easier, as the recent high price of 15 cents practically killed the demand. Other dried fruits unchanged, but currants very strong.—Salmon unchanged, but feeling in red and pink Alaska very strong. Prices high. Sardines unchanged. Tomatoes weaker and prices for old and new range from 82½ up to 90 cents in a large way, f. o. b. factory. Corn continues firm, as do peas. California canned fruits all unchanged, with canners predicting an early advance.— Wheat ruling very high and quite sensitive and unsettled. Report of damage to the crop from rust is responsible.—Flour also advanced about 40 cents per barrel for the week. Demand only fair.

Organized Labor is Against Changing Pennsylvania Oleo Laws.

President State Federation Says His Organization is Against Any Change in Existing Pennsylvania Oleo Laws Which Would Allow Oleo to Be Colored Yellow.

Organized labor in Pennsylvania is out against any proposition to permit the coloring of oleo to resemble butter. James H. Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor and a member of the State Legislature, has addressed the following letter to the National Dairy Union. In it he places organized labor on record as favoring the continuance of the present restrictions upon the sale of oleo:—

For the past six years or the last three legislative sessions of Pennsylvania I opposed all proposed legislation which aimed to legalize the coloring of imitation butter by manufacturers and dealers. My objections are not based on any thought that coloring matter is unhealthful or that imitation butter is not fit for human consumption, but is solely economic.

At present imitation butter in its natural state, sells for from 18 to 22 cents a pound in Pennsylvania, while the genuine dairy product costs 36 cents a pound. The purer the imitation the whiter it is. If the manufacturers and dealers in the imitation article were permitted to color their product, the imitation would be complete, so much so that nothing short of an analysis would reveal its component parts. This is at least true of the great majority of consumers.

The imitation article, however, like other imitation which closely resembles the genuine, comes in direct competition with it. Once we allow it to be colored, its price will begin to soar dangerously to the real article, and, as a consequence, the consumer who is now buying oleomargarine for 20 cents a pound will pay the advanced price.

One thing sure, the farmer never could hope to compete with the manufacturers of the imitation. As a result, many would be compelled to go out of business and turn farms to raising something else. And just as fast as this happens the price of the imitation article will rise until finally the great packing companies will have a monopoly, then the consumer will pay more for the imitation article than we are now paying for the genuine. Besides the imitation will, most likely, not be as pure as it is now. On the other hand, if the farmers cannot find a profitable market for their milk and turn their farms to other products, it means the starvation of their land, for as fertilizers cattle are the life of soil.

Therefore, looking at the question from every angle possible, I can see but two reasons why some dealers and manufacturers want a law giving them a right to color in imitation of butter, their product: one is to charge more for their product, and the other to give them a monopoly of the butter market.

Let oleomargarine and butterine and all other substances stand on their own feet and sell for what they are and not for what their manufacturers can make people believe they are.

tate-Wide Campaign Against Dead Beats in Kansas.

One of the most interesting propositions presented to the State Retailers' ssociation in their annual convention Lawrence, Kan., last week was the ansas Dead Beat Directory. Cooper ackson, secretary of the Newton Comercial Club, and the Central Kansas etailers' Association, originated the an for a State dead beat directory, hich he says could be made up by the cal secretaries with very little extra xpense from the data now on hand.

Sell KARO for Preserving

(Crystal White)

It makes better preserves than all sugar

In our extensive advertising, and in the "Preserving with Karo" booklet, we tell the housewife about the superiority and convenience of KARO for preserving fruits, making jellies, marmalades, jams, etc. It will pay you to follow up our suggestion and recommend this use of KARO (Crystal White), because your profit on KARO is much larger than your profit on sugar. You can be sure your customers will be not only satisfied, but delighted. KARO (Crystal White) is already extensively used for preserving purposes, and this use is increasing every day on account of the superior qualities imparted to the preserves, jams and jellies. KARO (Crystal White) is too profitable for you to let your customers use it simply as a table syrup; tell them to use it for cooking, baking and candy making, and you'll secure increased sales that will pay you many a dollar of extra profits.

Preserving booklets will be furnished to the grocers for distribution on request.

The Grocery Markets

Tea.

The tea market shows no change for the week. Demand is still rather light, but no more than to be expected. No change has occurred in prices, the market being easy here and there, as holders are willing to make concessions.

Coffee.

No material change has occurred in the coffee market during the week, although Rio and Santos are undoubtedly a fraction higher, although not a very large fraction. There is some demand, but the main reason appears to be better feeling in Brazil. Some new coffee is coming forward, but is not cutting very much figure as yet. It is offered at the same price on spot as old coffee. Mild coffees are unchanged and the demand is comparatively light. Mocha is tending downward and the large way quotation green is now 21 cents. Java very dull, but high.

Sugar.

There have been some indications of weakening in the sugar market during the week. Raws have sold at 6.27 cents. Some sales have been below that. At this average it makes a very substantial margin; in fact, an unusually large margin between raw and refined. Refined is unchanged except an occasional refiner is cutting granulated to 7.45 cents. Consumptive demand for refined sugar is not very good, although better than it was.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose is up 10 points for the week. Compound syrup dull at ruling quotations. Sugar syrup unchanged and quiet. Molasses is not figuring at all, except for manufacturing.

Fish.

The only mackerel figuring now to any extent is new shore mackerel, which have advanced another $2 per barrel during the week. The quotation now for shores in a large way is $22 a barrel. Fourteen dollars to $15 would be considered a normal price. In spite of the heavy advance, buyers are taking stock very readily. Irish mackerel are available to some extent, but there are not many of them and prices show no change. Cod, hake and haddock are unchanged on spot and very dull. No prices have as yet been generally named for new fish, but the outlook seems to be rather high. Salmon is unchanged and in fair demand. Packers are said to have refused to book orders for new pink Alaska at 90 cents and new red Alaska at $1.65. Domestic sardines show no change from last week and fair demand. Imported sardines unchanged, as reported last week.

Canned Goods.

Tomatoes are steadily tending downward. Futures, that is, goods to be packed within a month, are unchanged on about 82½ cents basis. New goods are being offered on spot at around that price and holders of 1915 pack will have to take not much more than that in the end, although some sales were made during the week at 90 cents in a large way delivered. Corn is still tending upward and is very firm. Southern corn is probably 2½ cents higher for the week. The pack of Southern peas is, of course, over, and while it shows better than last year, is still below normal. The pack is still on in New York State and Wisconsin, but promises to be somewhat under normal. There is still a goodly quantity of last year's peas to be sold. Apples show no change and light demand. California canned goods are now coming in and there are almost no sales from first hands. Prices are unchanged. Small Eastern staple canned goods unchanged and dull.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes appear to be somewhat shot to pieces. From the 6-cent basis price ruling some time ago the price has gone down to 5 cents and below, and some quotations have been heard as low as 4¾ cents. Reports from the coast now indicate a larger crop of prunes than was originally expected, although there will still be some shortage if there is to be an export demand. Trade are not buying prunes, considering 4¾ cents basis too high. Peaches and apricots unchanged and quiet, but still firm. Raisins show no change; fair demand. Currants are very high and very firm. Demand quiet.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans are tending downward, and a quotation of $5.75 has been made during the week, although there are some who say that these beans are not up to standard and that $5.90 is still minimum for choice goods. Marrows can be bought around $4.85. Demand for beans is fair under the circumstances. Prices are affecting packers of baked beans more than any one else. Some of the largest packers have announced that they would have no more beans until prices become normal. In addition to this, they are refusing to fill present contracts. Lima beans have dropped probably ¼ cent per pound. Green and Scotch peas unchanged and quiet.

Butter.

The butter market is active and advanced 1 cent per pound on all grades. There is a good consumptive demand and quite a falling off in production, due to the extreme heat in the principal producing sections.

Eggs.

The egg market is firm at unchanged prices, with a good consumptive demand. The supply is reported lighter than usual and the average of the arrivals shows the effect of the heat, as will be the case for a few weeks yet. A large percentage of the eggs now arriving conform to no recognized standard of quality, but have to be sold for the best possible prices.

Cheese.

The cheese market is firm. There is a fair consumptive demand and a very large export demand. The prices show an advance of ¼ cent. The quality of the present production is good and the future depends largely on the demand for export.

Provisions.

Everything in smoked meats is firm and unchanged on the basis ruling for the last two weeks. There is a good consumptive demand. Pure lard is firm at unchanged prices, while compound is barely steady at ½ cent decline. The demand is moderate. Cotton oil is gradually coming down and shows a decline of about 5 cents per gallon from the highest point. The price is still, however, very much above normal. Barreled pork and canned meats are unchanged and steady to firm. The dried beef situation is becoming some what critical, but packers are reporting labor troubles and scarcity of meat and there is a good deal of delay in shipment on contract.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Wheat and Flour.

We have had some wild wheat markets during the past week and just how much damage has been done to the spring wheat crop is impossible to determine. Some very conservative millers in the Northwest state that it is safe to calculate on 50 per cent. damage in South Dakota and 25 per cent. in North Dakota and Minnesota. Assuming that this is so you will be interested in the following comparison:—

COMPARISON OF SPRING WHEAT CROPS.

In Millions of Bushels (000,000 Omitted).

	1913	1914	1915	1916 See Note A	1916 See Note B
North Dakota..	79	82	152	90	68
South Dakota..	33	31	61	52	26
Minnesota	67	42	72	61	46
	179	155	285	203	140
All others	61	51	71	67	67
	240	206	356	270	207

Note A.—This is the Government estimate of July 1st.

Note B.—This is the present indication after allowing for 50 per cent. damage in South Dakota and 25 per cent. in North Dakota and Minnesota.

You will observe that on July 1st the Government estimated the crop in Minnesota and the two Dakotas as 203,000,000 bushels, compared with the present indication of 140,000,000 bushels, or less than one-half of last year's bumper crop. Even with this loss we will have a surplus for export of 150,000,000 to 185,000,000 bushels, if prices are forced sufficiently high so as to bring it out. You will recall how the high prices of the spring of 1915 enabled us to export 333,000,000 bushels, but to do so reduced our stocks to a dangerous minimum—only 37,000,000 bushels on the farms and in the visible supply, as against 117,000,000 bushels carried over this year.

It would take almost a complete failure of our spring wheat harvest to put s on a domestic basis with no surplus or export, and so long as we must export, our prices will be governed by what the foreign buyer is forced to pay to supply his needs. European requirements will be larger than last year, and allowing for the maximum quantities that can be obtained elsewhere, North America will be called upon for from 5,000,000 to 10,000,000 bushels weekly.

North America exported last year 210,000,000 bushels (U. S. 250,000,000 bushels—Canada 260,000,000 bushels) and this year will be called upon for as much, if not more.

Where is it to come from?

We have repeatedly cautioned our friends to kep an eye on Canada, for a partial crop failure there could easily double the present price of wheat.

Spices.

The market is becoming more active as the season of actual consumption progresses. There are few changes to report for the week. Stocks here are not large and any unusual demand would have a tendency to advance prices.

Pepper.—The market is firmer. The demand is very good, when you consider the shortage of Malabars and Java grades. It is bound to have its effect. From information received it looks as though the new crop will figure considerably less than the quantity needed for consumption.

Cloves.—Trading is on the increase. Stocks here are small. Higher prices are very probable.

Pimento (Allspice).—Unchanged during the week. In only fair demand.

Mace.—In fair demand at steady, but unchanged prices.

Nutmegs.—Steady and in better demand. Prices, we believe, have reached lowest point and are likely to react and go higher.

Cassias.—Rather quiet, season considered. All grades unchanged during the week.

Gingers.—In better inquiry and prices are somewhat firmer, but unchanged.

Green Ginger Root.—In very active demand. Higher prices are likely over August and early September.

Paprikas.—The cheaper grades are in better demand. Hungarian continues out of stock. Prices are holding steady.

MCCORMICK & CO.

Foreign Grocery Specialties.

Olive Oil.—In excellent demand, market very strong and prices tending higher steadily.

Garlic.—Market unchanged, stocks plentiful, prices barely steady.

Spanish Pimentos, Red Peppers.—Small arrivals, stocks practically exhausted in Spain. Crop in Spain, if no damage occurs, promises to be quite good, but we cannot look for low prices and new pimentos cannot arrive here before late in the year, because all raw materials are extremely high and still going higher.

New Japanese crab meat has arrived and shows the finest quality we have seen in many years. Prices are advancing.

First shipment of new summer pack sardines has just arrived and shows the finest quality that we have ever seen.

French mushrooms continue as scarce as ever.

Some new Italian peas have arrived, but quality is very inferior and prices so extraordinarily high that they are not likely to find favor with the trade.

New fresh figs in syrup in cans have arrived and show excellent quality this season.

Prices for practically all our imported goods seems to be climbing steadily, and the trade is taking them in spite of the high asking prices. No one can tell

My Idea How to Do It.

I was home the other Saturday morning, and as I was leaving to come down town in the car (trolley) my wife said to me "stop in so-and-so's and get some marshmallows and orange paste."

You'd be surprised if I told you who so-and-so's was. It's one of the biggest grocery stores in the city. They do a lot of advertising and are supposed to be right up to the dot all the time.

I'd been burnt, or my wife had, on some stale candy from this same place some time before that. We got a pound of marshmallows from there that chewed up about like I suppose the stuff you fix automobile tires would.

So I said to the little lady behind the counter—after I told her what I wanted:—

"Sure this is fresh?"

"Why certainly!" she said, "we don't have stale candy at this counter."

"The reason I asked is that we got some stale candy here two weeks ago," I said. Wasn't bad, was it?

"I don't know how it could have happened," she said. "Are you sure you got it here? Why didn't you bring it back?" She was kind of huffy and disagreeable and I began to get my mustard plaster feeling.

I didn't take up the question as to why I didn't bring it back, but she went right along.

"I pride myself on having everything fresh here," she said, "and if you don't feel sure, taste it."

It was a hot and sweaty day, but little Susy stuck her finger and thumb into a tray of mint paste, dug out one and poked it at me with the same motion as if she was trying to spear me with a pin. She pinched it so tight that I suppose she thought it would get away if she didn't, it was so fresh.

Did I eat it? Not yet. I said I would take her word for it and let it go at that. But she didn't let it go at that; she was still conversing with herself about it when I had gotten my bundles and left.

I remember her now as a cat with bum manners and a worse temper.

Will I be waited on by her again? Not if little Willie sees her first and can escape, and if it's necessary to pass the whole store up to escape, I can do that too.

Now I was in a retail store before I went on the road and I think I know a little bit about selling goods. My old boss used to say I did, anyway, and I can go back there any time I want to. I have a hunch I know how that thing ought to have been done, and I'm conceited enough to believe that if it had been done my way the customer wouldn't have had the taste in his mouth I had when I went out of there.

Here's the way I think it ought to have been done:—

"Sure this is fresh?"

"Yes, indeed, just fresh this morning. Why, have you ever gotten stale candy of us?"

(I'd tell then how a week ago I got a pound of marshmallows that were so stale I had to give 'em to my wife's mother.)

"Well, I am certainly sorry to hear it—we take a lot of pains to keep the stock fresh. Candy, you know, is pretty perishable and sometimes some will go stale on us before we know it."

Then I wouldn't have said a darned thing more about it until I had the customer's order for whatever other stuff was wanted, and then I'd have put in a new box of marshmallows.

"I'm putting in another box of marshmallows, because we don't want you to pay us for candy you can't eat. I feel sure you'll find these all right."

Suppose I had been the customer, and the girl had actually handed me a free box that way. Why honest, I believe that when I came to, and went out of that store I'd have stopped people in the street and told 'em about it. Advertisement? Why I'd have been an ad. that would have made the biggest electric sign look like a twinkle in a flea's eye!

I can hear what you fellows are saying all right. You know how your voice carries when y saying something mean. Th what you're saying:—

"Pooh! Pooh! If you did you'd have every grafter in coming in and making fake c about stale candy. You're cr

No I wouldn't, and I ain't, e —don't you believe it! I'd siz people up—any salesman wi brain can tell when he's up ag a fake. I'd be grafted on on a while—sure I would. But every box my leg was pulle there'd be ten boxes that would the little advertising seed fo in ground that wouldn't ne fertilizer.

Now here, I don't mean tha was back in the retail busines stand at my door on the slig provocation and lam free goo everybody. I mean that I'd sa every complaint that I thought honest, with free goods, and i other stores didn't follow I'd

THE MILK THAT SELLS

ADVERTISING AND QUALITY MAKE

Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk and Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Milk

THE FASTEST-SELLING BRANDS

Our steady advertising is constantly stimulating the demand for Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk and Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Milk, making new customers every day. Keep them well displayed in your store and secure the sales we are sending to you, because your customers will like their quality and flavor so that, once started, they will always buy these brands. You can not only start new customers on Borden's Milks but you can get regular buyers to buy more if you'll call their attention to the many delicious dishes they can make with them; many people who are only using them for tea and coffee will make cookies, doughnuts, cinnamon bun, milk bread. If you'll suggest it you'll not only sell more, but you'll also sell cocoa, cocoanut, spices, butter, eggs and flavoring extracts. We'll help you stir up these sales; send us your customers' names and we'll mail our Recipe Book to them for you.

No. 375.—When Employees Can and When They Cannot be Discharged.

Chicago, Ill.

We have just taken occasion to discharge a retail salesman who has been with us for several years. Originally he was hired at so much a week, and there was never a written contract with him. The cause of his discharge was the fact that latterly he got so he would not obey orders and was a trouble-maker in the store. We gave him a week's notice and of course paid him up to the time he left. He now claims that he was hired by the year, and that he cannot be discharged except at the end of the year. He was engaged, according to our books, on April 15th, so that if his contention is correct we cannot get rid of him until next April 15th. He says he has engaged counsel and the counsel tells him this. He has offered to settle for a certain sum, which rather than have any trouble we would be inclined to pay, but first should like to have your opinion. Is there anything in what he says?

A. O. M. & Bro.

There is nothing whatever in it unless he can prove that he was hired by the year. If he can prove that he was hired something like a man rents a house—for one year, lease to renew itself for another year and so on if one of the parties doesn't give certain notice—then there is something in his claim.

If he was hired at so much a week, without any definite time being mentioned, he can be discharged at the end of any week. That is the law throughout the United States.

Sometimes an employee is hired at so much a month or so much a year. In those cases it is always argued, if litigation arises, that the fact that the salary basis is monthly means that the employment basis is monthly also, and the employee therefore cannot be discharged except at the end of any month. That is to say, of course he can be discharged, but not without paying him in full for the time.

I saw the same contention made not long ago except that it was for a year instead of a month. An employee was discharged with a week's notice. He at once started suit to recover the balance of a year's salary, on the theory that he was paid $1,800 a year, which meant that the hiring was for one year, and could not be terminated short of one year.

In this case the court said the same that it has said in other cases, viz., that merely giving an employee so much a year was not evidence that he had been hired by the year; it might only be the rate at which payment is to be made.

I have always advocated making contracts with employees. No employer loses anything by doing this, and he may gain a very great deal. He may avoid such disputes as this correspondent is having, for instance. By the right sort of contract, an employer can give himself the right to discharge an employee any time he has reason to, even though the contract really covers a definite period. This he can do by including in it a provision that the employee's work must be satisfactory to the employer. I know of a case in which an employer and an employee made a contract for one year. The employer thought he knew what sort of a man he had, but he found he did not, and in a very short time the employee's work began to be exceedingly unsatisfactory. The employer disharged him, believing that he was not obliged to keep on a man who was not rendering satisfactory service. The employee sued for the balance of his year and the lower court has upheld him. The case has been appealed and my expectation is that the Appeal Court will say: "It is fundamental that an employee shall render satisfactory and proper service to his employer. If he does not do so, the employer can discharge him, in spite of the contract existing between them."

But the Appeal Court may affirm the lower court, in which case the employer will owe nearly a year's salary to a man who isn't working for him, simply because he failed to include the proper protective provision in his contract of employment.

I repeat that every contract of employment should contain a provision that the employee's work must be satisfactory to the employer. With that in it, an unsatisfactory employee can be discharged at any time. The employer's dissatisfaction, however, must be genuine. He cannot get around a valid contract merely by asserting, without reason, that the employee's work was not satisfactory.

There are other reasons why contracts should be made between employer and employee. If there is no contract, an employer may change his business and no longer have any use for a given employee. Nevertheless, if he has hired him by the month or year, and has either made no written contract, or a contract which contains no provision about it, he must still keep the employee on and pay him. A provision in the contract that it should be for a month or a year, as the case may be, except in the event that the employer should change his business, or sell his business, in which case the contract should terminate upon one week's notice, would fully protect the employer.

Question: W. H. Trick & Son, Watsontown, Pa.—We enclose herewith a specimen of a contract we have been requiring customers who, without any apparent, tangible assets apply to us for credit, to sign. This contract we have drawn to cover, as we believe, the provisions of an article published in the "Modern Merchant and Grocery World" of the issue of May 19, 1913, and found on page 10 of the Editorial Department under the heading of, "This is now a Law in Pennsylvania." As stated ab we believe this contract to be in conformation with the prime ide the legislation on the subject as stated in your publication. H ever, we are anxious to have opinion on the matter, advisin as to whether or not we can i tute procedure in the event of a fault by the signer of the said tract.

We would also appreciate suggestions you may have to m relative to this matter, and if contract is not legal we would that you submit to us one covering the legal points as scribed by the law.

Answer.—The contract encl is as follows:—

Watsontown, Pa

For the sole purpose of obta ing credit to secure the necessit of life, and since I am without r estate or tangible security, I he by tender this signed obligation a promise that I will positively p in full on the 10th and 25th of e month, or at such time as my p day may fall, for groceries or a other articles furnished to me W. H. Trick & Son.

Signed .....

Witnessed .....

You have rather misinterpr the intent and meaning of the of 1913, which provides that if person makes false statements the purpose of obtaining credit shall be guilty of a misdemea Your form is not within the a all, for the only falsehood the tomer could possibly tell under would be as to paying his bil some future time, which under law would not be a false stater at all, but a mere unfulfilled pr ise. You could not arrest anyb for that.

This form is simply a wri promise to pay for all groceries on credit. It gives absolutely security at all. Your position a your customer has signed it is cisely the same as if he had got goods without signing it—he liable for the price in both ca no more in the one case than in other.

Where a customer admits ha no assets, you cannot tie him with any contract which will s guard you, except a contract ass ing wages, or bearing someb else's signature as a guarantor

Pennsylvania News Items.

The Pittsburgh, Pa., newspapers charging that there exists in t district a combine of wholesale it and vegetable receivers which ds prices up even against ex-sive supply. The following is m the Pittsburgh "Dispatch":—

The household consumer may sk: "Why are prices so high when ie yards are so full of fruits and egetables?" The general public kely does not know that there is produce and fruit dealers' asso-ation here that fixes prices in the roduce yards. The price fixing is one through the medium of auction ales held every other day. It seems these auctions stool pigeons are mployed to make bids until prices re high enough to suit those con-olling the auctions. Then the ake bidders are given the sign to ease bidding.

If a heavy over-supply of any arm or orchard product arrives, ie new supply is not stored in the ike street yards, but is sidetracked the Thirty-sixth street yard, and held there while the "insiders" ay demurrage charges rather than ave the surplus come on the mar-et. If by being held it decays and not salable, it goes to the gar-age furnace, for what is some-ne's loss, usually the shipper's, is ie gain of the inside dealers, be-ause they get top prices for what ey are offering for sale.

The combination here is so big nd powerful that it really is a big actor in making wholesale prices other cities. Pittsburgh is one f the largest distributing centers of ruits and produce in the country, anking pretty close to New York that respect. Most of the farm nd orchard products from the outh and West, which eventually nd a market in West Virginia, Western Pennsylvania, parts of Ohio and New York, reach their estination by way of Pittsburgh, nd often shipments consigned to his city are switched off to some ther city before they reach Pitts-urgh, because those in control of ne situation here know that all hipments meant for Pittsburgh annot be sold here unless prices are reatly reduced.

Goods Delivered Both Telephones

This is not very well put together, typographically. The printer could have done a lot better than this, I think. To begin with, there is too much matter on this circular by far. It is badly crowded all through. And the type is jumbled. That scheme of using one kind of type for "Sunkist" and another kind for "oranges" is very poor craftsmanship. Then I see the printer has worked another style of type in for "Sunkist oranges" in the body of the paragraph. More space could have been gotten had the heading been cut down. Personally, I should have put the name and address at the bottom, but a good many advertisers like to put the name at the top. In that case I should have used simply the one word "Grabill's." No use to say "Grocery"; I assume everybody knows it is a grocery. And the address should have gone at the bottom. There is no need to use such large type; if the body of the advertisement attracts people, they will look up the address. This would have given almost an inch more space, and if the printer had distributed this through the body of the circular, it would have presented much better appearance.

I should have arranged the matter a little differently. Instead of the coffee matter which has been used, I should have used a heading like this: "Extra Stamps with Coffee in May and June." Followed by a brief statement that during the months named I should give stamps as follows with my different grades of coffee. No need to name the different prices twice, as has been done. What the prices beginning with Heinz beans are supposed to be I do not know. Are they special drives? If so, there should have been a head to say so. "Look at These," or "Every One of These is a Bargain."

The matter on the bottom is really the best advertising on the circular, yet it is given the least place. The paragraphs should have been separated with a rule, or at least with some space.

NOTE.—This department is devoted to the criticism of advertising matter sent in, to the devising of new advertising ideas for special occasions, upon request and to the suggesting of original advertisements when data is supplied. All communications sent for this Department should be addressed to the Editor of Science of Advertising. They will be taken up in strict rotation.

Preserving Meat Without Ice.

A number of Brazilian operators are about to use a new scheme for preserving fresh meat without ice. The process may find its way to this country. The treatment consists of boning the meat and putting it through a certain slight process of salting; then immersing it in special tanks containing a pickled preparation formed of meat juices and melted salt, where it is left for ten days. It is claimed that meat so treated is preserved indefinitely whether exposed later to air, heat, moisture or extreme cold. It is said that the meat thus prepared has a dark appearance, similar to that of dried meat, but that once dipped in water resumes its original appearance.

Selling Talks With Clerks

BY A MAN WHO HAS BEEN ONE

Conducted by W. E. SWEENEY, Manager for L. Lehman & Co.'s Department Food Store, Dover, N. J.

Shelves.—If you follow the eyes of brother grocers who come to visit your store, you will find them critically running along your shelves when they enter. Indicating that this part of your stock gets first attention.

Shelf arrangement is more suggestive of good or bad taste in a store than anything else. Not so much in the mixing of goods up as in the correct placing of these goods.

Sometimes you will see cereals or canned goods come half an inch or so over the shelf. Sometimes you will see them placed upside down and generally irregular.

This has a very bad effect on the eye of a neat housekeeper and a dangerous influence on all employees. Because, for instance, if indifference is shown in stock display on shelves, how can you expect your porter to pile his cases evenly in the stock room, or your errand boys to place bag salt "one on top of the other, lugs out"?

Where people stop to give their orders—at the first counter there is a chance to advertise goods that few of us fully appreciate. There they stand until waited upon, looking straight at your goods and signs, yet year in and year out we show them the same goods and inflict upon them the task of reading the same cards.

These sections should be changed every three months, allowing the goods to correspond with the seasons.

Constantly keeping fancy glass goods in the most valuable spot in the store, like advertising imported conserves, the right-hand space of every ad.

Just at present this particular section should represent vinegar, pickles, oil, salad dressing, potted meats, canned chicken, canned tongue, sardines, salmon and all the goods that are in summer demand.

Never mind the odd appearance of these things—they're odd because you have been told that glass goods should be there. But what you are after

Sell FRANKLIN CARTON SUGAR Instead of Bothering with Bags

One of our machines can fill 127 CARTONS with FRANKLIN CARTON SUGAR in the time it takes to fill, fold and tie a paper bag. There are 127 more sensible things to do in a grocery store than put up sugar; it's not only a foolish waste of time, even if the boy does it, but besides the cost of the labor you must also take the cost of the bags and the twine and the loss from overweight out of the slender margin of profit.

FRANKLIN CARTON SUGAR is ready to sell when you get it; it's as handy as cans of tomatoes or bottles of pickles. It's a tight, neat, clean, convenient, sanitary package that will please your customers as much as yourself. The CARTON does not burst on the way to a customer's home and let the sugar get over everything in the basket or box, it does not burst or fall over and spill when customers handle it. Women like its cleanliness; they like the sparkling white purity of the sugar. Once you start them buying it, they will always buy it.

You can buy FRANKLIN CARTON SUGAR in the original CONTAINERS of 24, 48, 60 and 120 lbs.

WHAT TO TELL CUSTOMERS

"Here's the finest sugar you can possibly buy—FRANKLIN CARTON SUGAR. In the first place, it's absolutely clean, pure sugar and, in the second place, the sanitary CARTON keeps it clean, to the last grain."

This is one of the firms the sale of whose products helps organize the Pennsylvania Retail Merchants

The Subscribers' Bargain List

Have you got any goods you don't want? Anything—canned goods, groceries, hardware, dry goods, anything at all that's in good condition, but won't sell for you.

If you will make a price on it we can possibly sell it for you in a hurry. Write us about it, stating the quantity, condition and your best price. You might give the original cost, too. We will give it a key number and offer it to our 4,000 subscribers. Your name will not appear unless you want it to. All sales ought to be on a cash basis.

The point is that what won't sell for you may be in everday demand for somebody else, who will be glad to get your stock of it at a bargain.

There will be no charge for this service anywhere—we do it to help along.

Deliver Your Goods in Sanitary Metal Baskets

These baskets are made of galvanized iron, reinforced and strengthened so as to last a long time. Being perforated, they are self-cleaning, also useless to the housewife enabling you to sell your wooden boxes.

Sanitary Galvanized Iron Metal Baskets are economical because they save space; durable, will outlast three of the old kind; modern, brings delivery system up to date; cleanly, no place for dirt to stay.

Price, $4 to $6 per dozen on baskets holding from one to four pecks. Order to-day

THE VALUE OF BRIGHT STORES

¶ The difficulty of making a sale—whether it be dry goods or vegetables, jewelry or shoes is increased tenfold in a poorly lighted store. Other things being equal, the Electrically lighted shop will do more business than the store which uses other illuminants. "Indoor Daylight" can only be obtained by the use of Mazda Electric lamps.

Campaign Starts to Advertise Butter and Cheese Into Greater Consumption

National Dairy Council Expects Big Results From the $50,000 It Will Spend Teaching People Why They Should Eat Less Meat and More Dairy Products.

In a recent issue it was announced that the National Dairy Council was about to spend several thousand dollars in advertising the virtues of butter and cheese in national publications. This advertising has now started and the first page of it has appeared in the "Saturday Evening Post." A small reproduction of the advertisement appears herewith.

The National Dairy Council has made the following statement as to its expectations for this advertising:—

> The advertising in the "Saturday Evening Post" is the biggest thing that has ever happened in the dairy industry.
> It's the opening gun in our proposed three years' campaign to increase the consumption of dairy products.
> It's the first of a series of similar advertisements to be run all over the country. It is to be quickly followed by pages, half pages and quarter pages in the big city. Sunday newspapers, which will ring with the story of our products will teach the American people to drink and use more milk, to cat and cook with more cheese, to serve more ice cream.
> This one advertisement alone reaches 2,000,000 families.
> It will be read in every city, every town, every hamlet, in the country. It will reach nearly one-tenth of our entire population. Wherever it is read and convinces the reader that, for his own good, he should use more dairy products, he can immediately be supplied; for our goods are on sale everywhere.
> This fortunate condition makes ours the most unique and most quickly effective advertising campaign ever launched.
> These present advertisements are part of a preliminary campaign to reach the consumers of our goods, and at the same time demonstrate to the dairy industry just how the National Dairy Council proposes to accomplish its great plan of increasing the consumption of dairy products and thereby uplift and advance the whole dairy business.
> This plan has been worked out and approved by the best minds of the industry. Its sponsors are firmly convinced of its soundness, its practicality and its effectiveness. They have backed their conviction by furnishing the funds for a $50,000 "sample campaign" in the hope that all engaged in the business will recognize the importance and widespread benefits of this undertaking.
> This is our message to the American people:—
> "Over-eating is a national evil.
> "Gluttony kills more than the sword.
> "Food intoxication exacts a greater toll than alcohol.
> "The high cost of living is in fact the cost of high living.
> "Eat less. Live better. Live longer. Be healthier. Be stronger. Earn more. Spend less.
> "Use more dairy products."
> We need at least $750,000 for a three years' campaign. With this we can burn the evil of over-eating into the American mind, until every earner, every housewife, stops to think about it seriously and adops the best remedy—"more dairy products."
>
> With the national mind prepared to accept the new gospel of food temperance, we can drive home the virtues of dairy products.
> The proof of the food value, the healthfulness, the economy of dairy products is overwhelming.
> It's in hundreds of books and Government reports which the people do not read. It's attested by the world's greatest authorities, in whom the people have confidence. Advertising will convey it to them.
>
> The material at hand is enormous. The story is fascinating and lends itself to advertising as few others.
> In the presentation of these great truths lies the security, the advancement and complete prosperity of the dairy industry and your business.
> Shall these truths remain buried in libraries, in Government archives and unknown to but few, or are we going to carry them into every home, cash them and double dairying?

Why Aren't Our Manufacturers Taking Advantage of the Scarcity of Imported Food Products

A Philadelphia Contributor Sketches the Demoralization Foreign Food Products Which Sell Largely in T Country and Asks Why Our Own Manufacturers A Standing Idle When They Might Be Getting T Business for Themselves.

I was greatly interested in reading an article in the "Modern Merchant and Grocery World" recently concerning the opportunity which the war afforded the American manufacturers of food products to increase their business. This because of the falling off in the supply of imported food products, and the need of finding something to take their place.

I, too, have been struck by this thought, and also by the fact that the American manufacturers have made almost no effort to seize this opportunity.

Take sardines. I have no doubt that the trade have been advised through your paper that foreign sardines are almost out of the market. There are a few yet of the French, the Norwegian and the Portuguese, but not sufficient for the demand, and the price is enormous. American packers, with one exception, are making not the slightest effort to get any of this waiting trade for themselves. The one packer referred to is packing a small sardine in olive oil, to retail at about a dime. It is not the equal of the foreign sardine, in fact cannot pack sardines over here would be, but it is a very good stitute, and is getting a footh This is the sole instance that I k of where an American sar packer has done anything to p himself on account of the war.

There is a grade of heavy Eng syrup which sells quite largely this market. It is very scarce, has advanced so much as to be most prohibitive. On to-day's ket, retailers must get as much 30 cents for a small tin.

One would think that someb over here would bring out a s to take its place, but nobody done so, as far as my knowle goes.

Take orange marmalade and English jams. They are very l sellers in this country, but the t has become exceedingly dem

ed. The English manufacturer hose orange marmalade sells most rgely in the United States has otten so he pays no attention to his merican orders. On account of bor troubles and the home war emand, he has no goods to ship ere, and if the war keeps on much nger we will have little or no imorted orange marmalade at all.

This marmalade is made from itter Seville oranges, and it is not robable that an article could be ade either from California or lorida oranges which would fill ie place of the foreign. But there no reason why the oranges could ot be brought over here from eville—we bring lemons from pain and her fruit conditions are ormal. All the raw material for ie English marmalade has to be aken over from Spain.

Nobody is paying the slightest atntion to this possibility.

English jams are even scarcer an marmalade, especially rasperry. Goods several years old are icking about the market, selling round 30 to 35 cents at retail, and ie rumor is there soon will be no ore.

The best raspberries and strawerries in the world are grown in is country, yet nobody has ever ried to make a jam after the Engsh fashion. The American raspérry jam is usually like dead sea shes in the mouth compared with he English. Yet with the same ruit there is no reason why we hould not make a jam that would ompare with the English.

The Florida possibilities for jam ave been sorely neglected. With o many oranges and grapefruit going to waste as do go to waste lown there every year, one would hink the raw material could almost e gotten for nothing. Still nobody as ever seriously attempted to tart in the jam business in Florida. Even the few products they make lown there, guava jelly, for intance, have been sold at prohibiive prices. A small tumbler of guava jelly, 30 cents. I understand hat one packer is about commencng to pack a guava jelly to retail t around 18 cents.

Foreign peas will this year also e conspicuous by their absence rom American markets. Many, in act most, French packers will pack one. Of course the Belgian packrs will pack none, and about the nly peas that will come here will e a few that Holland will pack.

Has anybody seen any American pea packer stirring himself to get any of this trade for himself? Now that the green color is eliminated from French peas, we can pack just as good peas—and as good-looking—as they can.

French mushrooms are almost prohibitive in price, French macaroni is coming along occasionally in such small lots as to amount to almost nothing, English firms like Crosse & Blackwell are three months behind in their orders, and altogether the situation in imported food products is in bad shape.

With most American manufacturers making not the slightest effort to take advantage of it. Is it not remarkable? H.

Proposed Freight Advance Will Mean Much to Shippers Who Have Sold California Products Delivered.

One Large Raisin Shipper Who Sold at a Price Delivered in Eastern Points Will Have to Lose $25,000 if the Advance Goes Into Effect September 1st.

Whether the proposed advance in freight rates from the Coast goes into effect September 1st, when it is announced to go into effect, or on January 1st, when the shippers want it to go into effect, is going to make a big difference to a number of shippers who have sold goods for delivery this fall at a delivered price.

One large shipper of dried fruits has sold several cars for delivery during the next few weeks at a price delivered in Eastern markets. He states that if the advance in freights goes into effect September 1st it will make a difference of $25,000 in his freight bills, all of which he will have to pay himself. There are a number of other shippers in the same boat, and not one of them remembered to protect himself against this contingency by inserting a clause in his contract that if freight rates advanced before delivery the buyer must pay the difference.

Hearings before the Interstate Commerce Commission, to decide when the advance will go into effect, will begin on Monday, August 14th. The Philadelphia Grocers' and Importers' Exchange will have representatives present to ask for a postponement.

Idle Money! A Net Loss

WHETHER your money is tied up in slow moving stock or is being used by those accounts you are forced to carry for six months or a year, it always represents a percentage of actual loss.

¶ Your capital has lost just that much earning capacity—it is not working for you, and idle capital is invariably a losing proposition. Not only are you losing the interest on that money, but also the legitimate profit it should produce in your business.

¶ The "Sperry" Service, through the national popularity of S. H. Green Stamps, offers two ways by which to better your business standing and increase your average profits.

¶ In the first place it will convert many of your charge accounts into cash business, and it will also show you a practical and economical way to move slow sellers—to turn over your stock quickly and to the best possible advantage.

¶ The introduction of our service will in no way alter your present policy of doing business if that policy is sound. It simply gives you the use of what is admitted to be the strongest selling appeal known to modern merchandising practice. It places a premium on prompt payment at so low a cost to you that you can and will figure its introduction a valuable asset to your business.

Here is the Federal Trade Commission's Bookkeeping System for Retailers

In Order to Teach Retailers to Know Their Costs, So That They May More Intelligently Meet Competition, the National Body Has Devised a Simple, But Complete Method by Which Retailers May Keep Their Books So as to Constantly be Informed as to Where They Stand.

[The Federal Trade Commission has found that the majority of retail merchants do not know accurately the cost of conducting their business for which reason they are unable to price their goods intelligently. There must be decided improvement in this direction before competition can be placed upon a sound basis and before we can expect a decrease in the heavy business death rate among retail merchants.

With the object of aiding retail merchants to improve their accounting methods, the Commission has outlined a simple system of accounts which provides for supplying the information necessary to properly direct a retail business. It was announced in a recent issue that this was being done and would shortly be issued. The Commission has sent a copy of the system to the "Modern Merchant and Grocery World" and requested its publication. Practically the entire system will be given, though only part of it can be published in this issue. The balance will appear next week.—Ed.]

The system of accounts outlined has been devised to meet the requirements of retail merchants. The aim has been to devise the least involved system which will give the information essential to successful management. The best system of accounts for any business is one which furnishes the information required with the least effort.

The value derived from an adequate system of accounts is obvious. The greatest value is that of making comparisons and analyzing differences. But before any fruitful comparison can be made between figures of different periods or between figures of different stores, it is absolutely necessary that the systems be uniform. With a uniform system of accounts in use, differences in items reflect differences in conditions, while without a uniform classification, differences in items may reflect only differences in accounting classification.

In order to maintain the simplicity of the system, no departmentalization of the accounts is provided for, but any concern operating distinct departments can readily adjust the system to show the results obtained in each department.

A merchant in order to price his goods properly must know his overhead expenses. With a proper arrangement of his accounts the percentage of overhead may be readily obtained. Goods not priced high enough to cover this percentage are actually sold at a loss. The most convenient way of arriving at the proper percentage to add to the first cost of goods for overhead is to use the average ratio of operating expenses to net sales covering a past period. For instance, if a merchant's annual sales for the last fiscal year were $25,000 and the expense of conducting his business was $5,000, his overhead was 20 per cent. By adding the desired percentage of profit on sales to this overhead percentage, and deducting from 100 gives the percentage of invoice cost to selling price. The invoice cost of an article divided by this percentage gives the selling price.

The rapidity of the turnover is a very important element in conducting a retail business. It is obvious that an increase in turnover goes hand in hand with an increase in profit. A slow turnover may be due to poorly selected stock, to overstocking, or to an inefficient selling organization. No effort should be spared to increase the turnover to its maximum. To ascertain the turnover divide the cost of goods sold during the year by the cost of the average stock carried.

BOOKS OF ACCOUNTS AND STATEMENTS.

To operate the system of accounts here outlined requires but four books of account, namely, journal, general cash book, invoice book and ledger. Sales tickets and credit tickets are used for recording sales and sales returns.

From these books certain statements, particularly a monthly summary of business, a profit and loss statement, and a balance sheet, should be prepared at definite periods in order to present the results in comprehensive form.

JOURNAL.

The ordinary two-column journal can be used. The opening entry is an inventory of the assets and liabilities.

The totals of the charge sales as shown by the charge tickets should be entered in the Journal, debiting Accounts Receivable, and crediting Sales. The totals of the credit tickets are also entered in the Journal, debiting Sales with returns and Sales Allowances with price concessions and crediting Accounts Receivable.

Transactions which do not go through either the Cash Book or Invoice Book should also be journalized. These entries comprise such items as notes receivable and payable, allowances or corrections of purchase invoices after entry in the Invoice Book, the various adjusting entries at the end of the month, and the closing entries at the end of the fiscal period.

Journal entries affecting trade customers' and trade creditors' accounts will also have to be posted, respectively, to Accounts Receivable account and Accounts Payable account.

GENERAL CASH BOOK.

This book is for recording all cash transactions. The left hand, or debit, side is for recording receipts, and columns should be headed as follows, in the order named: Date, Name of Account, Description, Ledger Folio or Lf, Collections on Accounts Receivable, Cash Sales, and General Accounts. The right hand, or credit, side is for recording payments, and these columns should be headed: Date, Name of Account, Description, Check No., Ledger Folio or LF, Discount on Purchases, Payments on Accounts Payable, and General Accounts.

The total cash receipts of each day should be deposited daily in bank and all payments should be made by check. The total of cash sales for the month should be checked against the total of cash sales tickets, and is then posted to the credit of "Sales," that of the "Collections on Accounts Receivable" to the credit of "Accounts Receivable account," and that of "Payments on Accounts Payable" to the debit of "Accounts Payable account." The total of the Discount on Purchases column is also posted to the debit of Accounts Payable.

All payments for expense items other than petty cash should be entered on the cash book as made and posted therefrom to the prop accounts. At the end of the mon all expense bills for the mon should be paid, so as to insure t expense being charged in proper month.

Petty cash disbursements, su as car tickets, telegrams, and su minor items for which it is not e pedient to draw checks, should handled as follows:—

A check should be drawn for amount sufficient to cover petty c bursements for a definite period. the end of the period the cash should prepare his petty cash sta ment, which should be supported vouchers, and a check drawn the exact amount of the statem thereby restoring the petty c fund to the original amount. T check should be entered in the c book in the regular way, charg the various expense accounts shown by the petty cash statem

The balance of the general c book at all times should check w the balance as shown by the ch book plus the amount advanced petty cash.

In the check book keep che and deposits footed separat When the bank book is balanc check up the bank list, then arrange the checks in numer order, and check with the stubs. any checks are outstanding, m them on the stub and deduct fr total of checks drawn; the ch book balance will then agree w the bank book balance.

INVOICE BOOK.

This book contains the record the invoices or purchases of m chandise only and should carry following headings: Date of En Date of Invoice, Number of voice, From Whom Purchased, A dress, Ledger Folio or LF, Amount of Invoice.

The postings are made di from this book into the Purch Ledger and the total at the end the month carried to the debit Merchandise Purchases and to credit of Accounts Payable.

Where the business is dep mentalized a more elaborate fo of Invoice Book should be us giving departmental subdivisions purchases.

SALES AND CREDIT TICKETS.

The use of sales and credit ti ets for recording sales and sa returns has become almost u versal.

The New York Letter

ow Consumers Look at Stevens Bill. Pennsylvania Man Heads Jobbers' Educational Campaign. Gasoline at Last Goes Off. Market Summary.

ecial Correspondence of "Modern Merchant and Grocery World."

New York, August 11, 1916.

The National Trade Association as been making a canvass among e housewives of New York City order to learn what their attitude ould be towards the Stevens bill, hich would allow a manufacturer f trade-marked products to fix the holesale and retail selling price. he investigation was made by aymond B. Callahan, of New ork University. Four hundred tters were sent to married women f moderate means living in reater New York. Of these, 35 er cent. answered. The following uestions were submitted to all of iem:—

1. When you go to a grocery store and find two articles of similar nature for sale at the same price, one of which is a nationally advertised article and the other an unadvertised article, which article do you purchase?

2. When you find two articles of a similar nature for sale at different prices, the unadvertised article being priced lower than the advertised article, which do you buy?

3. Are you more inclined to purchase an advertised article when the retail price thereof is stated in the advertisement than when no price is stated?

4. Do you find that the advertised articles are better quality as a general rule than unadvertised articles selling at the same price?

5. When some nationally advertised grocery article which you use is advertised by the manufacturer as being on sale in retail stores at a certain price, and some grocery or department store offers the article for sale at less than the advertised price—

(a) Does it lower your estimation of the value of the advertised article?

(b) Do you continue to purchase the article at the place where you have been purchasing it, or do you go and purchase it at the store which offers the article at less than the standard price?

(c) Does the cut in the price cause you to increase your consumption of the article?

(d) If later the cut price is raised back to the standard price, do you stop using the article and use another brand in its place?

6. Do you find that stores which sell nationally advertised articles at less than the advertised price also sell other articles cheaper than the stores which do not cut the prices on advertised articles?

7. At which class of grocery stores, as classified below, do you purchase most of your groceries?

(a) Small grocery store in your neighborhood?

(b) Large retail grocery store (as Park & Tilford or Acker, Merrall & Condit Co.).

(c) Chain grocery store (as Butler stores, Daniel Reeves stores, Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. stores, Gristede Bros. stores, Parker stores and the Roylston stores)?

(d) Department stores handling groceries (as Macy's, Greenhut's and Abraham & Straus)?

8. Do you believe that the manufacturers of articles which they put out under a trade name (as "Sapolio," "Uneeda," "Beech-Nut," "Sunshine," "Force," etc.), should be empowered by national law to designate the price which the retailer must charge you for the article?

The answers cannot be stated in full, but the conclusions reached by the investigator, based upon the answers, are as follows:—

Lower price is not as strong a weapon, when used to wean the public's patronage from an extensively advertised product to an unadvertised product, as has generally been supposed.

Stating the retail selling price of an article in the manufacturer's advertisement to the general public tends to stimulate the sale of that article to a greater extent than would be the case if the retail price were not stated in the advertisement.

Price cutting by retailers, selling an article below the "standard price," increases the general public's consumption of the article which is being sold below the standard price.

Cutting the standard price of a well-known article diminishes the number of units of that article sold by stores which do not cut the price, and to a more than proportionate extent increases the number of units of that article sold by stores which do cut the price of the article.

Some stores make "leaders" by cutting prices only on trade-marked articles; other stores cut prices indiscriminately on all articles, whether trade-marked or not.

Three-fourths of that class of people which purchase most of the groceries in New York City, namely, the housewives, do not favor any legislation which would grant manufacturers of trade-marked articles the right to designate the retail price at which retail dealers must sell those articles to the general public.

Taxing Competition We Can't Meet.

A cry which I am beginning to hear with increasing frequency, and which impresses me more each time I hear it with being both cowardly and weak, is the cry to tax competition which we can't meet. You see it and you hear it everywhere, especially about chain stores. One man suggested the other day that a special tax should be imposed on the chain stores in this way: that a concern with a chain of stores should pay so much for No. 1 store, twice as much for No. 2, three times as much for No. 3, and so on until of course the chain with several hundred stores would be swamped under a burden of tax and thus destroyed.

What was the basis of the argument for this sort of tax? That it was illegitimate to own more than one store? That it was a menace to the public? No; it was because chain stores are a nuisance to the individual retailer—which they undoubtedly are—and that they present a form of competition which the individual retailer can't meet. In a word, I am up against competition which I cannot meet and live—kill it for me by taxation.

As well tax all the beautiful women at the instance of the ugly women, who cannot meet their competition; or all the brilliant and successful lawyers at the instance of the stupid and unsuccessful ones, who cannot meet their competition, or tax anybody who by reason of superior attainments in any direction outdistances somebody else.

Equality in business is totally unattainable, and a thousand tax laws will not bring it one step nearer.

Let Public Business Wait.

Elsewhere in this issue it is reported in a Washington Dispatch that the Stevens bill, which would give manufacturers of trade-marked merchandise the right to fix the wholesale and retail selling price, would not be considered at the present session. In the fall the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce will "set a date for more hearings." Congressman Dan V. Stephens, who is in charge of the bill, so writes to the American Fair Trade League.

I have seen a copy of Mr. Stephens letter and it contains something which I feel constrained to mention. After giving the League reasons for not holding any more hearings on the bill now, the letter goes on:—

> In addition to this, Judge Adamson (chairman Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee) is in the midst of his primary campaign and these hearings would swamp his office with correspondence that would greatly harass and annoy him. He is perfectly willing to give us a hearing whenever we want it when we come back here after the summer vacation.

Public business, for which Judge Adamson is elected and paid, must wait because he is in the midst of his primary campaign! This of course means his campaign for re-election. It would be too bad to harass and annoy the Judge with correspondence about public business, even though he is taking the public money to attend to it, while he is engrossed with his private business. Truly, these noble public servants are a joke!

Motor Cars as Dead-Beat Makers.

We hear a great deal about what the automobile has done to open up the country, listen to what it has done to the retail trade of Kansas, as told by the State secretary, who has just launched the idea of a State-wide dead beat department:—

> We found that many persons who did not pay their bills at one town had purchased motor cars, and it was easy for them to drive a few miles further and open a new account, and when they had reached the limit they would drive a few miles further in another direction and open another account.
> We discovered some surprising facts about the citizens of our State when the merchants of the five counties organized the central bureau. We found, in some cases, as many as eleven merchants carrying the accounts of the same man, and he had never paid but little, if any, on any account.
> When the merchant got to the point where he was forced to refuse credit the customer simply drove his motor car a few more miles and became the customer of another merchant. It is a new business condition brought about entirely by the motor car.

There is nothing in existence now, in any State that I know of, to prevent an adroit and ingenious dead beat from living off the fat of the land without paying a cent for it. He will find it harder to do it in some States than in others, and he may even have to move occasionally, but it can to-day be done practically everywhere. It would take pretty close affiliation among the retailers of a State, or of a county or city, to prevent this, and it is a question if it could ever be eliminated anything like altogether. But it could be very greatly duced. A State-wide dead beat —if kept up to date—would hel lot, and of course the cash syst would settle the whole thing.

The Butter and Cheese Advertising.

The National Dairy Council started to spend its $50,000 to vertise butt cheese and ot dairy produ into greater c sumption. It is going into nati ally circulated mediums with la spaces, and very probably the vertising will be seen and read.

But will it sell more cheese butter? I can't see how. W a campaign like this starts, I am pressed by the tremendous vag ness of it. The argument is general that it is an argument nothing in particular. Eat m cheese. What cheese? There score of kinds and a million bra Some are good, some are po The Sunkist orange campaign s ceeded because it was a solicitat for a particular identified brand

The National Canners' Asso tion spent about the same sum few years ago to advertise "can goods" into increased consumpti The scheme completely failed. I ferent reasons were given why failed, but my reason was the that the advertising, being tied nothing, dissipated itself into air.

If the National Dairy Cou had a brand of cheese and a bra of butter, its advertising would more good in a week than its branded advertising can do in whole three years it is supposed run.

Pennsylvania Organization Notes.

The Business Men's Association of Royersford will give a community picnic on August 24th. It will be a general holiday for the town and all stores will be closed.

The Business Men's League of Manheim have planned an automobile outing for Wednesday, August 16th. They will travel about 90 miles, visiting the following towns: Lebanon, Annville, Palmyra, Hershey, Harrisburg, Middletown, Elizabethtown and Mt. Joy.

AMONG THE TRADE.

The Philadelphia Retail Grocers Association held its annual picnic at Willow Grove last Wednesday, the day being probably the most beautiful of the entire summer. The attendance was heavy. Athletic events were the chief attraction, races, football contests for women, a baseball game and a baby sh being the principal events. prizes were various grocery pr ucts. The committee in charge as follows: Albert Kaiser, O. Patterson, Reno Schoch, Francis Farley, William N. Ross, chairm of the Executive Committee; H. Marshall, Committee on Gene Arrangements; William Dougla Sports Committee; C. K. Dewe baseball, and H. W. Fisher, pa amusements.

We would be pleased to have for publication in this column the ideas of our readers upon trade topics, being understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for any views expressed therein. All communications must be accompanied by the writer's name and address as an evidence of good faith, but not necessarily for publication. All inquiries within our power to answer will also be noticed in this department.

Want to Systematize Their Business.

Glassport, Pa., Aug. 8, 1916.
To the Editor.

Dear Sir:—You had a little article on bookkeeping in your valuable paper recently and for further information you referred us to one of the colleges.

We would like to systemize our business so as to know accurately our standing monthly. We are doing a business of $3,000 a month. We have a 160 McCaskey register for keeping track of our credit accounts.

Hoping you will favor us with some additional information, we remain, Yours truly,
J. PAPERNICK & SONS.

Read carefully the bookkeeping system for retailers published in part in this issue; that should give you exactly what you want.

Remarkable Falling Off in Failures in July.

General Stores Show Only About Half of July 1915 and Lowest Record for Five Years. Other Lines Also Show Sharp Reductions.

We have received the Dun report of the July failures in all of the principal commercial lines. They all show a decided falling off as compared with July, 1915.

The figures are as follows:—

General Stores.—July, 1916, 72; liabilities, $372,417; July, 1915, 141; liabilities, $767,983 (this is a falling off of almost 50 per cent. and is the lowest record in five years).

Groceries.—July, 1916, 257; liabilities, $861,856; July, 1915, 300; liabilities, $1,108,908.

Clothing and Furnishing.—July, 1916, 67; liabilities, $699,024; July, 1915, 136; liabilities, $956,765.

Dry Goods.—July, 1916, 42; liabilities, $492,245; July, 1915, 80; liabilities, $490,253.

Shoes.—July, 1916, 25; liabilities, $156,912; July, 1915, 41; liabilities, $237,331.

Hardware.—July, 1916, 28; liabilities, $460,946: July, 1915, 33; liabilities, $282,017.

Any retailer who sells any and all advertised goods, without discrimination, is foolish. Undoubtedly some such goods have become, for various reasons, unprofitable merchandise, and the thing for him to do is to pick and choose.

If he will do that, he will be selling the best and most profitable merchandise in the world.

Massachusetts Senator Attacks Westfield Plan as Advertising Scheme

Most Scathing Indictment of the Whole Scheme is Laid Before the Federal Trade Commission, Which is Asked to Act. Claim Made That the Westfield Board of Health and Prof. Allyn Are Both Being Exploited by New York Publisher. No Real Useful Food Standards at All.

The most savage attack which has ever been made upon the Westfield plan of standardizing food products has just been made in a letter sent by Senator John F. Sheehan, of Holyoke, Mass., to the Federal Trade Commission, complaining of the whole Westfield enterprise as an advertising scheme verging on the fraudulent.

In a recent issue the substance of another attack on the Westfield plan by the American Chemical Society was published, and a full history of the scheme was then given. Senator Sheehan's letter also explains the plan and how it has been exploited. We reproduce the following extracts:—

Copy.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS,

Senate Chamber, Boston.

To the Honorable, the Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D. C.

Gentlemen:—Your attention is respectfully invited to the following statement. Severe criticism reflecting upon the administration of local Boards of Health of this State having recently appeared here, it becomes my duty, as Senator of the Second Hampden District of the Commonwealth, to institute inquiries to ascertain in how far such criticisms applied to the four Boards of Health in my district, among which is that of Westfield, Mass. My investigations, relative to the Board of Health of Westfield, indicate that one serious condition exists therewith which is beyond State control. Assuming it to be within the jurisdiction of your Honorable Commission, the facts are brought to your notice as a matter of public duty.

Within the past few years public notice has been taken of what seemed to be an authentic list of so-called pure foods alleged to have been approved and indorsed by the Westfield, Mass., Board of Health. Nation wide publicity has been given to this list through prominent New York publications, both in advertising and editorial columns, and these have referred back to thousands of examinations made by this Board of Health or Lewis B. Allyn, before the purity of the listed foods could be finally determined; the list has been printed and many thousands of copies circulated for pay, or otherwise; other Westfield literature makes alluring claims to the superiority of the foods listed in its name and an attractive picture is established for the careful housewife. The representations made have impressed my own constituents, and no doubt influence their selection of food products accordingly.

I now feel that instead of being the disinterested public spirited movement, which the public believes it to be, this Westfield proposition, from first to last, is a huge advertising scheme, supported by private interests, that it is without an element of public service, and has no basis of scientific truth.

In support of my own observations and conclusions as to the character of this so-called Westfield Standard, I quote as follows from a statement furnished me, in my official capacity, by an official of this Commonwealth:—

> The Board of Health of Westfield is engaged in activities outside of its statutory functions. In its annual report of 1913, this Board published an alleged standard for foods, and special reports have been published and are still being circulated containing lists of foods claimed to have been examined and passed as conforming to this standard. * * *
> The reports made by the chemist of this Board, Lewis B. Allyn, refer to the large amount of work done by the Board because of the examination and the determination of the admission of food articles to these lists. Other literature shows that a large number of these lists have been distributed or sold for cash, the claims varying from many thousands to nearly 1,000,000 copies so distributed. Other literature claims that these lists contain practically all food products that are pure, clean and wholesome, which naturally implies that practically all food products have been examined by this Board and that those not listed are not pure, clean and wholesome. The facts and information show that this so-called Westfield Standard is only a name given to a preferred list of foods. The foods so listed have not been examined, as is represented, by any scientific test by the Westfield Board of Health. The method adopted for listing these foods will be diclosed later.
> The Westfield Board of Trade has neither the laboratory facilities nor the employees qualified to make the necessary examinations nor the money with which to carry out the extensive investigations which should be made in order to ascertain that all the food articles listed comply with the requirements of the alleged standard. It could not have made the necessary investigations to certify that all the foods in the list were "packed and sold under sanitary conditions," for such investigations would have cost millions of dollars and this Board with its three members and six employees spends only about $7,000 per annum.
> There is unmistakable evidence that the Westfield Board of Health has allowed itself to be commercialized for a money making scheme. Lewis B. Allyn, the chemist of the Board, is also employed in a private laboratory operated by a New York publication with advertising space for sale. He acts as the chemist and food editor of this publication. The name of the Westfield Board of Health furnishes the official prestige for the articles advertised under this system. A letter was written by this publication making a proposition to an advertiser in which the indorsement of Mr. Allyn and the Westfield Board of Health is the consideration offered, and advertisements have appeared showing that official indorsements have been obtained from this Board for certain food articles advertised in the publication.
> This alleged standard is of unusual character as it excludes from food substances found not to be unwholesome in food, and it contradicts official standards of purity established by the United States Department of Agriculture and recognized by every State in the Union as authoritative. This standard seems designed to select for exclusion from the list foods containing certain substances which have been matters of trade controversy among sharply competing manufacturers. By this process of elimination one class of manufacturers has been favored to the exclusion of the other class and a gigantic advertising propaganda has been developed, supported by the favored class, made valuable and impressive because the name of the Westfield Board of Health is used in association with the enterprise, and which would be utterly useless without the prestige which goes with the name.
> This advertising scheme found its way into a syndicated list of some ninety newspapers throughout the country, where it was run for about twenty-six weeks, and this false doctrine spread accordingly.
> The American Chemical Society, at its meeting last month, unanimously reported on this Westfield proposition as among those movements which are "altogether wrong in principle and opposed to the best interest of the public," one reason being because "almost without exception profiting financially by means of advertising is directly connected in one way or another with such campaigns. The movements are, therefore, not disinterested."

A member of the committee of the American Chemical Society, which investigated this Westfield Standard, states that the Westfield laboratory, in which the public is told that thousands of elaborate tests have been made, "does not exceed 20 x 25 feet in size and part of this space is used for desks and records and clerical work." This is the laboratory; the McClure publications is its proprietor; Lewis B. Allyn (chemist of the town) is its employee and out of this combination comes the absurd claims, both in the reading and advertising columns, of the McClure publications, that the standards herein established are actually higher than either the National or State government—an alleged official standard backed by private enterprise.

Evidence in support of the above statement is at your disposal. There is further evidence, taken by the Commonwealth, and also at your disposal which seriously impeaches the professional ability of Lewis B. Allyn to determine any question of food value or purity—a vital fact in this connection because the whole miserable business of deception of the American public through newspaper advertising of the "Westfield Standard" or "Westfield Movement" is based upon the supposed integrity of the chemical examinations behind the claims made for that standard. Duty demands a correction of this deplorable evil of trading, through deceptive practices, to excite fear on matters of food consumption in its relation to health, and I ask your careful and immediate consideration of the foregoing.

Very respectfully,

(Signed) JOHN F. SHEEHAN,
Second Hampden Senatorial District.

The Federal Trade Commissi is reported to be making an i vestigation into the scheme, thou there is some question as to how can very well act, even though should find all of Senator Sheeha statements justified.

House Passes Bill Standardizing S of Fruit Baskets.

The House of Representatives passed the bill designed to standard the climax basket for grapes. T measure will be sent to the Senate i mediately in the hope that it may crowded through some dull moment fore the adjournment of the session Congress. As passed by the House bill designs to accomplish two purpos first, to fix the standard for climax b kets for grapes and other fruits a vegetables and, secondly, to fix standa for baskets and other containers small fruits, berries and vegetab The climax basket is the name of standard basket which has been g erally used by the grape growers of country. This basket is not manuf tured by any given manufacturer, is generally known by the term "clim basket." Up to this time this bas has not been standardized as to si and for that reason those grape gro ers who are pursuing a legitimate dustry, and who are honestly ende oring to give their customers f measurements, are suffering consid able loss because of another class grape merchants, who are selling same commodity in baskets which t call climax baskets, but which, in fa are smaller in capacity than the bas generally known to the trade as climax basket. The second purpose the bill is to standardize baskets a other containers which differ from climax baskets, so as to insure hone in the fruit, berry and vegetable bu ness when resort is had to a differ basket as the container. The requ for a standard smaller basket for b ries, etc., comes largely from the Sou and Middle West.

The Grocery Markets

Tea.

The tea market shows absolutely change from a week ago. The nand is still comparatively light l by reason of this most holders still willing to make occasional ıcessions. New tea is figuring to ne extent in the market, and re will probably be no important ınge until the demand improves. e undertone of the market is ady to firm.

Coffee.

The market for all desirable ıdes of Rio and Santos coffee ›ws a slight fractional improve- nt for the week. The Brazil vs is somewhat irregular but ›ws little change as compared h last week. The demand for azil coffees is still comparatively ht. Mild coffees are unchanged price and in comparatively small nand. Java and Mocha un- ınged.

Sugar.

The sugar market has become ısiderably demoralized during the ek. Sales of raws have been de as low as 5¾ cents, which is ecline of about ⅝ from the high- point. All holders of raws will sell at that figure, but the mar- is practically not above 6.02 ›where. The refined market has ıe to pieces during the week, al- ugh it has recovered somewhat. ne of the New York refiners cut prices of granulated to 7 cents, ers dropped to 7.35 and still ers to 7.25. At this writing the ent price has disappeared and present price ranges from 7.25 7.35. Demand is still light.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose has shown no change for week, but is not unlikely to ad- ıce again if corn continues as n as it is now. Compound syrup very dull at ruling quotations. gar syrup and molasses are un- ınged and dull.

Fish.

The market for shore mackerel s advanced again on account of rcity, and some holders are now ing $24 per barrel. This is a y high price, in fact not far from ce what it ought to be at this son. Buyers are taking mack- erel as they need them, but are not enthusiastic. Irish and Norway mackerel situation is unchanged. The new price has been named on cod, about 3 cents per pound above normal. Scarcity is the rea- son given. Hake and haddock will probably rule at about the same parity above normal. Domestic and imported sardines are all un- changed and in moderate demand. No prices have been named as yet on new Alaska salmon, but will be in a short time. It is expected that pinks will open at 92½ to 95 cents and reds around $1.60. Of course, this is mere speculation. Last year pinks opened at 65 cents, at least they were reduced to that shortly after the opening, and reds also opened at considerably less than the expected price this year. The pack of Alaska salmon is from 20 to 30 per cent. short. England has bought about twice as much as usual sub- ject to the opening price. If she confirms, it will make a steady to firm market on this side throughout the season, particularly as sockeye salmon is this year being packed in very small quantities.

Canned Goods.

The tomato market is not materi- ally changed from last week; 1915 pack can be bought at 90 cents de- livered. New goods are quoted at 85 cents f. o. b. factory and goods for later delivery at about 82½ cents f. o. b. factory. The pack still looks good. If nothing interferes with it it will probably be large. The Wisconsin and New York pea packs are about over and will very likely average about 25 per cent. short. Corn is still steady to firm; fair demand. Apples are looking up a little and are now quoted at $2.25 for New York State gallons in a large way. This is an advance of about 15 cents. California canned goods show no change. There has been a rather good de- mand in order to avoid the expected advance in freight rates on Septem- ber 1st. It is not certain, however, whether the advance will take place then or later, as hearings are to be held on the subject beginning with the coming month. Small Eastern staple canned goods show no change. String beans are short everywhere, and so are cherries, as has previously been reported. There has been a large absorption of the current pack of canned goods and people are beginning to predict that early next year it will take some scratching to get hold of much.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are unchanged at the de- cline reported last week, demand being quite light. Peaches, apri- cots, raisins and currants are all un- changed and practically neglected.

Beans and Peas.

The market for pea beans has dropped to $5.50 per bushel in a large way. The demand has been and still is extremely light. Few people would believe the tremendous decline in the demand for beans which set in the minute the market reached the recent high price. Mar- rows range from $5.50 to $5.75 per bushel in a large way. As for limas, they are being sold from second hands on spot at about ¼ cent be- low the price to come forward, which is about 7¼ cents a pound in a large way. Green and Scotch peas are unchanged but firm.

Butter.

There is an active consumptive demand for all grades of butter, and the market is firm at an advance of 1 cent. A large percentage of the arrivals shows the effects of the heat and is sold below the market. The percentage of fine butter is now very small. Print butter is very scarce and firm at full quotations. Continued firmness is the outlook.

Eggs.

The egg market is very firm at an advance of from 1 to 2 cents per dozen. Good eggs are extremely scarce on account of the effects of the heat on shipments. For some time there will probably be a light supply and continued high prices.

Cheese.

The cheese market is firm at an advance of ¼ to ½ cent, with a very good consumptive demand. Exporters are reported to be buying very largely and the receipts are ab- sorbed on arrival. Future depends upon the export trade very largely, as the consumptive demand is about normal.

Provisions.

All cuts of smoked meats are firm and unchanged, with a good con- sumptive demand. Pure and com- pound lard are firm, and if there is any change there will probably be a slight advance. Barreled pork, dried beef and canned meats are all unchanged and in normal consump- tive demand, but dried beef is ex- tremely high, and practically all meat products are scarce and in the same condition.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Imported Fish Specialties.

With the exceedingly hot weather pre- vailing all over this country during last week, any particular movement in the salt fish business was, of course, entirely out of the question.

Imported oil sardines are selling in the same hand-to-mouth way, and would be selling very much better if prices were not so extraordinarily high. Our people in France report a very moderate catch of very large fish, which are not at all suitable for the American market. In Portugal they are getting just a few fish, not enough to affect the market one way or the other, and prices remain high. In Norway they are getting some splendid little summer fish and are mak- ing them into smoked sardines and sell- ing them as fast as they are mak- ing them at such enormously high prices that if we import the goods here we have to sell them either at cost or even below to make them move at all.

Spices.

The market is fairly active, though only in a routine way. Changes have been few during the week. Our market at present is without a doubt the cheap- est of all the world's markets for spices, seeds and herbs. This position may be changed at any time.

Pepper.—Fairly steady. Crops are no doubt short. Supplies in first hands are small. Any unusual demand will have a tendency to advance prices.

Red Peppers.—In fairly active de- mand, at generally unchanged prices.

Cloves.—Are higher for fall shipment from Zanzibar. The demand here is on the increase.

Pimento (Allspice).—Unchanged and rather dull.

Nutmegs.—Are now in fairly active request. Prices are somewhat easier.

Cassias.—Saigon in fairly active de- mand. Batavia is dull and easier. China grades are unsettled and in fair demand.

Gingers.—Spot goods are low. Crops are reported short. Present prices we consider cheap and likely to go higher.

Green Ginger Root.—Demand is fair. Present values are likely to be main- tained for the next two or three weeks.

Tapiocas.—Dull at present. Prices are unchanged.

Paprikas.—Jobbing orders are coming along fairly well. There is no big de- mand at present. Prices are unchanged.

Seeds, Herbs, Etc.—Seeds, especially mustard and caraway, are a little lower. Celery is now beginning to move in a satisfactory way. Herbs are scarce and high prices may be expected during Sep- tember and October.

Foreign Grocery Specialties.

Italian olive oil has taken a sudden rise. Our agents in Italy cable a strong- ly advancing market, but we anticipated this for some time past. The demand for pure olive oil has been exceptionally good and continues so all over the country, and olive oil has been one of the commodities that has really shown very little advance, if any. One must take into consideration also that the de- mand for pure olive oil has increased very materially in this country since prices for cotton oil and other substitute oils have been so high.

One of our principal packers of peas in France writes that he will be unable to pack any of these goods this season, owing to the scarcity of labor.

Japanese crab meat selling exceedingly well and prices are tending higher.

Spanish red peppers (pimentos) continue rather scarce and high in price.

Garlic.—In only fair demand, with prices unchanged and rather in buyers' favor, owing to the lower market in Italy. Still, Italian asking prices are above New York parity.

Business in general is very good considering the scarcity and high prices for all imported foodstuffs.

Rice.

There still exists radical differences of opinion as to the outlook for business, and even those views which are regarded the most reliable do not seem to foretell very clearly the conditions expected to prevail as we approach the fall season. Of course, this is quite natural when it is considered that we are just coming into the harvesting period Everything depends on the final outcome of the new crop—as to quality and yield. At the present time this market is practically featureless and devoid of interest, the offerings are of all grades of Honduras and Blue Rose and those qualities which are in evidence are held firm, as the lateness of the crop here has had a stiffening influence upon holders who feel confident that prices will continue strong because of the comparatively light carry over.

Advices from the South along the Atlantic coast note quiet conditions, with few offerings.

At New Orleans the market is very strong. New crop offered in limited quantities and commanding high prices. Blue Rose also holds firm, with few offerings. Japans continue very scarce. With favorable weather heavy receipts of "new crop" are expected during this week.

In the Interior, Southwest Louisiana, Texas and Arkansas, advices on the growing crop are very satisfactory and harvesting is anticipated in two or three weeks. D. TALMAGE'S SONS CO.

Salmon.

Heavy foreign demand continues, buyers paying for Red Alaska talls $1.60 and higher, pinks 90 to 95 cents. Early chums are selling domestic at 80 to 85 cents.

As freight rates advance 25 cents per 100 pounds on September 1st, the call for August shipment is greater than the supply. Red Alaska salmon is short, but how much short no one seems to know. The total sockeye pack to date is considered less than 35,000 cases sockeye halves. Some sales of sockeye halves are reported around $1.40.

A sales ticket must be made out for every sale and the daily total of these gives the sales for the day. The cash sales tickets are checked against the cash received and the charge tickets go to the bookkeeper. Credit tickets must be made out for credits to customers and these likewise go to the bookkeeper.

LEDGER.

The accounts in the ledger should be arranged in the following order:

1. General accounts,
2. Accounts with trade creditors,
3. Accounts with trade debtors, allotting to each class such space in the ledger as may be necessary.

The general accounts should be arranged in logical order. (See arrangement of accounts.)

Accounts with trade creditors and with trade debtors should be arranged alphabetically, using preferably a loose leaf ledger.

Where the volume of business permits, it is advisable to use three ledgers, a general ledger, a purchase ledger, and a sales ledger, keeping controlling accounts of the purchase ledger and the sales ledger in the general ledger.

Where only one ledger is used it should be divided into three sections corresponding with the above.

The balances of the purchase ledger and of the sales ledger, or of these sections of the ledger if only one book is used, must agree with the balances of the Accounts Payable account and of the Accounts Receivable account. The advantage of these controlling accounts is that the aggregate of accounts payable and of accounts receivable can be had at any time without listing the balances of the individual accounts.

Customers are charged with goods purchased direct from the charge tickets. These tickets are first listed, then turned over to the bookkeeper, who posts them to the debit of the proper accounts; listing the amounts as he posts, then comparing his total with that of the first list, which must agree. Credit entries for allowances, reductions, cash discounts, or returned goods, are made from credit tickets in exactly the same manner.

Posting to the ledger therefore must come from one of four sources—the cash book, the journal, the invoice book, or the sales and credit tickets.

MONTHLY SUMMARY OF BUSINESS.

This record, Form A, will be found very useful for monthly and yearly comparisons of expenses and ratios. It is arranged with colum for sales, both cash and credit a total, and for the various expens of the business. The figures this statement are taken from t ledger.

Each month the figures for th month should be added to the pr vious total so that the record w give the totals from the first of t year to date as well as the month totals.

PROFIT AND LOSS STATEMENT.

Selling Talks With Clerks

BY A MAN WHO HAS BEEN ONE

Conducted by W. E. SWEENEY, Manager for L. Lehman & Co.'s Department Food Store, Dover, N. J.

Printing Signs—Is ad. writing condensed, and the first thought in your mind should be qualify the article so it will appeal. "Peaches, 10 Cents a Box," is poor advertising. But, "Large Ripe, Mellow Peaches, 10 Cents a Box," says something.

"Fine Quality Mixed Tea, 50 Cents a Pound," won't attract nearly as many buyers as "No. 1 Strong, Flowery Ceylon Tea for Icing at 50 Cents Pound."

A certain store had some very handsome potatoes in stock one day last week. The sign read, "Potatoes—½ Bushel Basket, 55 Cents"; nothing to it. He could have truthfully made it read, "First Arrival Jersey Giant Smooth Skin Potatoes, 55 Cents Basket." They were of the first arrival of giants at that.

Before you wet your brush write out your stuff on paper, boiling it down to as few words as possible, then think whether that card would appeal to you were you, say, in the insurance business.

When a woman asks you what kind of succotash that is you sell for 15 cents a can, you don't, or you shouldn't, stop by saying it's "Maine succotash"; you say the lima beans are the tiny variety, nearly all of them green, they have no husky coating and the corn itself is young and very tender and of a natural sweetness. Why not allow the sign to say this, only in fewer words? Think of the hundreds of people that don't ask, but are ever ready to read.

What a wealth of advertising is misaimed by being mis-written. Take this suggestion and study your card matter. If it is only one word, let that word define the goods so the passerby or the customer within your store may get real information.

Summer Eating.—A well-arranged display of cereals sells cereals, especially if you make prominent the newest kinds—Kellogg Bran goods and the new Pettijohn Brand and Krumbles and such like; over this should go white netting, the best kind, and a card printed, "Light, Cool, Wholesome Summer Foods."

It makes a pretty show and suggests that you fellows are alive. It beats all how contented a bunch of clerks can remain while looking at a changeless store. Does it never give you the jumps?

Don't you all feel better when some one starts something and rips out the dear old familiar corners?

But speaking of this summer eating. The sight of the goods creates the longing far more than talk does. A bottle of olive oil surrounded with lettuce leaves and canned lobster will sell more oil and more lobster and more everything that goes with these than merely mentioning them as you take an order.

The food business is a most interesting study. The more the study is applied the better results you get. We American people like change, we like things to move. Home, politics, church, business, the more brightness and more life and more activity we put into these and other channels of service the better and more intersting and more successful they become.

Prevention. A chairman has been appointed for each division. The Educational Committee will begin its national campaign in a very short time.

The expected decline in gasoline has occurred during the week. The Standard Oil Co. reduced its price to 23 cents in steel barrels and 25 cents to consumers. It seems that before this decline occurred the markets in other places, notably New Jersey, Maryland, North and South Carolina, and some parts of Ohio, Kentucky and Louisiana had declined, mostly to 22 cents, tank wagon basis. As previously stated, the decline is due to the weakness in crude oil. It will probably be followed by further declines.

The Government's report upon the coming wheat crop, showing a very large shortage from what was expected, has aroused considerable discussion here. The Government report severe damage to the wheat crop and reduced its estimate of July 1st to 34,000,000 bushels of winter wheat and 71,000,000 bushels of spring wheat, making a total decline of 105,000,000 bushels in the Department's estimate as a result of unfavorable growing conditions in July. As a result the market has taken a very sharp advance, and there has occurred the speculation which such a situation always produces. Flour, too, has become completely upset, and the price advanced about 50 cents per barrel. The whole situation is extremely nervous.

SUMMARIZED MARKET CONDITIONS.

The tea market is in a waiting condition, business being very dull and prices somewhat uneven.—Coffee in quiet demand, prices for Rio and Santos show steady to firm undertone. Milds still dull and unchanged.—Sugar considerably upset, some raws having been sold as low as 5.75. Refiners are no longer selling granulated at cents, but 7¼ is now minimum. Demand still rather unsatisfactory.—Salmon firm with some holders of pinks asking $1, and minimum was around 97½ cents. Holders of reds asking $1.72½. Pack is certain to be short. All other canned fish unchanged and mostly firm.—Canned tomatoes somewhat easier but much unsettled. Balance of the canned vegetable line shows no change.—Prunes unchanged on 4¾ cent basis in a large way f. o. b. Coast. Demand quiet. All other dried fruits neglected and unchanged in price. The general tone for apricots and peaches easier.—Wheat much excited and shows an advance of several cents a bushel due to Government report of shar curtailment of the crop owing to rust.—Flour shows an advance of about 50 cents a barrel for the week.

You Ask for a Talking Point; Here It Is Salesmansnip must have intelligent talking points, or it doesn't get anywhere. When we ask you to take on Goldenoyle, you have a. right to ask what there is about it that will make it sell better than other cooking and salad oils.

This is Goldenoyle's talking point:—It is the highest grade cooking and salad oil on the market; the richest and most velvety vegetable oil of this class your customer can buy. Did you read what Professor Allyn, the Westfield chemist, said about it?

We are oil refiners of twenty-five years' standing, and we know oil like a book.

Packed 4 doz., 7-oz. bottles; 2 doz. small cans, 21¾ oz. each; and 1 doz. ½-gal. cans. On 3-case order we prepay the freight. Beautiful recipe book for retailers' customers.

Here's One of the Things Makes Me Glad to Stay on the Road.

D'ye know, one of the things that makes me willing to stay on the road is that I don't have to kow-tow to my customers like you retail fellows do. Like all the fellows on the road, I dope out a picture once in a while of a little store, and staying home all the year round, and all that, but between you and me, I don't know whether I'll ever put it over.

The trouble is, you can't be yourself when you're selling goods to consumers, especially to women. You can't come right out. Now I'm an independent cuss, and my customers know if I think a thing I'll spit it out. They're wise to that and they'll stand for it, simply because they know that's the kind of a hairpin I am.

But you can't do that in a retail store to save your soul. You think you can, and a lot of you think you do, but if you could stand off and hear yourselves talk, you'd think different.

What got me thinking these deep thoughts was something that happened the other day up in Pennsylvania. I was in a customer's store and was waiting for him to get through a little rush. It was Saturday morning and you know what that is. So I hung around and I couldn't help hearing what he said to his customers and what his customers said to him.

I don't want you fellows to get any wrong hunch that the minute I come into your stores I undo a long flappy ear and try to listen in on everything. That ain't me. If anybody kicks me out of anything, I always know he don't want me in, and I stay out, if he locks the door. But what goes on right in front of me, I hear—I ain't deaf, and I don't sleep on my switch, as it were.

He was waiting on a woman—one of these little things who has got to talk, if she does it to herself.

"Beautiful day, Mr. Simpson," she said while he was wrapping something up.

"It is a beautiful day, it certainly is," said Friend Simpson. Right together with her all along the line.

Well, that passed off all right and next was an old man. Looked like he might be buying Sunday stuff for a married daughter. He was a little gabby, too.

"Looks like rain, Brother Simpson," he said. "I shouldn't be surprised if we'd have a rainy Sunday."

"It does look like rain," said Brother Simpson, "I guess we're going to have it. Well, we need rain."

"We sure do," said grandpa, and he got his package and went.

Now I know Simpson pretty well, and I can talk to him like I want to.

"You old liar, you!" I said.

"What?"

"You old liar. That's what I said and that's what I mean."

"You poor fathead, what is it now?" he said. That's how he talks to me—we're a loving couple.

"I'm going to prove it to you," I said, "and when I get through you're going to hang your head in shame. I'm going to show you you're not only a liar, but you're a plumb coward. Better give me the order first, cause when I get through with you you won't be able to sign your own name."

We walked in his little office and sat down.

"I've got just five minutes to talk to you," he said, "and the sooner it's over the better."

"That talky little woman you just waited on asked you your opinion about the weather," I said. "You told her it was a beautiful day. The old fellow that called you Brother did the same thing the next minute and you thought with him it looked like rain. Ain't you ashamed of yourself!"

He leaned back and laughed.

"Gee, ain't you even got a right to an opinion about the weather?" I said.

"What's the use of fighting with 'em?" he said. "Especially over little things. I give you my word, I don't know any more what the weather looks like than I know the color of socks you've got on."

"Afraid even to have an opinion about the weather!" I jeered, "for fear you'll lose a sale. Poor simp!"

"Say, how do you mean that?" he said. "Do you mean poor simp, short for Simpson, or poor simp, short for simple. I want to know!" See, he was trying to turn everything off—didn't want to keep to the point at all.

Which was this:—

That a hundred times a day a fellow has to go along with his customers. He hasn't got the slightest idea how many times a day he does it, or how it sounds to an outsider.

Why only the other day my wife came home from a retail store where she deals right along.

"I declare," she said, "I do think that that Mr. Runyon is the most disagreeable man to have a store! He never agrees with anything you say—he always thinks different."

I kept shut—I knew it would all come out in a minute.

"Just now I happened to say I thought it would clear off to-night so as to be clear to-morrow. You know I'm going up to Sue's to-morrow if it's clear. Oh, no, he didn't think it was going to clear. No, indeed—he felt sure it would rain for several days. Never agrees with anything!"

"But holy smoke!" I said, "ain't the man even got a right to his own opinion about the weather?"

"Oh, it wouldn't have hurt him to say he thought it would clear," she said. "He knew by the way I said it I wanted to be agreed with. it rains to-morrow I'll be fear disappointed."

Can you beat that? D'ye what I mean? There's a fel being absolutely refused a righ his own opinion about the weat Because he has one and tells it, disagreeable! Oh, lor', oh, lor

I wonder what would happe a fellow in a retail store who the plumb truth about everyth his customers put to him? S right out exactly what he thou Why the sheriff'd git him in shakes of a lamb's tail. He woul get anywhere.

Canned Corn Containing Added Starch.

It is the practice of a number of canners of sweet corn to use a small quantity of corn starch in a part of their product for the avowed purpose of improving the appearance and consistency of immature corn, which otherwise present a watery or sloppy appearance in the can. Federal authorities have given at least temporary approval to the practice, pending a more thorough investigation, and providing the presence of starch is declared upon the label. Swet corn containing added starch is being widely sold without declaration on the label as to the presence of starch. Feeling that the interests of the consuming public, as well as those of the honest canners and jobbers, demand that a study be made of this question, the North Dakota Food Department has taken up the chemical side of the matter in a series of experiments which will last through the coming canning season. They have also communicated with many packers about it and have gotten replies. While the large majority of replies clearly indicate that the packers feel that the use of starch may serve a legitimate purpose, benefitting the farmer, the packer, and the consumer as well, several well-known packers definitely state that it may be abused, and when so abused serves to increase the number of cans per ton. Although several state that starch is more expensive than sweet corn, this point is open to investigation. Canned corn contains an average amount of solids of 20 per cent. A packer using starch for the purpose of lengthening out his pack could thus use four pounds of water to each pound of starch without decreasing the amount of solids in the goods. Assuming sweet corn cutting 500 cans at $5 a ton, starch at anything less than 5 cents per pound would prove economical, provided it were not necessary to use additional quantities of sugar and salt to mask the flavor of the starch.

Have You Thought of Making Your Own Peanut Butter?

The use of peanut butter is growing steadily—and it should—because it is both healthful and pleasant to the taste.

Why not take full advantage of this desire by making your own peanut butter? It is a simple operation, one anybody can readily do—if the proper machine is used, such as the A. W. Straub Co., of 3722 Filbert street, Philadelphia, make. Their Quaker City Peanut Butter Mills are shipped on thirty days' approval, and are recognized by leading manufacturers to be the best on the market. Their capacity is the greatest for the amount of power used.

There is a mighty interesting sales proposition for you to tell your customers you make your own peanut butter, besides, it does not take long for the machine to pay for itself. You will do yourself a favor if you investigate the possibilities of this machine. You will soon wonder why you did not install one before.—Advt.

No. 376.—When the Seller Lies Down on Contracts to Sell Merchandise.

My clients tell me that there has never been a time when contracts and arrangements for the sale of merchandise have been so much upset as they are now. The war conditions, the extraordinary demand for many products, the very high prices prevailing on a large number of commodities, and disorganized labor conditions have put a whole lot of people up in the air as to buying goods, or perhaps more accurately, to get the goods they have bought. A very large number of sellers, chiefly manufacturers, have deliberately laid down on their selling contracts, giving as their excuse the fact that they "find it impossible, under present conditions, to ship the goods." Perhaps later, when conditions clear, etc., etc., etc.

I am receiving constant inquiries as to the rights of a buyer in a case like this. Take the following case, which came to my notice during the week: A very large buyer of a certain commodity, who wisely foresaw a coming scarcity in it, made a contract with a packer for enough to last him through the season. To induce the packer to make the contract under existing conditions, the buyer paid a premium over the current market.

The seller here has already laid down because he says he can't get some of his raw material. The buyer is buying what he has to get, in the open market, at an advanced price.

Or this case: A certain large manufacturer accepted a spot order for several thousand cases of a commodity at the then market price. Shipments were begun under this contract, when the market for the raw material which entered most largely into the contract, suddenly almost doubled in price. The manufacturer sent word to his buyers that market conditions were such that he could not ship. He was going to stop packing this particular article, he said, until the market became normal. This was of course a flat default in his contract, which called for periodical shipments. The buyer had to go out and cover his needs somewhere else. Always at an advanced price, for these situations never seem to arise unless the general market has advanced.

Where does the buyer come in in these cases? It is fine for a manufacturer who has contracted to deliver a certain quantity of a product at $3.50 a case to escape when the market goes to $5, merely by saying "I cannot ship," but what about the buyer, who has counted on the goods coming, and may even have sold them again? Has he any rights?

That depends on his contract. Many contracts for the sale and purchase of merchandise consist simply of two or three letters—the letter making the offer and the letter accepting it. Other contracts are more formal. They consist of a regular form signed by both parties. Still others are a memorandum which one party signs and the other simply accepts. And some contracts are verbal.

No matter what form the contract takes, the inquiry is of course as to whether the seller has put any clauses in it which would enable him to lie down in the middle of it. Contracts made by letter seldom contain any such provisions. Nor do contracts made verbally. The more formal kind may or may not. Each case stands on its own contract.

In the two cases above mentioned, and I may say in most cases, the contract contains nothing but a straight obligation by a seller to deliver so much goods on such and such terms, and an obligation by a buyer to accept them on those terms. Where it is that kind of a contract, the seller is bound hard and fast, and almost nothing that can happen to him will excuse him.

As one leading case puts it, "a contract is not invalid, nor is the promisor discharged, merely because it turns out to be difficult, unreasonable, dangerous, or burdensome. Thus one who sold goods to be delivered at a certain time c not excuse himself by saying t he expected to buy the goods, could not."

Unless the contract contains so provisions taking care of su contingencies, it makes no diff ence if a seller's plant is complet destroyed by fire. Or if his pl goes on strike and he is compel to close. Or if his raw material any other expense advances so to become almost prohibitive. if he is quite unable to get raw terial. Or even if, in a word, it become, through no fault of physically impossible for him to his contract. None of these c tingencies will excuse him or reli him. He has bound himself to a certain thing and he must do or account to his buyer in damag Every one of the thousands of b ers, who are now, according to formation, unable to get shipme of goods they have contracted

Corn Display.

This makes an attractive display and should increase sales for you. T arrange, make a platform about eighteen inches high in the center of th window and at the rear. From this make a slant of boards to the bottom o the window. Cover the slant with white crepe paper and arrange the ears a shown in illustration—very thin wire nails may be used to keep them in plac Place dried corn on the top of the platform. In each rear corner of th window place two stalks of corn, using fine wire to hold them. Make background of the white crepe paper and across the top place a strip of pal green muslin with white lettering.

ıether they be manufacturer, ıolesaler or retailer, can collect ɜir damages from their seller un-ɹs they have waived their rights the contract.

What are those damages? They ɜ the difference between the con-ɪct price and the market price at ɜ time and place of delivery. That if a seller contracted to deliver $3.50 per case and at the date ıen he finally laid down, the mar-t price was $4.50, the buyer's ɜasure of damages would be $1 r case for every case which the ler did not deliver.

Question: * * *, Williamsport, ɹ.—The following concerns a fling matter, but owing to the erbearing way it was put up to the other day we would like to ɜ if the representative of the con-rn mentioned is as correct in his ɹy of thinking as he says.

Referring to copy of enclosed ntract we took one book known "Your Own Sure Collector" ɒm the representative of the Na-ɒnal Commercial Underwriters, th the understanding that we pay cash on delivery and the balance the cost of the book ($10) when e results of its use had collected irty ($30) dollars from bad ac-unts.

The local office has changed nds several times since the man ıo sold us our book has been in arge and each time the new man forms us that he is going to do and so, which he never does. The fice is now in charge of a Wil-ɹmsport man who called upon us cently. He was under the impres-ɒn that we had paid half the cost the book ($7.50) when we got and still owed the other half. ot having time then to look the atter up we agreed with him. He ld us that he was going to close all e accounts up here and although e owed them more than a specified nount he would call it paid in full r $3.50. Our explanation that the stem had not collected the full $30 ade no difference to him and he id that unless we saw fit to send check he would take the matter to urt.

Now we have lived up to every ɒint in the contract except the ɹmber of accounts we used it on. /e did not use it on 40. It was ɜarer 20. I also notice that we d not sign the contract; would ɹat make any difference? We ould appreciate your advice on ɹis matter more for our own satis-ɹction than the small cost of the ɜst of the book.

Answer.—The fact that you did ɒt sign the contract makes no dif-ɜrence, in my judgment. It was filled out and was complete, and was signed by the National Commercial Underwriters. That you did not sign it I take to be a mere inadvertence, for it was clearly a memorandum of the agreement between you.

The last paragraph reads as follows:—

> It is further agreed that the party of the second part agrees to use such system on at least forty debtors, according to instructions furnished, within ten days from date of this contract, otherwise this contract is due upon demand of party of the first part.

You did not comply with this condition, and without doubt the whole balance is due. The condition is a legal one and any court would enforce it.

Question: L. B., Fort Edward, N. Y.—Does the law compel a grocery firm that does practically all its own work outside of a boy that never drives the horse and does only a boy's work, and a man for about four to six weeks in a year to drive horse and take orders on the route while others of the firm are taking vacations to carry a compensation policy?

Answer.—It does. The boy would have to be taken care of anyway, as he is a regular employee. And the man would probably be considered a regular employee also, for the policy of the law is not to consider an employee who is regularly employed for a period like 4 to 6 weeks, as a casual employee to whom the act does not apply.

316 MARKET ST.
PHILADELPHIA
"The Convenient Store"

McDonald, Pa., July 19, 1916.
Editor "Science of Advertising."

Dear Sir:—I am inclosing two of our circulars for July. We issue these twice a month and mail them to a selected list. Would be pleased to have you comment on them. This makes pretty expensive advertistising, but the results have proven very satisfactory so far.

Yours truly,
E. M. CHAMBON.

Mr. Chambon's circular is printed on very fine coated paper and has four pages 6 x 9 inches. I advise Mr. Chambon to use somewhat less expensive paper. This paper is not at all adapted to advertising of this sort. It is intended for fine book work where there are half tone illustrations. For rough and ready advertising work, as advertising of this sort is to a certain extent, a different class of paper should be used.

I reproduce the cover of this circular here. On the covers of all of them—Mr. Chambon sends me three—there is a stock cut like this "Satisfaction," and a general talk which is fitted up to the cut. I believe all such matter to be waste space. In my judgment there isn't a grain of pull in this whole first page. The cut, as all such cuts have to be, is as general as it can possibly be, and of course the talk that goes with it has to be general too. I should never in the world surrender one-quarter of my available space to matter that could never get me anywhere. Particularly the most conspicuous one-quarter in the whole circular. Put good strong pulling stuff on there. In this day the only kind of advertising that amounts to anything is the kind that gets down to brass tacks at once.

Here is the second page of one of Mr. Chambon's circulars, reproduced very near the original size:—

Whoever writes Mr. Chambon's advertising is trying hard to produce good stuff. Everything about it shows that. The main thing it lacks, in my judgment, is persuasiveness. "Premier Baked Beans are different," says the advertisement. How? How they are different is the very point of the advertising. There is a great lack of suggestiveness in this advertising. The great thing when you advertise food products, particularly those the use of which is not fixed like sugar and coffee, is to tell people what to do with it. Tell them even though you think they know. For examp Premier Shrimp. Why not tak line or two to sketch its possib ties? The same thing applies several other of the articles adv tised. In the case of the Root B Extract I should have told h many quarts or pints a bottle of tract makes, and then stated the s ing as compared to buying the sa quantity ready bottled. It might just that point that was needed get returns.

Mr. Chambon, however, is doi good advertising, and he ought get results right along. On Pag is "Preserving Time Needs," a on Page 4 some specials for Frid Saturday and Monday. I notice is using a stunt that this paper ported some time ago—using specials goods that he does not r ularly keep. Screen doors a screen windows are two of the He sells a $2 screen door for $1. and a 35-cent window screen for cents.

Expected Canadian Demand fo American Molasses.

That there will be a demand in Cana for American molasses and syru seems certain. Great difficulty is n experienced in obtaining molasses fr Barbadoes and the price has risen fr 47 to 59 cents because of increas freight charges. By a preferent agreement syrups and molasses fr the British West Indies enter Cana free of duty, whereas from other co tries the rate of duty is 1½ cents imperial gallon for tested cane molas of not less than 20 degrees nor m than 35 degrees. There is levied as w a war tax of 7½ per cent. ad valore To comply with the trade requiremen it would be necessary for Americ firms to put up their product in t and three-pound tins, as these sizes ta well with the people. The demand molasses is greatest in the Province Quebec, for which reason American porters should investigate market co ditions at Montreal, Quebec, Thr Rivers and Sherbrooke. In the Pro ince of Ontario scarcity prevails at O tawa, Kingston and Toronto.

(b) The committee appointed to consider the advisability of a law regulating the qualifications of persons engaging in the sale, care or handling of food products and the sanitary condition in which food products are handled, will sit during the sessions of the convention to hear argument for and against the matter in accordance with the following resolution, passed at the last convention:—

Whereas, Laws governing the sale of food products, with regard to the sanitary conditions and surroundings, as well as respecting the adulterated condition of same, have been passed and are becoming more stringent, thereby intensifying the necessity of the most intelligent care in handling such products, that the general health of the community may be conserved and the spirit of the law obeyed; and

Whereas, The present laws do not place any restriction on, or provide any regulations concerning the qualifications of the person or persons, firms or corporations about to engage in the sale, care or handling of such food products, nor of the nature or character of the place in which such food products may be handled; therefore be it

Resolved, By the Retail Merchants' Association of Pennsylvania, that we heartily approve of all reasonable laws along such lines, and that the said laws may be the more strictly adhered to, and the more intelligently obeyed, we recommend that a committee of five be appointed, whose duty it shall be to devise some plans, for license or restriction, and report such plan or plans to the next convention in such form that such may be presented to the next session of the Legislature of our State for its consideration.

The committee consists of the following: A. Kaiser, Philadelphia; J. A. Edgar, Frankford; Reno Schoch, Philadelphia; Wm. H. Nelson, Chester; J. W. Rittenhouse, Scranton.

TUESDAY EVENING.

Grocers' Group Meeting, 7.30 P. M.
Mr. D. E. Durbin, Pittsburgh, in charge.
Topics:—
Sanitary handling of food products.
Shall we invite the Federal Trade Commission to examine the grocery trade conditions of this State and make suggestions that will tend towards prosperity?
How can the better paying lines of merchandise be segregated and fostered?
How shall the retail grocer treat the nation wide advertising campaign proposed by the National Association of Coffee Roasters?
Many reputable manufacturers are positive in their statements that premiums are substantial trade builders—these products are sold by grocers. Does this suggest that grocers could profitably give premiums on their own accounts?
Open discussion by those present.

The Subscribers' Bargain List

Have you got any goods you don't want? Anything—canned goods, groceries, hardware, dry goods, anything at all that's in good condition, but won't sell for you.

If you will make a price on it we can possibly sell it for you in a hurry. Write us about it, stating the quantity, condition and your best price. You might give the original cost, too. We will give it a key number and offer it to our 4,000 subscribers. Your name will not appear unless you want it to. All sales ought to be on a cash basis.

The point is that what won't sell for you may be in everday demand for somebody else, who will be glad to get your stock of it at a bargain.

There will be no charge for this service anywhere—we do it to help along.

Yeast and Fleischmann

¶ When your average customer thinks of yeast, she recalls the name Fleischmann.

¶ That's because these two names have been linked together for fifty years, and yeast bearing this name has established itself as clean, fresh, strong and dependable.

THE VALUE OF BRIGHT STORES

¶ The difficulty of making a sale—whether it be dry goods or vegetables, jewelry or shoes is increased tenfold in a poorly lighted store. Other things being equal, the Electrically lighted shop will do more business than the store which uses other illuminants. "Indoor Daylight" can only be obtained by the use of Mazda Electric lamps.

No man can be one hundred per cent. efficient who drinks even one glass of beer a day. In this day a merchant who can succeed without being one hundred per cent. efficient is a rare exception to the rule. For those outside the exceptions even one glass of beer a day is a stone about the neck.

are now sold in original glass packages, filled and sealed in the Heinz establishment. Our magazine and street car advertisments are telling your customers that this method retains the natural fine flavor and aroma of Heinz aged, mellowed vinegars.

The Heinz package protects and benefits you, too. The grocer who sells Heinz Bottled Vinegars has absolute guarantee that he is complying with the pure food laws. Furthermore, he is spared the trouble of drawing vinegar from a barrel, and freed from the losses always connected with bulk measuring.

The Heinz salesman will supply on request attractive envelope inserts which you can enclose with your customers' bills and which tell your customers about Heinz Bottled Vinegars.

Here is the Balance of the Federal Trade Commission's Bookkeeping System for Retailers

In Order to Teach Retailers to Know Their Costs, So That They May More Intelligently Meet Competition, the National Body Has Devised a Simple, But Complete Method by Which Retailers May Keep Their Books So as to Constantly be Informed as to Where They Stand.

[The Federal Trade Commission has found that the majority of retail merchants do not know accurately the cost of conducting their business for which reason they are unable to price their goods intelligently. There must be decided improvement in this direction before competition can be placed upon a sound basis and before we can expect a decrease in the heavy business death rate among retail merchants.

With the object of aiding retail merchants to improve their accounting methods, the Commission has outlined a simple system of accounts which provides for supplying the information necessary to properly direct a retail business. It was announced in a recent issue that this was being done and would shortly be issued. The Commission has sent a copy of the system to the "Modern Merchant and Grocery World" and requested its publication. The first installment appeared last week, and this is the balance.—Ed.]

15. Accounts Payable—Trade Creditors.

Credit this account with merchandise bought on account, the amount being carried to this account monthly from the total of the Invoice Book and charge it with all merchandise returned and reductions (Journal), and payments made and discounts taken (Cash Book). Balance of this account must agree with the sum of the balances of trade creditors' accounts.

16. Accounts Payable—Others.

Credit this account with amounts owing to creditors other than trade creditors.

17. Accrued Interest Payable.

Credit this account at the end of the period with interest accrued (not yet paid) on notes, etc., due others, charging "Interest Account." When the interest is paid it is charged to "Accrued Interest Payable."

18. Accrued Salaries and Wages.

Credit this account with salaries and wages earned and unpaid at the end of each month and charge the proper expense accounts. When payment is made this account is charged and closed out and the balance of the payroll charged in the regular way.

19. Accrued Taxes.

Credit this account with the taxes due up to the end of each month, charging the proportionate amounts to the accounts in which they belong. When the taxes are paid this account will be charged.

20. Proprietor's Drawing Account.

Charge this account with all withdrawals of cash (not salary). At the end of the period the amount of this account is closed into proprietor's capital account.

21. Mortgages Payable.

When a mortgage is placed upon real estate (or assumed at the time of purchase) this account is credited. When paid it is charged.

22. Proprietor's Capital Account.

This account represents the proprietor's net capital. At the end of the period the net profit is credited to this account. The amount of his drawing account is then closed into this account. The balance of the account is his net capital at time of closing.

In the event of a partnership each partner's net capital would be shown in his respective account and the net profit (or loss) carried to the credit (or debit) of their accounts in agreed proportions. In the event of a corporation this account represents the amount of the issued capital stock and the profit or loss is carried to "Surplus" account.

NOMINAL ACCOUNTS.

23. Sales.

Credit this account with the total sales of all merchandise, the charged sales being taken from the total of the charge tickets for the month and the cash sales from the "Cash Sales" column in the Cash Book. Returns should be charged at selling price for all merchandise returned by customers whether for cash or credit. The difference in this account will be the net sales which is transferred to the credit of "Trading Account."

24. Sales Allowances.

Charge this account with any allowance given a customer not contemplated when sale was made. Allowances should not be charged to "Sales," but closed at the end of the period into "Trading Account."

25. Merchandise Purchases.

Charge this account with the face of the invoices of merchandise before deducting cash discounts. The account is also charged with freight, expressage, and drayage on merchandise purchased. Credit the account with any returns of merchandise made to manufacturer or wholesaler and with any allowances for defects in goods received from manufacturer or wholesaler. You Retailers Who Sell Fish, or Could Sell Fish, Read These

[Contributed by the New England Fish Exchange.]

Every year the fishermen of the tlantic Coast throw away about en million pounds of fish which ave a high nutritive value. On rawl lines and in nets, along with od, haddock and other popular shes are taken about 400,000 oosefish, or anglers, or monkfish, s they are also called, weighing on he average 25 pounds each, and ielding, when butchered, steaks ontaining flesh-building material qual, pound for pound, to sirloin teak. The value of these fish is ot recognized and they are at pres- nt entirely a waste product. Were hey properly appreciated they vould be taken quite without effort nd are abundant all along the At- antic shores of the United States nd the adjacent ocean bottom. To he consumer they would constitute cheap and very wholesome food. n Europe the goosefish is highly valued. It abounds in the North Sea and other waters of Western Europe and is caught incidentally n the otter trawl and line fisheries. In former years it was discarded as worthless, but now it is always saved, and the annual consumption amounts to millions of pounds.

Custom, which had for a basis sound principles of health and hygiene, has made fish the Lenten food. This year, to those to whom the high price of meats and the rising prices of other food commodities, exclusive of sea foods, have for some months been a subject of serious consideration, the beginning of Lent affording a logical opportunity to serve more fish, will come as a welcome date. It is, of course, impossible to tell what the state of the fish market will be during Lent, for it is impossible for anyone to forecast the weather, and it is chiefly upon the weather that the price of fresh salt water sea foods are dependent. Indications are, however, that the market will be very well supplied during the coming Lent and that the wholesale fresh fish price will be normal.

The other day the writer was standing in a retail fish store. A woman entered and approaching a clerk stated that she wished to purchase a slice of steak cod. The clerk secured the steak, and, as he weighed it, asked if the purchaser wished it dressed to fry.

'Oh, no," she replied, "I want to make a chowder of it."

A finer example of inefficiency would be hard to find.

Steak cod was worth 18 cents a pound. It makes an excellent meal when fried, but to put it into a chowder would be like making a broth or a stew of sirloin steak.

Hake, haddock, or the head of a cod, makes a much better chowder. These cost considerably less than steak cod. For a quarter or a half of what the steak cod, which made a tasteless chowder, cost, the fair purchaser could have had three times as much of the proper material.

Herring generally is a very much unappreciated sea food. In almost every volume written on the subject of foods in France, French chefs lament the fact that herring, in French known as "hareng," the sweetest of fish, is not properly appreciated. The same condition exists in this country. The presence of many small bones, which makes it somewhat difficult to eat small herring, is the chief reason for this. Of all herring, the Newfoundland herring is the king. It is a great deal larger than the herring in New England waters, being as big as a good-sized mackerel. Consequently the bones are larger and easier to remove. The flesh of this variety has the same taste characteristic of its tribe, a taste well known to epicures.

Two Ways to Spell a Good Thing.

Teacher: "Spell dessert."
Bobbie: "Is it where the camels live?"
Teacher (severely): "Certainly not. It is the best part of dinner."
Bobbie: "Oh, I can spell that—

"J-E-L-L-O"

And then Bobbie adds: "My mother sends me to the store every week for Jell-O and we eat it all up."

Good thing for the grocer, isn't it?

The things that are good enough to be eaten up and create an appetite for more are the ones that are most profitable to handle in the grocery business.

Jell-O is made in seven pure fruit flavors: Strawberry, Raspberry, Lemon, Orange, Cherry, Peach, Chocolate. Each 10 cents.

THE GENESEE PURE FOOD CO., LeRoy, N. Y., and Bridgeburg, Ont.

A tightly sealed waxed paper bag, proof against moisture and air, encloses the Jell-O in each package.

Refusing Retailers Credit Unless They Obtain Workmen's Compensation Insurance.

A subject which is beginning to attract considerable attention, is the effect on credit risks of the liability which now rests on all merchants who work under a workmen's compensation act. In other words, a jobber or manufacturer, in granting credit to a retailer doing business in a State having a workmen's compensation act, must now consider whether he is insured against employees' accidents. If he is, all right; the credit risk is not increased. If he is not, the credit risk is very considerably increased, for at any time the retailer may find his weekly expenses heavily increased through the necessity of having to pay large weekly sums to disabled employees or their families.

The following warning on the subject has been sent to credit men all over the country by Secretary J. H. Tregoe, of the National Association of Credit Men:—

> The importance of the question whether or not a customer, whose business is located in a State having on its statute books a drastic workmen's compensation act, has taken out protection against injuries for which he might be held liable, should not be overlooked. The workmen's compensation laws have introduced another element in the credit risk, in some States an element of serious consideration.
> The Pennsylvania law, for instance, is in truth drastic, and some unsuspecting retailers in that State, to whose attention the application of the law to their own affairs had never been called, have had heavy burdens cast upon them by reason of accidents to employees. In our credit statement forms, as well as credit investigations, cognizance of this matter must be taken, and also credit grantors should be prepared to inform their customers upon the main points of the compensation laws bearing upon their business.

The retailer who can insure himself against the risks of workmen's compensation, and does not, is an excessively foolish fellow, yet there are quite a number. Why wouldn't it be a good way of teaching them wisdom to refuse them credit unless they insure?

Let Them Lump It.

I note that the Master Bakers' Association, in convention in the West last week, decided to recommend an advance in the price of bread from 5 to 6 cents. At once the fateful news was wired over the land, and the Federal Trade Commission announced its intention of investigating any advances in bread from the ground up.

I take the liberty of giving the Master Bakers' Association a little advice. I should first consider very carefully whether there was any real need for an advance. Need for an advance doesn't mean desire for an advance, which like the poor, is always with us, often when there is no need at all. It means that raw materials which enter into bread, or labor, have advanced so much that bread can no longer be sold for 5 cents and leave a living profit to the dealer.

Noting the present cost of flour, I cannot see how the baker can get out whole without advancing his price, but I am not a bread man and my opinion without facts and figures isn't worth anything. The master baker will know.

If after a careful and unbiased examination of the subject, the master baker decides that bread should advance, then I should advance it, and if the Federal Trade Commission doesn't like it I should tell them to lump it. Nor would public clamor move me one fraction of an inch. Neither the Federal Trade Commission nor the public can properly object to a man's getting a living profit on his goods, and if my conscience was clear of all effort to get more than that, I should go serenely on my way and let anybody bark who wanted to.

Curing Predatory Price-Cutting.

One of the speakers who appeared before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to advocate the passage of the Stevens bill (which would give to manufacturers of trade-marked products the right to fix the wholesale and retail selling price) expressed the opinion that the following, to the manufacturer, was the chief evil of price-cutting:—

> Predatory price cutting causes the regular or non-price cutting dealers of the community to throw out of their stores the articles on which the price has been cut and finally the price cutter quits handling the article because it no longer has the power to draw trade, and the consumer is then deprived of all opportunity to procure it.

No doubt this is true and all predatory price-cutting should unquestionably be stopped. But how does the American Fair Trade League propose to stop it? By penalizing the predatory price-cutter in any way? No, by forbidding all retailers to base their selling prices on their costs and their needs of profit. By taking from retailers the power to say what profit they need to make and will be satisfied with and compelling them to charge the profit that the manufacturer fixes whether that be too little or too much. If a retailer, by good merchandising ability, finds he can sell at a gross margin of 25 per cent, say, where his competitor needs to get 35, he must lose this most valuable advantage because under the Stevens bill he must get 35 per cent whether he wants it or not.

If this isn't the most extraordinary cure for predatory price-cutting, I don't know.

Consumers Told How to Buy Meats in Hot Weather.

The Philadelphia Bureau of Healtn has issued the following to consumers on buying of meats in hot weather:—

> Meats spoil very rapidly during the hot weather, especially if not properly preserved by ice. The ingestion of partly spoiled or decomposed meat is responsible for a large number of intestinal complaints. Cooking, however, kills many of the poisonous germs and their toxins, but in some instances the toxic products are not destroyed in the process of cooking and, therefore, may give rise to symptoms of ptomaine poisoning. This is particularly true of sausage, cooked meats which have not been kept cool, shellfish and salads containing chopped meats.
> Some persons are very susceptible to the effects of foods with beginning putrefaction, while others may even show ill effects from fresh meats during the heated season, this being due to a peculiar sensitiveness to protein foods. Such persons should eat sparingly of meat at this time of the year.
> The sale and use of spoiled meats can largely be avoided if the housekeeper will learn to detect such foods as outlined in the following descriptions:—
> Fresh beef should be of a rosy red color, with cream colored, firm, elastic fat, and scarcely moist when touched with the finger. Do not buy wet, flabby beef that is pale or purple.
> Lamb or mutton should be firm, close-grained and light red in color, with fat that is white and hard.
> Fresh veal is pale red (unless milk-fed, when it is light) with firm white fat between the muscles and surrounding tissues and scarcely moist to the touch. Bad veal is soft, mushy, sticky and has a very red tinge, while the fat has a grayish lead color.
> Good pork is solid, has pure white fat and pink flesh. Do not buy pork that is soft and yellow.
> Poultry should be firm to the touch, pink or yellow in color and possess a fresh odor and unbroken skin. Stale poultry is flabby, bluish green on the crop and abdomen and has a bad odor; the eyes are sunken, there is a wasted appearance of the flesh of the head and the skin pulls apart easily.
>
> All shellfish should smell fresh, and the shells should close firmly when put into water or touched with the finger. Shellfish should be alive when cooked.
> Fresh fish should have red gills and moist, bright scales, clear eyes and should be firm and rigid when handled. Stale fish is flabby, has dull scales, the eyes are sunken and covered with a film, the gills are pale, or of greenish color, and the fish has a bad odor. All lumpy fish should be rejected, as the growth may be cancer.
> To detect decomposing meats in cans before opening, inspect the ends of the can, and if they bulge discard the can. This bulging is due to accumulated gases of decomposition that push the ends outward by force of pressue. Leaking and rusty cans should also be discarded.
> Canned meats should be free from mould. The odor of such meats should be the same as when freshly prepared. If the meat is putrid exposure to heat will make it possible to detect the foul odor.
>
> Smoked meats, fish and glassed meat products are bad when they have a rancid, sour smell, and when the color differs from the fresh product.

Another Scheme Recently Offered Merchants Smashed by the Post Office Department.

The Post Office Department during the week extended its fraud order against the International Automobile League and L. C. Bidwell, president, to include the Buffalo Automobile Supply Co., Buffalo. Since the first order was issued, August 3d, citing that the League had used the mails fraudulently to collect money on representations that it could secure automobile supplies at reduced rates for its members, letters were sent out by the League, post authorities declared, requesting that all mail be sent to the Buffalo Automobile Supply Co. Several subscribers asked this paper for advice about this scheme and were advised not to touch it.

The New York Letter

ho Shall Put "Cold Storage" on Held Eggs After Septem ber 1st? Farmers Go Scot Free From Laws Grocers Are Forced to Fight. Market Summary.

ecial Correspondence of "Modern Merchant and Grocery World."

New York, August 18, 1916.

An investigation made during the eek by the Bureau of Weights id Measures showed that while e law requiring food products to marked with the net weight has en rigidly enforced against gro- rs, it has apparently not been en- rced at all against farmers. The spectors found that 200 farmers lling produce in the various farm- s' markets in the city were paying attention to the requirement that l cases, barrels and crates be arked with the quantity of the ntents. A crusade will at once be stituted to compel the observance the act.

There is a sharp disagreement etween the local retail grocers and ie commission dealers as to who to put the words "cold storage" n the cold storage eggs which will be sold out of their original packages after September 1st. The commission men say that they can do it, but it will decidedly increase the price, whereas the grocers claim that they will not be able to do it at all because they have not the time or help. Evidently the Commissioner intends to enforce the order because he announced on Thursday that he would put thirty inspectors at work to protect consumers from imposition.

Summarized Market Conditions.

Tea quiet without change, holders still willing to make concessions. —Coffee steady as to Rio and Santos. Milds dull and unchanged.—Sugar unsettled, refiners offering granulated at 7 and 7¼ cents.—Salmon strong with light offerings, both red and pink Alaska very firm at high prices. Holders are asking $1 for pinks.—No change in canned vegetables. Prospects for tomato pack little less favorable. No change in canned fruits.—Wheat still very feverish and uncertain on account of crop reports. —Flour shows further advance for the week and very hard to quote. Spring wheat patents in car lots are now quoted at as high as $8.25. Flour demand very light.

Jobbing Grocers Protest Against Advanced Freights on California Products.

Representatives of Trade From All Over Country Appear Before Interstate Commerce Commission and Argue That the Rates Should Not Be Advanced at All, Certainly Not September 1st.

Special Correspondence of "Modern Merchant and Grocery World."

Wash., D. C., Aug. 17, 1916.

The scheduled hearings to decide whether the proposed increase in freight rates on California and Western products should go into effect September 1st, or later, have been held before the Interstate Commerce Commission during the week. The wholesale grocery field was well represented.

Among those who favored postponing the going into effect of the rates until at least January 1st next were President J. H. McLaurin, of the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association, who said the Southern jobbers would lose $562,000 if the rates became operative now; First Vice-President Paine, of the same organization; W. W. Manker, of Armour & Co., who didn't think the rates should advance at all; Francis J. Rikard, of Milwaukee; D. F. Hurd, of Cleveland, Ohio; W. P. Tingley, Huntington, W. Va.; Charles Kimmich, Charleston, S. C.; D. A. Hening, Greenville, S. C.; Henry E. Sloan, Kansas City, Mo.; T. A. McGrath, of Minneapolis, Minn.

All the speakers protested against the advances on their merits, and all took the position that if they had to go into effect it should not be now, in the midst of the season. The increase in canned fruits and vegetables, all rail, is 36 per cent.; canned fish and salmon, 41⅔ per cent., and on dried fruits, 22 2-9 per cent.

The Interstate Commerce Commission reserved decision.

What May Happen to You if You Sign a Scheme Concern's Note

The Plight of a Pennsylvania Retailer Who Signed Some Drafts for the Providence Jewelry Co. Which Wanted to Send Him Some Jewelery on Consignment. The Old Scheme.

Here is an interesting case which shows what trouble a retailer can get into when he signs a contract with a concern that he knows nothing about.

J. W. Guernsey is a retailer doing business at Scranton, Lackawanna County, Pa. Some time ago he signed a contract with an itinerant jewelry concern named the Providence Jewelry Co., whose promissory note scheme has been frequently commented on in this paper. The scheme is familiar. The Providence concern sent a salesman to Mr. Guernsey's store. He wanted to send him an outfit of jewelry. Mr. Guernsey was to simply put it on sale. An agent would be sent to canvass the town and drum up trade for it. Mr. Guernsey was to pay nothing until the jewelry was actually sold. He agreed, as he appeared to have nothing to lose, and the salesman then asked him to sign a number of notes or drafts. "There was no risk, they were only private memoranda and would not pass out of the Providence Co.'s possession." If Mr. Guernsey wanted to ship the jewelry back at any time he could do it and then the drafts would be sent back to him.

It looked good and Mr. Guernsey obligingly signed the drafts, which of course he should never have done. No agent went to the town to create a demand, and as there seemed to be no sale, Mr. Guernsey wrote the Providence Co. stating the facts and telling them he should ship the goods back. They did not reply and he still has the jewelry. Here was the second mistake. He should have shipped it right back anyway.

The next step in the fraud was the serving on Mr. Guernsey of notice by a stranger that he had bought the drafts and wanted them paid. This is the old, old trick of getting the notes and transferring them to a third person, who under the law can collect them even if the maker has a good defense against the payee.

Mr. Guernsey refused to pay the drafts and then his trouble began. The "third party" who claimed to have bought the drafts entered suit. Of course at that point Mr. Guernsey had to engage a lawyer. The case finally came up in court and the judge threw out all his defenses and told the jury to find a verdict against him for $451.58. The judge's view of the law was as follows:—

> The suit is founded on a series of negotiable instruments, not in the hands of the original party to whom Mr. Guernsey gave them, but in the hands of a third party, and it is a peculiar characteristic of negotiable paper like a draft or check that it passes from hand to hand without any ifs or ands and without any luggage at all, just like currency, so that no matter what defense one might have against the original party to whom it was given, when that negotiable paper gets into the hands of a third party it is free, free from any defense unless he take it under circumstances to put him upon suspicion. And the presumption of law is that a holder who comes into court and has in his possession such a draft, such a check or such a bank note, took it in the ordinary course of business, and therefore free from any dispute that might arise between the original parties to it. In order to defeat his recovery the maker or acceptor has the burden of showing that the present holder took it under circumstances of suspicion, and in the absence of any proof of that kind, here I feel constrained to say to you that no matter though Mr. Guernsey may have been imposed upon by the man with whom he dealt, no matter how much he may have been stung, that, so far as the present showing goes, the executors of Mr. Cochran who are now here suing on these drafts are entitled to recover. A very great judge in this State has described a negotiable instrument as a "traveler without luggage," and when it passes from hand to hand without any notice of any equity the original maker may have, that holder is entitled to the face of the instrument and any interest that may have accrued upon it.
> There are four drafts here each in the sum of $80.50, therefore aggregating $322. The interest has been accumulating since 1907, and it amounts to nearly $130 now, so that your verdict will have to be taken in favor of the plaintiff in the aggregate amount, both principal and interest, of $451.58. The clerk will take your verdict accordingly.

This was of course pretty disheartening, and at this juncture Mr. Guernsey had to arrange for more legal services. He appealed the case and to his great delight, the Appeal Court reversed the lower court's decision in a technical opinion which held that the lower court had erred in refusing to hear certain of Mr. Guernsey's evidence and the case would have to be heard again. In the course of the opinion, the Appeal Court said this:—

> It is as much a fraud to obtain a paper for one purpose and use it for a different and unfair purpose, as to obtain it by fraudulent statements. Applying the principle that a party is presumed to contemplate the natural consequences of his own act, it would require no straining to say that not only would a fraud be perpetrated if the scheme under which the defendant was induced to sign these papers is carried out, but also that a fraud was actually intended. The case may present an entirely different aspect when the evidence is in and the plaintiff has been given an opportunity to rebut it. All that we decide is that the defendant should be given an opportunity to prove the facts alleged in the offer.

Now that Mr. Guernsey is to b allowed to prove the way in whic the fraud was practiced on him, w have no doubt that this time the will be a verdict in his favo but—

Even if he wins he loses—h time, his peace of mind and th money he will be obliged to pay h lawyer. And he is not through wi the matter.

No man knows what will ha pen to him when he signs a prom issory note.

Weekly Window Display Suggestions

Saratoga Chips Display.

This makes an attractive display and is sure to please. Almost every grocer sells them prepared. However, it would be a good idea to suggest the articles necessary to make homemade ones. First cover the bottom of the window with white crepe paper. Directly in front, on a large linen napkin, place a long glass tray containing some of the chips. Back of this, and in the center, place a pyramid of choice potatoes, and on one side arrange a pyramid of 5-cent packages of the chips, and on the other, a pyramid of 10-cent packages, with a sack of salt between. To the rear place a pyramid of lard in cans and at each side a pyramid of bottles of cottonseed oil. To make this pyramid arrange double rows of bottles and place small pieces of plate glass between, or thin boards may be covered with white crepe paper. Run a width of white crepe paper across the back and above it suspend a large sign card. Also place long, neat sign cards directly in front, as shown in illustration.

From the Nelson Scheme.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 14, 1916.

To the Editor.

Dear Sir:—We note in your publication of August 7th an article headed, "More About the Albert Nelson Co-operative Scheme."

For you and your client's information we beg to state as follows:

The Nelson Grocery Buyers' Association, which is the corporate name and the one now used by us, is a straight and above-board plan to put the retail grocer on a competitive basis with the chain cut-price store by buying his merchandise considerably cheaper than he is buying at present.

Your article states, "The Albert Nelson Co. consists of one Albert Nelson, who has had some but not important experience and extremely limited capital."

In answer, Mr. Nelson is one of our organization and has had twenty years in the retail and chain-store buying.

As far as capital is concerned, we are not largely capitalized at present because we need little capital, but our stockholders are capable and willing to finance the company as needed.

You advise your clients not to pay $90 per year until the plan has proved feasible. So do we. Therefore we put a clause in the contract giving the grocer the privilege to cancel the contract at any time within thirty days from signing, because if we don't make good within thirty days for them we don't want their business.

In regard to saving the grocer 33 per cent.—we can save on some articles, but we emphasize—our saving will average 7 per cent. on the general line of groceries.

You state that freights and shipments will be another drawback. We have also figured on this problem and the freight expense will be a small item when compared with the saving we will make for them.

In other words, if we can't succeed for the grocer we can't succeed for ourselves, and we will succeed.

Thanking you for the privilege of answering your article, and always open to the fullest investigation, we are, Very truly yours,

J. NETTER,
Treasurer Nelson Grocery Buyers' Association.

Meat Packers Accused Again.

Formal complaint charging Swift & Co., Armour & Co., Cudahy & Co., Morris & Co., and other meat packers with violating the anti-trust laws and engaging in unfair business methods and monopolistic practices was filed last Wednesday with the Federal Trade Commission by Representative Doolittle, of Kansas. A prompt and thorough investigation of the live stock industry was asked. Representative Doolittle filed the complaint, he said, on his own responsibility in an effort to have at least a preliminary investigation by the Commission. Supporting his charges, he filed a copy of testimony taken by the House Judiciary Committee on the Borland resolution proposing investigation by the Commission.

Reducing "Overhead"

The grocer who sells National Biscuit Company products increases his total volume of sales without increasing selling cost.

These goods are easy to sell—take less time and argument to sell—require no wrapping—there is no spoilage, therefore no waste.

Thousands of grocers who have put in the National Biscuit Company line have found that their total yearly profit is greater by far than when they sold goods of uncertain quality. Their salespeople have time to sell more goods.

Every sale means a clear profit and a consequent cut in the overhead expense.

The Grocery Markets

Tea.

he tea market is very dull and reason of the dullness is weak. re is no demand to speak of holders will shade prices to e sales. This is not an unusual dition for August. There is no on to expect any important nge in tea in the near future. re are a number of authorities o are predicting an early ending he war and accompanying this n a prediction that when the war s a crimp will be put in the Cey- India tea market, because the ormal freight charges will at e be lower, thus knocking the om out of much tea already in country. The freight on Cey- India teas is about 6 cents per nd above normal. This, of rse, has been added to the cost he tea.

Coffee.

The coffee market shows a slight ctional advance for the week, hough the demand is very light. e feeling in Brazils seems to be ady to firm and there is no in- ation whatever of any slump in ces. Mild coffees are unchanged l dull. Java and Mocha quiet at ing quotations.

Sugar.

The sugar market has become nsiderably demoralized during week. Raws have sold down to 4, but are slightly higher now. e highest quotation heard, how- er, was 5.76. The Cuban holders ve been shipping sugar here with- t any orders, being apparently raid of the market, and this has de the supply larger than the mand. Refined sugar has also en a slump and most of the refin- s are quoting granulated at 7 nts. Two New York refiners are king 7¼, but, of course, are not ling any sugar. Consumptive mand for sugar is still poor.

Fish.

Shore mackerel continues scarce d very high, and the catch so far s been very disappointing. There ve been no developments in the ish and Norway situation. There a demand for mackerel even at e very high prices. There have en some sales of future cod at the high price noted last week. Hake and haddock are about 1 cent higher than normal but the demand in this section is very light owing to the food laws. Domestic sardines are firm on account of light catch and imported sardines are in the same condition that they have been in for several months. Salmon shows no change for the week. The market, both for old and new pack, is very firm. Some packers have named prices on red Alaska at $1.27½ a dozen in a large way f. o. b. coast. This is 12½ cents above last year and is an indication that other grades will open on about the same parity.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose is steady at an advance of 10 points noted last week, which came as the result of the strong corn market. Compound syrup is very dull and quiet at ruling quotations. Sugar syrup and molasses unchanged and dull.

Canned Goods.

Tomatoes show little change from a week ago, both as regards 1915 pack and late 1916 pack. The early pack goods are about gone; everything still points to at least a very fair pack of tomatoes. Packers of Southern shoepeg corn have announced that they would deliver 75 per cent. of their orders. Situation is generally firm but without change for the week. The pea pack is over everywhere with every prospect of short production. The market is steady to firm. Some holders of apples are said to be shading prices; the demand is light. California canned goods show no change. Packers are not pushing for sales as their sales of new pack goods have undoubtedly been heavy. Prices show no change. Small Eastern staple canned goods are unchanged and quiet. Generally speaking, however, the market is in good shape for several of the packs, notably strawberries and cherries, which are short and show a tendency to advance.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are unchanged on last week's basis. In spite of the fact that the present market is about 1¼ cent below the top, buyers are not taking stock, because they are still afraid of the market. Demand is very light. Peaches and apricots show no change and light demand. Raisins are very dull at ruling quotations. Currants and other dried fruits also unchanged, with currants very firm.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans are unchanged on last week's basis, and so are marrows. Prices range from $5.50 to $5.75 for both varieties. The demand is not large. California limas show a shade off but are still considerably high. Demand very trifling. Green and Scotch peas unchanged and dull.

Butter.

The butter market is very firm at advance of 1 cent per pound, due to the very large consumption and the decrease in receipts. The advance applies to all grades. The butter market is undoubtedly very firm and there have been some withdrawals from storage. There is a very large export demand, considerably of it from Canada, and the market is from 5 to 6 cents higher than a year ago.

Eggs.

The egg market is very firm. There is a fine consumptive demand and the receipts are averaging poorer quality on account of the heat. Prices show no change for the week but are very firm. The market is 2 to 3 cents above a year ago.

Provisions.

The provision market is firm and unchanged. This includes all smoked meats, which are now in good demand. Barreled pork is unchanged at about the normal price for the season. Dried beef is ruling about 2 to 3 cents above normal and is firm and active. Canned meats are unchanged on a little higher basis than usual. Pure lard is firmer at an advance of ¼ to ½ cent, due to firmer Western markets. Compound lard is firm and unchanged at a price about 1½ cents above normal.

Cheese.

The cheese market is very firm at an advance of 1 to 1½ cents per pound due to the very large export demand. The export demand for cheese would be even larger if shippers could get refrigeration space. The make is about normal for the season.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Foreign Grocery Specialties.

The available supplies of last season's pimentos (Spanish red peppers) are very small, particularly half-pound tins, and prices are very firm, in view of the fact that pimentos cannot arrive here before about the end of the year.

French mushrooms continue as scarce as ever, and hardly any supplies can be had from France.

The drought in the olive-producing sections of Italy is harmful to the development of the olives, and it is feared that the new crop will be seriously damaged unless conditions change materially. In consequence, prices for Italian fine edible olive oil have already advanced about 10 per cent.

The garlic situation remains unchanged. In spite of rather small arrivals, prices have remained about stationary, as the demand for garlic of late has not been what it should be, and what it usually is at this season of the year.

STROHMEYER & ARPE CO.
New York.

Imported Fish Specialties.

There is no change in the salt fish situation. There is a good hand-to-mouth demand for herrings, consistent with the prevailing hot weather. The demand for all kinds of imported sardines continues good in spite of the prevailing high prices. Supplies are coming in sparingly only, and do not allow of accumulation of large stocks. The new Norwegian summer packed sardines which are now arriving present the finest quality that has been seen here in years.

New Japanese crab meat is coming in very sparingly and cables asking for offers of further supplies remain without answer from Japan, consequently the market here has stiffened materially and the few holders of new Japanese crab meat, which, by the way, shows the finest quality that has ever been imported, have advanced their prices and are reluctant to sell in round lots.

STROHMEYER & ARPE CO.

Wheat and Flour.

In a recent letter we estimated the spring wheat crop as 200,000,000 bushels and winter wheat as 460,000,000 bushels, which was corroborated by the Government report, giving 199,000,000 and 455,000,000 bushels for the respective crops. Without further deterioration in the spring wheat area, we will have a wheat harvest of only 654,000,000 bushels, or 357,000,000 bushels less than last year's crop, the smallest crop since 1911, when 621,000,000 bushels were harvested.

We have already pointed out that even with this enormous shortage we will have a surplus for export of 150,000,000 bushels, provided prices are made sufficiently attractive to bring it out of farmers' hands, and that our reserves can be reduced to the minimum. We must bear in mind that only once in the eleven years preceding 1915 our maximum exports for any one year exceeded 150,000,000 bushels and the average for the whole period was but 110,000,000 bushels. This compares with 250,000,000 bushels exported last year and 333,000,000 millions exported for the year ending July 1, 1915.

It is only when our crop calamity comes in conjunction with a similar failure in Canada that the situation becomes alarming and it now seems certain that the three great wheat producing provinces in Canada have suffered enormous losses by heat, blight and black rust. From private sources of information, which we consider conservative, we are led to believe that the Canadian crop will not exceed 200,000,000 bushels as compared with 376,000,000 bushels last year. When European buyers awaken to what this really means there will be a scramble for wheat.

The enormous carry-over from the 1915 crop had given them a feeling of security, for they had calculated that with only moderate crops in North America there would be ample supplies for export, but instead of moderate crops they are now confronted with crop calamities. Last year they obtained 250,000,000 bushels from the United States and 260,000,000 bushels from Canada, whilst this year the very maximum that could be obtained from the United States is 150,000,000 bushels, and that quantity only by reducing our reserves at the end of the year to a very dangerous minimum. What then can be expected from Canada? Canada requires 70,000,000 bushels for f and seed, and with a crop of 200,000 bushels could export 130,000,000 bus plus the surplus carried over from preceding crop, estimated 40,000 bushels, which would make 170,000 bushels, as the exportable surplus the coming year.

If only 150,000,000 bushels can obtained from the United States 170,000,000 bushels from Canada, N America will have but 320,000,000 b els to supply a prospective demand over 500,000,000 bushels after allow the maximum that can be obtained f other countries. Indeed, there is serious danger of our over-export and finding ourselves bare of supp for domestic needs before the crops are harvested.

Spices.

The market is more active, but th have been few changes during the w Trading has been for spot goods actual needs. There has been little b ing of futures, due to high prices vailing abroad. Foreign markets very much firmer and any unusual mand here will have a tendency to r values.

Pepper.—Cables from the East qu higher figures on Lampong. Mala grades are higher than prices h Higher prices are indicated from on.

Cloves.—Higher in both London Zanzibar. Prices here are likely to very much higher.

Pimento (Allspice).—In better mand, especially for choice go Prices at present we consider safe.

Mace.—The demand is on the crease. Prices are unchanged.

Nutmegs.—The demand will incre from now on. Prices here are low. believe higher values will be reali over the fall months.

Cassias.—There is a firmer underto but prices are practically unchang Stocks here are not large at present.

Gingers.—In only fair demand at g erally unchanged prices.

Green Ginger Root.—Now sell fairly well. Prices firm and likely remain so over the balance of the su mer and early fall.

Tapioca.—The demand is on the crease. Prices are practically changed.

Paprikas.—Are quiet and unchang Shippers in Spain have cabled hig prices for new crop goods.

Seeds, Herbs, Etc.—Are unchan during the week. There is a good s inquiry and a fair average dema Many articles, we believe, will adva this fall.

Enter Another Chain Store Concern for Cigars and Tobacco.

A chain of retail cigar stores, operated by the New York firm of D. A. Schulte, Inc., will soon be established in Phila- delphia and other cities, to enter into competition with the stores now op- erated by the United Co. The first of he group will be opened at the north- east corner of Eighth and Chestnut streets, at Green's Hotel, about October 1st. This site is the first one oc- cupied by the United Cigar Co. in this city, and was vacated recently for one on the southwest corner. D. A. Schulte, president of the competing cigar com- pany, has ordered twenty locations throughout the center of the city as the initial step in the firm's opening of the Philadelphia stores. Their intention of waging commercial warfare against the stores of the United Cigar Co., it is admitted, is shown by the fact that each new store will be in proximity to a store of the latter company. The Schulte firm is considered in the com- mercial world the only retail cigar com- pany in this country powerful enough to compete with the United Cigar Co. Already the Schulte firm has opened chain stores in Newark, Chicago and towns in New England, and it is said they will dot the entire East with new stores. They will offer coupons, such as the other company does, and will redeem them for premiums at their first store at Eighth and Chestnut streets. They are allied closely with big man- ufacturers, and have declared that they will sell goods cheap and good enough to compete with the United Cigar Co.

AMONG THE TRADE.

The Dairy and Food Department is waging another campaign in Philadelphia against the sale of rot- ten eggs as food, chiefly in cakes. So far, only cheap foreigners have been found using them, and in a comparatively small way.

BURK'S
Meat Loaf

SEASONABLE THROUGHOUT THE YEAR

Composed entirely of fine selected meats—contains no flour or cereals. Baked fresh daily in loaves of about six pounds.

Makes a quick and delicious breakfast sliced and fried in a little butter.

Can also be served cold for luncheon, cut in thin slices or warmed in the oven in one piece to take the place of a roast.

BURK'S
Lunch Roll

(Copyrighted)

SUBSTITUTE FOR BOILED HAM

Composed of lean, tender pieces of pork, mildly cured, stuffed in linen container and boiled.

Far superior and more delicious than boneless boiled ham, being juicy, mild and sweet; also less expensive and not near so wasteful—in fact no waste at all. Much finer in texture and just as easily sliced, or more so, as this can be done in a slicing machine.

The cover is readily removed by cutting the seam and then stripping off the sack as the roll is consumed. This prevents it becoming dry and is a sanitary feature that appeals to the consumer, as it keeps the product clean while displayed on the counter and untouched by hand while slicing, a vast improvement as compared with handling the greasy, unprotected boneless boiled ham.

MEAT LOAF and LUNCH ROLL were originated by us, now imitated by others, but none equal to Burk's, which are prepared from only the choicest materials.

ing all repairs, taxes, licenses, upkeep, and with the depreciation charged on the delivery equipment; also charge this account with payments for express, parcel post, and contract delivery service.

33. Management and Office Salaries.

Charge this account with the salaries of the manager, bookkeepers, office clerks, stenographers, and of other general office help not otherwise charged.

34. Office Supplies and Expense.

Charge this account with purchases of stationery of all sorts, account books and forms (except selling and stock forms), typewriter supplies, printing and postage (except advertising), and depreciation on office equipment.

35. Insurance on Stock and Store Equipment.

Charge this account with all expense of insurance, fire, burglary, fidelity, plate glass, employers' liability and other. This account is not to be charged with insurance on store or business property.

36. Taxes on Stock and Store Equipment.

Charge this account with taxes on all stock and store equipment. As taxes are not payable in advance, the amount charged this account must be credited to "Accrued Taxes."

37. Losses From Bad Debts.

Charge this account with the amount that has been reserved for bad debts (4).

38. Miscellaneous General Expense.

Charge this account with heat, light, repairs, depreciation on store equipment, and with any items that can not be charged directly to any of the above particular accounts.

39. Rent.

Charge this account with all rents paid. If the store is owned, rent should be charged equivalent to the amount it could be rented for to others, crediting "Income from Other Sources"; in the latter event, "Income from Other Sources" should be charged with the taxes, insurance, repairs and depreciation on the store.

40. Trading Account.

This account shows the inventory of merchandise at opening and is not touched again until the books are closed. It is then charged with Merchandise Purchases (25), and Sales Allowances (24), and credited with Sales (23). The inventory at closing is then credited and the balance will show the gross profit on trading. The gross profit is transferred to the credit of the "Profit and Loss Account." The inventory is then brought down as a new balance.

41. Profit and Loss Account (From Trading Operations).

Charge this account with the balances of all the expense accounts and credit it with the gross profit from trading; the difference will be the net profit or loss, which is closed into the proprietor's account if a partnership, to the partners' accounts, according to their several interests, and, if a corporation, to the surplus account.

42. Interest.

Charge this account with all interest paid and credit it with all interest received and close into "Profit and Loss Account."

43. Cash Discount on Merchandise Purchases.

Credit this account with all cash discount taken on purchases of merchandise. The account is closed into Profit and Loss.

A record of such discounts available but not taken—cash discount lost—will be found of use.

44. Rent Income (Net).

If the store is owned, the rent which has been charged to account 39 should be credited to this account and it should be charged with insurance, taxes, depreciation and repairs on store. The account is closed into "Profit and Loss."

45. Miscellaneous Outside Income.

Credit this account with incidental receipts such as toll from telephone pay stations in store, etc.

International Motor Truck

You simply can't realize the value of an International Motor Truck as a business builder until you use one, or—until your competitor gets one. You will notice, though, that no man who once uses an International Motor Truck ever goes back to horses.

Why is that? There are many reasons. The truck costs less money than the horse outfits whose work it does. The upkeep is less. It takes less work and less time than horses to keep in condition. It's a money saver, a time saver, and a steady worker, but—more than all these put together—the International Motor Truck is a business builder.

Business Ain't Rotten at All.

I want to tell you fellows something: the people that are saying that it's all right about there being prosperity, but it ain't got to the retail grocer, ain't wise to what's going on.

It has got to the retail grocer. Business is great—to them that's in shape to do it.

I been talking to a lot of my customers lately. They all say that business is all right—a lot better than it was a year ago—except a few that ain't right with themselves.

Some people couldn't do business if they had the only store in town and there was a law against buying anywhere else.

They'd move so slow and would eat up so much time doing things that hadn't any money in, that they wouldn't get anywhere even if they had the whole thing in their hands.

That's the honest opinion of a man that when he speaks, the crowned heads of Europe stop scrapping to listen.

When the applause dies down, I'll go on to give you some true facts.

The last time I was in a certain store, before last week, was the last of June. This was a customer that always sees things through brown specs. I've got a hunch he's constipated, though I ain't ever asked him. I'm a gent, whatever comes. I asked him how business was.

"Oh, I don't know," he said, "there isn't much snap to it. I don't see any of the prosperity they say is around."

"How's your June business size up with last June?" I ask.

"I don't know; haven't figured it up yet."

"Well, I'll be here again in August," I said. "And I want you to have it all figured up and let me know."

I knew he was selling more stuff, if he didn't. One thing, I ain't conconstipated and I don't wear brown specs.

Well, I got back there last week.

"Did you figure up on June yet?" I asked him.

"Yes, I did. I did $200 more this June than I did last," he said. "I was surprised."

"I wasn't," I said, "I knew you was selling more goods. The idea of your going around and saying there wasn't any snap to business. You annoy me."

I've got another customer that's been buying less stuff of me every year for the last three. No, it ain't because he's got on to my goods, either! Nothing like it! It's because his business has fell off, that's what it's because of.

"Business is rotten! Business is rotten!" That's all I get from him.

Ain't it is rotten too—with him. And take it from me, it's going to be a heap rottener. Some of these days he's going to wake up and see that there ain't any business at all.

But he's got it coming to him. With all his croaking, he's a born salesman. He could go out among his trade and sell himself out of goods. Instead of that, he lets his boy go around for orders. His boy couldn't sell salt to a sheep. One thing, he's got a case of catarrh you can get for two squares even if the wind ain't right. He's a peach of a salesman, he is.

"Why don't you get down to it?" I asked him only last month. "You can sell goods all around any other retail man on my list. Why don't you go out and drum up business yourself?"

"What would I do that for when I've got my boy?"

"Because you say yourself your boy ain't doing it?" I said.

"Give the boy a chance," he said. "He'll get it after a while. He's young."

Well, he may be young, but his case of catarrh is old, believe me, and that's working harder than he is. That catarrh sells more goods than the boy does, but it sells 'em for other stores, get that?

There's a whole lot of fellows that are kicking about bad business that could make it good if they'd go out themselves and work it up. They ain't willing to do that—say they're needed in the store. Oh, heck! They can get lots of people to work in the store, but they can't get lots of people to go out and get orders. Funny they can't see that.

My own business so far this year has run 15 per cent. ahead of last year. Some of that comes because I've got some new trade, and some of it comes because they see now that what I've been saying for years about my justly celebrated line is true.

But most of it comes because my old trade are moving more stuff. There ain't any doubt about that—not a bit of doubt.

THE STROLLER.

Week's Dry Goods Report.

Marshall Field & Co., in their weekly review of the dry goods trade, say:—

The week has been marked locally by very brisk trade, due to Chicago Market Week and Fashion Show. Merchants have responded to Chicago's invitation to "Come to Chicago" in unusual numbers and trade in general has been stimulated and greatly benefited. The South and Southwest have been particularly well represented.

Shipments of goods and road sales are considerably in excess of figures for the same period a year ago.

Prices are stronger and collections are very satisfactory.

Selling Talks With Clerks

BY A MAN WHO HAS BEEN ONE

Conducted by W. E. SWEENEY, Manager for L. Lehman & Co.'s Department Food Store, Dover, N. J.

If I Were You—I'd begin to plan now for a "Fall Opening"—say, last week in October. Object—new season's goods, showing new prices and having an elaborate display. Cutting 25 or 30 cans fruits and vegetables. Incidentally having a little music. Demonstrations and other kinds of sampling would, of course, be an important part of the programme.

As a matter of fact, a grocery opening should be (and is) just as important as a millinery or dry goods opening. The quality and variety and prices of foods that the public is to eat and pay for in 1916-17 is of vitally more concern that the shape of the hat or the prevailing dress pattern.

Talk it over with your principal.

New Customers.—Have you made any efforts to gain a new customer this summer? You know there are a lot of women who shop from place to place and they need a good talking to. You can do it in the store, of course, but the privacy of their own home is better. They will tell you that so and so is "very accommodating," and that some other fellow sells the best butter in the town and still another grocer has a brand of coffee that can't be equaled. You must listen to all this, and while you're listening, or pretending to, frame your own counter argument.

The important thing to do is not t leave without taking an order, and tha order is the entering wedge. Put up yourself and follow it up wit another visit and another. At least on customer a week can be gained this way

The Tie That Binds—Is store cor diality. Remember that. Welcom people because you're glad to se them as people. Not necessarily for th money they're going to spend, but rathe because they are calling on you from motive of friendship. Maybe that stretching the thing pretty far along, bu the spirit of it is perfectly workabl

In cultivating this regard—th warmth of feeling and generous actio we are constructing the business just a surely and just as soundly as the ma in the office may be doing while work ing out an advertising plan.

Because you are the real practica thing in advertising. You are the fe low, remember, that will have to con firm all the nicely rounded sentences i that newspaper headline. If you don' better, a hundred times better, the fin words about the store had never bee written.

Isn't it refreshing to go into a stor and find the sales people and the ad in harmony? And haven't you many time felt sorry for "somebody" whe the "help" contradict the newspaper? have.

NEW YORK LONDON INDIA CEYLON CHICAGO TORONTO

No. 377.—Some Suggestions for Discontented Partners.

The following, which comes to me from a Chicago paper, has a familiar sound:—

> Mr. A, senior member of a firm, owns two-thirds of the business. Mr. B, junior member, owns one-third. Mr. B gets one-third of the profits and does most of the work. He has become dissatisfied and wishes to sell out. He has not sufficient money to buy Mr. A's interest, and Mr. A will not buy him out, for he needs him and his influence in the business. Now, the question is, if Mr. B finds a buyer for his one-third interest, can Mr. A refuse to accept the buyer as a partner, thus compelling Mr. B to retain his interest in the business?

All over this broad land there are partnerships in precisely this situation. In fact, dissatisfaction between or among partners, over the feeling that one is doing more work than the other, or getting more money, is one of the chief drawbacks of partnership. My observation is that very rarely indeed do you find a combination of two partners—it is even rarer, I believe, with two partners than with more—which is so well matched that each member of it is satisfied with everything that the other does.

I have always advised men who came to me wanting to form a partnership, that this was the rock on which very many firms split, and that if such a situation arose, they would not find it as easy to get apart as it had been to get together.

I can answer this inquiry and discuss some generally interesting phases of partnership law at the same time.

This correspondent does not tell me what sort of a partnership agreement these people have. It may be merely a verbal understanding to yoke up together on certain terms, not for any particular period. Or it may be a formal written agreement, as at should be, for a definite period.

If it is an informal partnership not for any specific period, either partner can withdraw from it any time he likes, merely by giving notice to his fellow partner. Some States (Arkansas and Louisiana) require the withdrawal to be done in good faith, and will not permit it to be done at what is obviously so inconvenient a time as to intentionally embarrass the firm. But in most States it can be done on reasonable notice at any time.

Of course a partner who withdrew in this way could expect to sell his interest. He would usually offer it to his fellow partners first, and if they refused, then to some outsider. The law will permit him to sell his interest to an outsider without restriction—but it will not admit his buyer to a partnership in the firm without the remaining partners' consent. In other words, the law will not force a partner on anybody. It will not create a partnership without both partners' consent. So that in the above case A can refuse to accept B's buyer as his partner, and this will usually block the sale, but not always. For the outsider who buys the outgoing partner's interest can always demand an accounting from the remaining partner, and this usually winds the firm up. If the remaining partner doesn't want it wound up, he will sometimes accept the new partner in order to avoid that.

All that a man gets who buys a partner's share in a business—if that share is one-half, say—is the right to one-half the firm's assets after all its obligations are paid. He doesn't get a share in a going business at all. The accounting which he can ask for is for the purpose of ascertaining the net assets and giving him his share.

Of course if the remaining partner accepts the buyer as his partner, there is no accounting, and the business goes on as before.

If the partnership agreement is formal and written, and is for one year, say, either partner must wait until the year is out before he can withdraw, unless he wants to incur a damage suit for breach of contract. In Pennsylvania, Utah, West Virginia, Connecticut, Iowa and New Jersey, the law will hardly permit a partner to withdraw until the year is out. In other States he can do it, subject to the risk of suit for damages. The partner under such an agreement can sell his interest, just as a partner can under the other kind of an agreement, subject to the same legal restrictions.

The way to get an accounting in such a case is to go into court, either in an equity proceeding or in a common law accounting proceeding, and set forth that the partnership having been dissolved by the sale of one partner's interest to a third party, which third party has been refused admission to the firm by the remaining partner, accounting is demanded by the buyer of the outgoing interest.

I think I neglected to say that the sale of one partner's interest to an outsider automatically dissolves the firm.

How could B have avoided this situation in the beginning? Of course he could have done it by having a written agreement with A, binding either party, if the other withdrew and sold his interest, to accept the latter's buyer as a substitute. Usually neither partner likes this in the agreement, as it is almost too much to expect. Or the agreement could bind each of the partners to buy the other's interest in case of withdrawal. Outside of these or some modification of them, there is no way in which such a situation could be avoided. It is one of the risks of partnership.

Dear Sir:—Please size up this advertisement and advise if you think ads. of this type, i. e., ads. without prices, are good if used only at intervals.

We try to use one ad. like this in the newspapers to four or five with prices.

Yours truly,
COLE'S VARIETY STORE.

I assume that what Mr. Cole sends me was simply a proof. It can't be that any newspaper would be printed like this was and on such impossible paper. The printer probably simply laid a piece of paper over Mr. Cole's advertisement in one of his forms, and hammered a proof. If I should be wrong about this—if this is really a part of the newspaper, then somebody ought to go to the printer and shake him up.

The advertisement measures 10 inches double column, and is here reproduced somewhat reduced.

This advertisement is not entirely worthless. It amounts to general publicity, which is always worth something, but I should never expect such advertising to do much if used exclusively. What I mean is this: If Mr. Cole were to advertise every week in the year, using a general advertisement like this, I shouldn't be surprised if it produced not the slightest effect upon his business. The biggest and most enlightened advertisers run this sort of matter very sparingly. Personally I believe in not running it at all, always provided there is a thing better to say.

A store that does business on plan of no deliveries and no cha accounts, which must be unique most towns, has an inexhausti theme. It never needs to use g eral matter. He can contrast prices, due to a cutting off of th two main sources of expense, w other stores' prices, through a l range of articles of all kinds. A this sort of thing makes the m interesting advertising. "What Delivery Does for Canned To toes," will suggest the idea. "W We Pay You to Carry Your G Goods Home," is another thoug There isn't any limit. If I specific and pointed material this at hand, I would never matter as general as Mr. Cole used in the advertisement ab reproduced.

This Is a Year When the Manufacturer Some Trademarked Package Products "Works for the Other Fellow"

Raw Materials Like Corn and Wheat, Used Largely Pancake Flours, Are Advancing But the Manufactur of the Trademarked Brands Can't Put His Price Up the Bulk Seller Can.

The trade are apt to believe that the manufacturer who sells trademarked goods has a good deal of a cinch; his price is steady right along and even when the market for his raw material declines he keeps on selling at his uniform price just the same.

But there is another side to it, and this year is bringing it out, especially as to some of the prepared pancake flours. Wheat and corn, as readers of this paper know, are advancing and are already very high. The manufacturer of some package trade-marked flour whose raw material is wheat or corn, or both, is apt to be choked to death with his "uniform" price, because the same reason that makes him dislike to reduce the price when the raw material market declines, makes it impracticable to advance it when the raw material market advances.

An interesting case in point is supplied by the following extract from a letter written to this paper by the manufacturer of Aunt Jemima Pancake Flour:—

On account of the recent advan in the price of all grain, caused the failure of the wheat crop in t Northwest and the corn crop in t Southwest, Aunt Jemima Panca Flour bids fair to be the lowe priced good product on the mark this coming season. We can a vance the price of wheat flour sacks from day to day or hour hour, basing our quotations on t market price of wheat, but we ca not do this on Aunt Jemima Pa cake Flour, because the orders a taken in the spring and summer f fall delivery; and furthermore, is almost impossible for us change the selling price during t season. Some goods sold in pac ages will be in the same class ours, but quite a large percenta of those products have gone to 15-cent seller, which put them in different class from ours, which w call a 10-cent seller.

We are up against a hard pro osition this year, as far as profi are concerned on our Aunt Jemim product, and it would look now if we would be doing business f the other fellow this year.

Three Risks Eliminated For You

The stamp on your specialty order practically eliminates all the usual risks of signing a specialty order, which are:—

1. The danger that the order may be altered or padded.

2. The possibility that the jobber may turn the order down or pay no attention to it.

3. The probability of delay until the jobber's salesman can see you and confirm the order.

None of these things happen to stamped specialty orders, because those orders are guaranteed. Doesn't it logically follow that stamped orders are the only specialty orders you ought to sign?

If you will make a price on it we can possibly sell it for you in a hurry. Write us about it, stating the quantity, condition and your best price. You might give the original cost, too. We will give it a key number and offer it to our 4,000 subscribers. Your name will not appear unless you want it to. All sales ought to be on a cash basis.

The point is that what won't sell for you may be in everday demand for somebody else, who will be glad to get your stock of it at a bargain.

There will be no charge for this service anywhere—we do it to help along.

EXCHANGE DEPARTMENT, Modern Merchant and Grocery World

927 Arch Street Philadelphia, Pa.

Offer No. 111.

I have five gross Stewart's Magic Washing Crystal, 99 9-10 pure, the best thing for washing all kinds of clothes.

Each dozen is pasted on a neat sign, having a nice advertisement concerning this Crystal; also having 12 samples. Each package is marked 10 cents.

The wholesale jobbers ask 90 per dozen, $10 per gross.

I will ship to any place, freight paid, one dozen at 90 cents, and give a half dozen free, or one gross at $7.

A wideawake merchant should grab this opportunity, as it nets you 50 per cent. profit. HARRY BARSKY, 2300 Carson St., Pittsburgh.

Offer No. 114.

Twenty-nine packages Nesnah Desserts, assorted flavors, vanilla, chocolate, raspberry, orange and lemon. Guaranteed by Food and Drugs Act, June 30, 1906. First-class condition. Will sell same at 5 cents per package of 3½ ozs. each.

Also 24 pairs ladies' shoes, sizes from 2½ to 5½; all lace shoes; nice, clean stock; widths mostly E; shoes that retailed from $1.50 to $2.50 per pair; the only objection is the lace in this neighborhood.

Three ladies' black shirtwaists, fancy, different sizes.

Seven ladies' white fancy shirtwaists, different sizes; give offer.

Also nine dressing sacks, black, with polka dot; size 34; clean stock; give offer.

Six skirts, with waists to match; four dark blue, with polka dot, and two black, with polka dot; give offer.

THE VALUE OF BRIGHT STORES

¶ The difficulty of making a sale—whether it be dry goods or vegetables, jewelry or shoes is increased tenfold in a poorly lighted store. Other things being equal, the Electrically lighted shop will do more business than the store which uses other illuminants. "Indoor Daylight" can only be obtained by the use of Mazda Electric lamps.

Have you any real policy about nationally advertised goods, or do you merely drift along, like many merchants?

You ought to have a policy, and you ought to work to carry it out.

The policy ought to be to pick the nationally advertised products which are good merchandise, and push them for all they are worth.

MODERN MERCHANT AND GROCERY WORLD

ESTABLISHED 1885

VOL. LXII. PHILADELPHIA, August 28, 1916. NO. 9

Many merchants are scared by the mere size of a competitor. Size of itself counts for nothing. No competitor can make a consumer buy of him unless she wants to buy of him. Your chances to make her want to buy of you is as good or better, because you are on the spot.

In Every Basket

Greater than any possible profit to the up-to-date grocer is the satisfaction of selling a good article.

Shredded Wheat

brings to the grocer both profit and satisfaction. Shredded Wheat in every basket that goes out means satisfied customers. It is always the same high quality —the one universal, staple breakfast cereal. It is ready-cooked and ready-to-serve.

This Biscuit is packed in odorless spruce wood cases, which may be easily sold for 10 or 15 cents, thereby adding to the grocer's profits.

Made only by

The Shredded Wheat Co.

USE

HIRES

GOLD MILK

And Save Money on your Milk Bills

Mr. Grocer:—Why not be a milkman, too? You can be the biggest milkman in your neighborhood if you tell your customers to add two cans of cold water to one tall can of HIRES GOLD MILK, and then use on the table for drinking and in the kitchen for cooking.

Don't Sell Unprofitable Wheat Cereals

Every grocer must sell at least one wheat cereal. Some wheat cereals actually cost him money to sell, instead of paying a profit.

Wheatena is the best wheat cereal made—the most carefully made—and has always paid the retailer a good profit. Merchandise which is at the same time good and profitable is the only kind to sell.

Keeping Down Expense of Motor Delivery Wagons

Some Practical Advice From a Concern Which Operates Several. Running Expenses Can Be Made Reasonable or Unreasonable. Making the Little Repairs When Needed.

[The following article is a part of a letter of advice which a concern using several motor delivery wagons placed in the hands of every employee who had anything to do with operating those wagons. The point of the letter is how the cost of operating motor delivery vehicles can be kept down. Everybody who has ever operated a motor truck or motor delivery wagon knows that the expense of operation can be made very reasonable or made very high. It depends on how the various items are watched. The advice given in the following letter is of great value.—Ed.]

Of the total expense of truck operation, labor is the heaviest item; and this fact shows to what extent the human element enters into it, and emphasizes the necessity of educating men to properly handle the equipment. The possibilities of cutting down wear and tear expense, also repairs, fuel, tires, etc., are great. Labor runs high with the heavier capacity truck because the same requires more help. This is one reason why we favor the 1½-ton in preference to the 3-ton capacity vehicle, and another is the greater percentage of efficiency obtained through the use of the lighter truck.

With gasoline so high, we have been limiting the use of trucks and runabouts as much as possible. Encourage your men to get all the gasoline mileage they can; in fact, get up a little friendly rivalry among the men on this and you will find better results will follow. More mileage can be obtained by looking after the tires, keeping the valves in better condition and having them ground regularly. There are many other ways in which you can save on gasoline. Carbon in the cylinders means waste of gasoline. When a cylinder is carbonized the power falls off and your mileage per gallon falls short. Another thing, the better ignition the less gas used. The points on the spark plug should be the correct distance apart. They should be regularly inspected, as a missing cylinder means a waste of gasoline. The number of miles per gallon of gasoline can be increased by more care being given to the truck and runabout in a general way. The watchword now is to get more out of your gasoline than you did last year. Keep the front wheels lined up better. Keep the tires at a better point of inflation; in fact, there are a score of things you can do that when totaled will add to your mileage per gallon, and that is what we should all work for, considering the present high price of fuel.

Stick closely to all road rules, because if at any time there is an accident and we are not within our rights it goes very hard with the company. Drivers should not take chances on speeding past a street car or any other moving vehicle, or in crossing a street line, because it is much more advisable to lose a few minutes in a case of this kind than to take any chances and meet with an accident. A motor truck is not built to travel fast; it should not go faster than twelve miles an hour whether loaded or empty. A truck is figured on a scientific basis to do a certain amount of work, and when it is driven beyond capacity irreparable damage will result.

There has been a tendency wherever we have put on auto trucks to consider the auto deliveries in about the same light as the horse deliveries. This is one thing that must be absolutely gotten away from. The proper way would be to consider the auto truck in the light of a locomotive, and the shipping clerk ought to act as a sort of traffic manager, seeing to it that the truck carries as near as possible its full capacity at all times. In shipping carload freight it is our aim to load the car to full capacity and avoid paying freight on air. It is more expensive to haul wind in an auto truck than in the freight car, and economy in loading and routing is just that much more important. It costs about so much per mile to operate this machine whether you haul three hundred pounds or three thousand pounds. It will take about the same amount of gasoline, possibly a little more with a load, but the wear on the machine will not be so very much more, and the cost of labor will be the same.

There are certain fixed charges; for instance, fire and liability insurance, license costs, interest on the investment, drivers' salary, etc., that go on just the same during the working day, whether the truck is in operation or standing idle. If a truck stands at loading platform longer than necessary, the time is not only wasted, but it is making the delivery more expensive.

The cost to deliver per hundredweight will increase rapidly on this account. It is therefore up to the shipping clerk to work out some method whereby the load can be put on in the shortest possible time and get the truck started.

The chauffeur and shipping clerk will have to co-operate at all times in selecting the routes and studying the street conditions with a view of obtaining the greatest possible mileage out of the tire equipment. The chauffeur should take every precaution to protect the tires by way of slowing up when crossing rough street car tracks or turning corners, reducing speed on rough brick pavement, cutting down speed on worn-out asphalt streets, avoiding sharp rocks or street car track intersections where rails are worn to a fine edge, starting the car slowly and smoothly, instead of with a jerk, shutting off the power and stopping gradually instead of abruptly, depending on the brakes. One serious case in any of these respects will damage a solid tire so that its period of usefulness is cut down 30 to 50 per cent. It is ruinous to the motor to run the truck over rough roads at high speed in order to make up a little time. The chauffeur must avoid this.

Don't figure the manufacturer's guarantee will protect us altogether. It will protect us perhaps more against poor material and defective construction, but the control of the driver, the loss of time in loading and unloading, the selection of rough streets, overloading, overspeeding, cruelty to tires, lack of daily inspection, etc., fall without the pale of such guarantees. An auto truck properly handled is a good asset to any house, but if not properly handled it will cost a lot of money and grief and a good many explanations at the end of the month on the synopsis sheet.

When anything goes wrong and the truck is in need of repairs which necessitates sending it to a garage, be sure and keep in close touch w just what is being done to the m chine. We had one experie where an irresponsible man figu he knew more about how the m chine should be built than the ma facturers who employed the high priced engineers to bring their up to the highest state of perfecti This repair man changed the pr ciple of the motor, the oiling s tem, etc., and the result was t we had to spend a lot of mo buying new parts to replace th ruined by this so-called mecha

In connection with the main nance of the machine there are a of little things that the chauff can do just as well as the rep man in the garage. For instan he should be able to put on n sing grease cups, adjust cha grind valves, scrape carbon, take rods, etc. This work is simple, a if he does not understand it now can easily find somebody who show him. It would cost 75 ce per hour, maybe more, and doesn't take long to present a for from 10 to 20 hours of s work as this that could be sav and a few of these bills every mo will make the truck too expens to operate. On the other hand, don't want the chauffeur to do tinkering with the more comp and vital parts of the machine. instance, the magneto, timing ge etc., and we don't want him to experimenting by making changes anywhere. It is the sim work that we refer to. Keeping nuts and screws tightened up i very important thing, and so thing he can attend to every Due to carelessness in this resp we have had accidents that cost a lot of money. It is the li things like this that are so of considered so unimportant t leads to the big expenses, and urge the importance of these thi upon the chauffeur.

Most important of all is the ing. Have the chauffeur follow oiling instructions with the most diligently. Have him get i the habit of attending to cer parts at regular intervals. N rally, rapidly moving or turn parts need closer attention t won't take the chauffeur long to una Men Complain at Local Jobber's Advertising of Yellow Tail Fish

S. Janney, Jr., & Co., Advertised Yellow Tail as the Same as White Meat Tuna, and Stated That They Could Not be Told Apart. Demonstration Shows This Not to be True. Retailers Warned Not to Sell to Their Trade Under the Same Representations.

The various packers of tuna fish e reported to be up in arms at me advertising which has been ne for "yellow tail" fish, by the iladelphia jobbing house of B. S. nney, Jr., & Co., 123 Market
eet. Yellow tail fish is packed cans similarly to tuna, but is ite different and very inferior.
spite of this the Janney con-rn advertised it as follows in their ekly price-list a week or two o:—

the statements which the Janney concern made, and any retailer who acts on them and sells yellow tail to his trade under the same representation, is likely to get himself into trouble.

Some time ago some of the California fish packers asked the Government's permission to call yellow tail fish tuna fish, claiming the two to be of the same species. The Government refused permission because the two were wholly different,

ELLOW TAIL FISH (Same as Tuna Fish) 4 Dozen No. ½ Tins { 95c Doz.
We have been handling Yellow Tail Fish for several months with a great l of satisfaction to ourselves and our trade. The meat is as white, as tender l delicate in flavor, and as smooth in texture as any white meat Tuna Fish ever saw and if you opened a tin alongside of Tuna, you could not tell the difference between m; at the price we name this week, they will go humming, as it makes a 10c seller of a No. ½
Our stock is limited, so first come, first served.

The tuna packers and their repre-ntatives say that this is an abso-
e misrepresentation. They say at yellow tail is not the same as na; that the meat is not "as white, tender and delicate in flavor and ooth in texture as any white meat na fish you ever saw." They say is not true that "if you opened a alongside of tuna, you could not l the difference between them."
A "Modern Merchant and Gro-ry World" representative witssed a demonstration during the ek with the two fishes side by le. Both were packed in half-und tins; the yellow tail was
.25 per case of four dozen and tuna $4.50; quite a difference tween two products substantially same.

After seeing the two fish together became clear that the tuna men's mplaint was justified. White at tuna is as white as chicken east; yellow tail is a dark gray n, looking much like mackerel.
ere is no warrant whatever for the yellow tail being in every way inferior.

The following statement has been made to this paper by one of the largest tuna factors in the business:

> We wish to say that yellow tail is positively not the same as tuna fish, although the taste is somewhat similar. The flavor of tuna fish is markedly superior and the appearance is vastly more appetizing. The meat is not as white as that of the first grade tuna fish and is certainly not as smooth—the best grade of tuna fish contains meat in solid chunks, whereas the meat of the yellow tail appears to be rather shredded.
> It is obvious that if yellow tail were the same as tuna fish the packers could better afford to label it as such, as tuna fish is known and yellow tail is comparatively unknown. Furthermore, the price of yellow tail is less than that of tuna fish and it would be an unwise packer indeed who would not label it "tuna fish" if the law permitted.
> One would have to have a severe cataract to be unable to distinguish betwecn yellow tail and tuna.

DO YOU USE PREMIUMS?

If you do, don't fail to consult the directory of premium manufacturers which is regularly published in this paper. You can get anything in the premium line from them at manufacturers' prices.

To-morrow's Business!

WHEN a customer starts out to buy some standard article and has no opportunity to better the fixed price, it really makes no difference to him where he makes the purchase.

¶ However, there are two very definite influences which will guide any customer to some particular store.

¶ One of them is the privilege of obtaining the goods on credit, which in the final analysis is bad business both for the dealer and customer; the other is the assurance of receiving some extra value for paying cash.

¶ It is up to you, Mr. Retailer, to decide what class of trade you want. "S. H." Green Stamps have been building cash business for thousands of progressive, wide-awake merchants throughout the United States for the past twenty years. They not only bring to you desirable cash customers, but keep them.

¶ The "S. H." Green Stamp collector who does business with you one day and receives the quota of "S. H." Stamps to which he is entitled with his purchases, is a satisfied customer and will come back to-morrow.

The Cold Storage Food Law Decision.

A Pennsylvania Court has just upheld a contention which I have many times made in and out of this paper regarding cold storage food laws, viz., that the provision which makes a food product unsalable merely because it has been stored a certain period, regardless of its condition, is illegal and unconstitutional. The court referred to has just decided that this is true, in a case in which the Dairy and Food Department tried to prevent the sale of 78 tubs of perfectly good creamery butter, merely because they had been in storage more than nine months. The court found this provision bad for so many reasons that I am hopeful that the Appeal Court will do the same, although you can't tell. The Appeal Court will do everything it can to uphold an act of this sort.

Because if the time limit is struck down, the present act is dead. The time limit is the whole thing. I am hopeful that it will be struck down, for a law that confiscates a perfectly good food product merely because it has been stored in a certain place for a certain time, is childish.

Note my prediction that eventually cold storage laws will prescribe no time limit, but will contain two main provisions: First, that all food stored for more than thirty days shall be labeled cold storage food; and second, that without regard to how long it has been in storage, it shall be sold if it is fit to be.

Cassidy's Attack on Foust.

Harry P. Cassidy, who since his removal as Philadelphia agent of the Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Department, has drifted about from newspaper to newspaper as a so-called food "expert" or investigator, is now an advertising solicitor for the Philadelphia "Press," doing a sort of promotion work along food lines. Once in a while he breaks into the "Press's" reading columns with some crude stuff over his own signature. His most recent literary effort was an attack on Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust for "allowing" the sale of rotten eggs in Philadelphia. Cassidy writes a long, foolish attack on Mr. Foust, which to those who remember the expose against Cassidy himself five years ago, is the acme of absurdity. Without doubt some rotten eggs are being sold in Philadelphia to-day. There will always be some sold. But the amount which is being sold to-day is not to be compared with the amount that was sold while the self-righteous Cassidy was in charge of the Philadelphia district. Most of it was sold by his friend Craven, with whom Cassidy was on the best of terms. When Cassidy was exposed and fired, Craven went out of the rotten egg business, and from then on the business has been one of dribbles.

It will never be wholly stamped out until some miracle implants the seeds of decency in the hearts of the cheap and filthy foreigners who traffic in rotten eggs for the money in them, and would traffic in dead men's eyes, if they could make money by it.

Advertising in Your Local Paper Keeps Out the Mail Order House.

There is now another chance to learn something from an enemy. Herman Rosenfield, advertising manager of Sears, Roebuck & Co., a mail-order house which is cordially hated by every retailer in the country, says his company, in seeking good soil for increasing its business, always seeks out the towns where the local merchants don't advertise. This is what he said in a speech at the recent convention of the American Advertising Club:—

> We have a bureau whose duty it is to read each week the country newspapers from all over the country. There is not a paper of any consequence in our trade territory we do not get. The bureau looks over these papers and when we find a town where the merchants do not advertise in local papers we immediately flood that territory with our literature. It always brings results far in excess of the same effort put forth in territory where the local merchants use their local papers.

Surely, this is showing how t trick is done, isn't it? They hu up places where the local retaile don't advertise, and find they c get in there a great deal easier th anywhere else? Why? Obvious because the local retailers a weaker there than anywhere else.

Most merchants who don't adv tise in their local papers say doesn't pay them to. Very often doesn't, and the reason is one two: 1, either the advertising poor, or 2, the paper is poor. the advertising is poor, the adv tising and not the paper, shou carry the blame for lack of resu If the paper is poor it is often cause it is half starved for lack advertising. Give it advertisi and it will improve, always p vided the man at the head of is good for anything. If he is good for anything then the lo merchants ought to get togeth and start a decent paper of th own. This mail-order house is self authority for the statement t the right kind of advertising in right kind of a local paper is a w to keep the mail-order hou out.

Selling Talks With Clerks

BY A MAN WHO HAS BEEN ONE

Conducted by W. E. SWEENEY, Manager for L. Lehman & Co.'s Department Food Store, Dover, N. J.

"Right in the Corner Where You Are"—Is where your real work lies. The great trouble with many clerks today is having their eyes on the other fellow's corner. Ignoring or not knowing that there are just as many kinks in his own corner as there are in his. "Far off fields are green" and often far off scenes are fairer to the eye than those immediately surrounding us. It's the same with life.

When your work is completed in your corner you will be moved to the next one. But your job must be finished without shirking. It must be done manfully and well and it must have honesty and true faithfulness as a basis.

"Wholesome discontent" is good but not at the expense of duty well done. Your aspirations to be Manager is excellent, but remember that the most menial work that legitimately comes to you at present must be performed cheerfully and thoroughly. That is one of the hard things for an ambitious clerk to get through his head. He wants to be the whole cheese at one jump, where, as every phase of nature and every healthy experience of life shows the absolute necessity of "watchful waiting" and natural growth.

Your corner needs you or you wouldn't be there and it is positively up to you to make the very most of it. If you neglect to do this don't expect your dreams to come true. Don't expect your rosy aspirations to develop. The law doesn't work that way and we are as surely under the law as we are under the beneficent effects of the sun rays.

Summer Windows.—These are tough days for window displays, especially where windows are not glassed in. Still, quick changes with little stock can be made with good effect. One recently cleaned up 15 cases No. 3 pork and beans at 15 cents a can. There were three prominent cards. One read: "This Big Can Pork and Beans in mato Sauce, 15 cents"; one "Enough one can to serve six people"; one healthy summer dish at a low sum price." Another was No. 1 crab m with white netting thrown over it. card read: "A Dainty Hot Day Dish a Crab Meat Salad, 57 cents."

Some time since we wrote about qu ifying goods on signs rather than a c price.

We give you the above as an ill tration. The thing is to suggest so thing. Say something that appe The public have to be told and told told—and then some more.

Saying pork and beans isn't enou It's enough on one card. But wh the matter with three cards? Sayi "New Crab Meat at 57 cents" is n essary, but you begin to sell the s when you tickle the palate with the sa suggestion. And so it goes.

pirited Retail Convention at Bradford, Pa.

ock Haven Gets Presidency, Howes Re-elected Secretary. Delegates Raise Money to Pay Off Old Obligations. Johnstown Gets First Prize for Increased Sale of Merchandise Under Pennsylvania Plan and Philadelphia First Prize for Increasing Membership.

ecial Correspondence of "Modern Merchant and Grocery World."

Bradford, Pa., Aug. 25, 1916.

One of the best attended and most ithusiastic conventions of the Re- il Merchants' Association of Penn- lvania was held at Bradford, Pa., ugust 21st to 24th. Great inter- t was manifested in all the pro- edings and at times the discus- ons on various matters reached ver heat. The programme as rinted in a recent issue of the Modern Merchant and Grocery Vorld" was closely followed, with ie exception that the address of Ir. Fred. Mason was omitted by eason of Mr. Mason's illness. W. . Crockett, of Cleveland, Ohio, bly filled the place left vacant by n address on the subject, "The Re- ail Trade and its Abuses." One of ie hits of the convention was the paper read by O. H. Stout, of Frankford, on "Taking the Guess Out of Business." Delegations were present from Olean, Utica, Syracuse, Rochester and Lockport, N. Y. A. M. Graves, of the Tri-State Wholesale Grocers' Association, was an official visitor and made an admirable talk, urging closer co-operation of all branches of business. A subject that caused much debate was the proposed change in the rates of premium to be charged by the Retailers' Fire Insurance Co. A recommendation was agreed to that the board issue two forms of policy, one on the all cash plan and the other on the premium note plan.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Harry W. Shaffer, Lock Haven; vice-presidents, Charles P. Smith, Washington; Ely Bion, Sunbury; J. A. Edgar, Frankford, and Theodore Landsberg, Erie; secretary A. M. Howes, Erie; treasurer, W. H. Nelson, Chester. The following were elected to membership on the Executive Committee: J. D. O'Neill, McKeesport; D. E. Durbin, Pittsburgh, and Wilmer Crow, Harrisburg. Mt. Carmel was selected as the next convention city. Awards in the Pennsylvania Plan were made as follows:—

On sale of merchandise, Johnstown, $300; Titusville, $200; Scranton Business Men, $100; Vandergrift, $100; Scranton Retail Merchants, $100. Awards of $50 were made to each of the following associations: Lock Haven, St. Clair, Lebanon, Pottsville, Tarentum, Mt. Carmel, Bradford, Milton, Pittsburgh Grocers, Erie Grocers, Frankford Grocers, Armstrong County Business Men, Minersville, Philadelphia Grocers. A total in this class of $1,500. Awards for increase of membership were made as follows: Philadelphia Grocers, first award, $100; increase, 648 members; Frankford Grocers $50; increase, 61 members; Pittsburgh Grocers, $25; increase, 56 members; Irwin, $25, increase, 45 members.

A pleasant feature of the convention was the successful effort of Mr. Smedley in raising over $1,300 in about twenty minutes, this sum to be used in paying off all obligations of the State Association and enabling it to commence the year with a clean sheet.

Bradford entertained the convention royally and all the visitors expressed their pleasure upon the cordial reception.

The coming association year promises to be one of great achievement. The spirit of the convention was "co-operation and aggressive work." W. S.

The Week's Dry Goods Review.

Marshall Field & Co., in their weekly review of the dry goods trade, say:—

Current wholesale distribution of dry goods continues to run well ahead of the corresponding period of a year ago.

The volume of road sales for immediate, fall and spring deliveries has been considerably in exeess of the same week in 1915.

Customers have attended the market in much larger numbers than during the same period last year.

Collections for the week were exeeptionally good.

The market on domestie eotton goods is strong.

Merely bursting into national advertising mediums doesn't alone make a product worthy to be featured by a retailer.

And one call doesn't make a business.

There's a distinct class of old-established nationally advertised products, household words, tried and proven, which, perhaps with rare exceptions, pay the retailer well to handle, considering always the work he does. He is exceedingly short-sighted if he puts any obstacle in the way of selling these.

The Grocery Markets

Tea.

The tea market shows no change for the week. Business is quiet, as it will be during the balance of the month. Holders are still willing to make concessions for the sake of making a good month's business. There is no weak undertone in the market, however. As soon as the demand improves the market will get steady.

Coffee.

There has been no change in the price of Rio and Santos coffee during the week. The demand has shown some improvement; in fact, quite a considerable improvement, but particularly in coffee to come forward from Brazil. Brazil coffees are firm. Mild coffees show no change and light demand. Java and Mocha dull at ruling quotations.

Sugar.

The sugar market has shown considerable demoralization during the week owing to the pressure of some holders of raws to sell, sales having been made as low as 5.50. The season for new beet granulated is coming on and the prospect is for a large production. Granulated sugar ranges from 7 to 7¼ cents, with some seconds hands holders willing to sell at 6.90. The consumptive demand for granulated sugar is poor.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose has advanced another 10 points during the week, owing to the firm corn market. Compound syrup is seasonably dull at ruling quotations. If there is any demand the price of compound syrup will undoubtedly advance, as glucose has had several advances recently. Sugar, syrup and molasses are dull and unchanged.

Fish.

There is some shore mackerel coming forward at very high prices. The catch is small but not an absolute failure. Norway and Irish mackerel remain unchanged and very scarce. Cod, hake and haddock are selling to some extent at the opening high prices. New prices on Alaska salmon have been named during the week on a basis of 90 cents in a large way f. o. b. coast for pink, and $1.50 in a large way f. o. b. coast for red. The price for red is lower than the trade expected. It is expected that all of the future orders which were taken subject to approval of price will be confirmed at the above figures. Domestic sardines, on account of scarcity, have advanced 15 cents a case and a large way quotation is now $2.85. Imported sardines are unchanged.

Canned Goods.

The weather has not been altogether favorable for packing tomatoes and in consequence the situation is steady to firm, without, however, any important change. Corn is steadily growing firmer by reason of short pack. The demand for corn and peas is only fair. Apples show no change; light demand. California canned goods are unchanged and quiet, as are small Eastern staple canned goods.

Dried Fruits.

The entire line of dried fruits unchanged. Prunes are exactly where they were a week ago; demand light. Peaches, apricots, raisins and currants are all unchanged and in dull demand.

Beans and Peas.

Except in California limas there is no change in peas or beans for the week. California limas have taken a slump and can now be bought in a large way 6½ cents a pound. Domestic pea beans are unchanged at $5.50 and marrows are slightly weaker at $5.50 instead of $5.75. Green and Scotch peas are unchanged and dull.

Butter.

The butter market has advanced from ½ to 2 cents per pound during the week, according to grade, this being due to the large export demand as well as the heavy home consumption. The receipts are normal for the season. Prints have made an advance of 2 cents. Storage butter is being withdrawn, owing to the scarcity of fine fresh, and is breaking close to the price of fresh.

Eggs.

The egg market is unchanged but very firm. The withdrawals of eggs from storage are heavy, owing to the large consumptive demand and the poor quality of fresh receipts. The market will probably not show any decline until cooler weather strikes the large producing sections.

Cheese.

The cheese market shows an advance of ¼ to ½ cent, due to the fact that both the export and the home consumption are heavy, although the export demand is not as heavy as it was some time ago. Some of the finest makes of cheese show slight heat defects and the situation is firm on this grade If there is any further change it will probably be a fractional advance, as foreign markets are also very high.

Provisions.

The provision market is firm and unchanged, with the consumptive demand good for the season. If any change occurs it will probably be at an advance. Pure lard shows an advance of ½ ¾ cents per pound, due to the hi prices of hogs. One report from Pitt burgh during the week said that t price of hogs there was the highest record. Compound lard is unchange firm, with a good consumptive dema Barreled pork is 25 to 50 cents a bar higher, with a fair demand and sh supply. Dried beef is firm and u changed and so are canned meats.

Court Holds Time Limit on Cold Storage Foods Void

Allegheny County Common Pleas Court Enjoins Dairy and Food Commissioner From Stopping Sale of Butter Merely Because It Has Been Stored More Than Nine Months.

In the Allegheny Common Pleas Courts on Tuesday last Judge Carpenter decided that Section 16 of the Pennsylvania cold storage food law was unconstitutional. The section in question makes various articles unsalable after they have been in storage for a certain period, regardless of their condition. Among these articles is butter, which cannot be sold in Pennsylvania after being stored nine months. The court holds that this provision is confiscatory and bad.

Edward J. Nolan, a wholesale butter dealer of Pittsburgh, had 78 tubs of creamery butter on which the time limit had expired. The butter, however, was as fit for food as it had ever been. The Dairy and Food Department sought to put tags on it marked "unsalable," and the owner asked the court for an injunction, which was granted. The following is from the court's opinion:—

Section 16 of the cold storage act of 1913 conflicts with the Constitution of Pennsylvania in that it violates the provision of the "declaration of rights."

Section 16 violates the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which reads:—

"No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction equal protection of the law."

Being of the opinion that the plaintiff is without adequate remedy at law and that he is entitled to equitable relief, the injunction prayed for is allowed.

The decision will have a most important effect on the enforcement of the cold storage act—in fact if upheld it will practically emasculate it, and therefore the Department will at once appeal.

It follows that if the time limit on butter is illegal, the time limit on other food products is illegal also.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORT

Rice.

The market for the past week sho a fairly seasonable demand; in fact, t output has been slightly in advance the same period last year, which wo indicate an improvement in gene trade conditions or an apparent nec sity on part of trade principally to just their assortment. The movem of course has been principally in stock, as the receipts of new crop this point have thus far been very lig there being but little call for the n stuff. The demand for blue rose strengthening, especially as new crop this variety will not reach this mar before early October. Japans quiet.

At New Orleans the receipts of rou rice, due to favorable weather, amo to considerably more than they did the same time last season. The qua is improving, the rice now coming being dry and in perfect conditi There is an improving demand for cl rice, which may have a tendency stiffen prices.

In the interior, Southwest Louisia Texas and Arkansas, due to clear skies, harvesting is now progressing isfactorily and several mills are prep ing to start operating in full blast.

D. Talmage's Sons C New York and New Orleans.

Imported Fish Specialties.

There is very little doing in the fish trade, the demand of course be limited by the prevailing hot weat but herrings of all kinds are selling rather satisfactory hand to mouth Imported Oil Sardines.—The t continues quite good. Prices conti as high as ever. In spite of an e mously large catch of Norwegian dines during one week prices have come down one bit, which shows dently that the Norwegian packers in a position to dispose of whatever may pack at remunerative prices Europe to their buyers there, and are not dependent upon America to their sardines at the present time. Of which we have made at slightly be packers' asking prices have all been fused, and no business has resulted. seems that the American trade is g ually getting accustomed to the prev ing higher prices for sardines, beca business in imported sardines is q satisfactory, although of course a g many more would be sold if prices not as high.

Strohmeyer & Arpe C New York.

Foreign Grocery Specialties.

There has been quite a stir in the oil market on account of cables rece from Italy reporting a strongly adv ing market; in fact, we have had vances of fully 10 per cent. on the fi grade of edible Italian olive oil, but market here is quite stationary; altho very strong, prices have not been vanced here a bit. Still, this is not prising, because we are in the habit never to advance our prices in acc ance with the primary markets. We l forced by competition to wait before vancing prices until we are simply rced to do it on account of the higher st, so as not to lose money instead of aking a profit on our goods.

Owing to the rather unsettled and dening garlic market, shipments from aly have been only small. Stocks here e rather unimportant of Italian garlic d prices are rather firm, although not gher, and we may look for a steady arket in the near future.

Spanish Pimentos (Red Peppers).—re very strong. Stocks here are very iimportant, but there are still some ocks remaining in a few weak hands, id they are offering the goods to the ade at prices way below to-day's mart. Of course, it may be that they are tuated by the fact that probably the ods are not of as fine quality as they ight to be, and they want to get clear the goods, but real fine Spanish red ppers are rather scarce and high in ice.

Wheat and Flour.

In a milling experience of twenty-x years we have never been confronted th a wheat situation like that of toy.

With the Rocky Mountains as a diding line, wheat moves from the farms the seaboard en route to the hungry illions of Europe. East of this diding line the movement is to the Gulf d Atlantic seaboard, with the tributry States adding their surplus to the olden stream.

This year States that have formerly d a surplus beyond home needs must nport wheat for food and seed, and cause of this many cross-currents ll be found instead of the orderly ovement of normal years.

We have been so much concerned of e by the calamity that has befallen the ring wheat crops of our own and the nadian Northwest that it has disacted our attention from the unusual uation in the Central States.

Indiana and Illinois this year raised st one-third of last year's crop; Misuri, Texas and Ohio only one-half. iese States together with Oklahoma d Michigan harvested 119 million shels compared with 253 million last ar. Millers in these States will be mpelled to buy Kansas and other hard nter wheats to supplement their scant ops of soft winter. And now that the crop in the Northwest is a partial failure, the millers there also will be forced to look to Kansas to help them out.

The question is, how long will Kansas be able to supply the demand made upon her? Her crop this year is but 89 million compared with 106 million last year, and 176 million two years ago. The crop in the far Northwestern States is only two-thirds of last year's, for the Washington, Oregon, Colorado, Montana and California crops are 31 million short of last year, viz., 93 million harvested compared with 124 million a year ago.

It is quite likely that the seriousness of the situation will not become acute until after the turn of the year. At present there are abundant supplies in the show windows at home and abroad. There is in sight 250 million bushels against only 93 million last year, but this quantity is only sufficient for one month's consumption. When these supplies commence melting away, the whole world will awaken to the difficulty of replenishing them.

As we have repeatedly said in these letters, the United States will have more wheat than is necessary for domestic needs, and undoubtedly more than 100 million, and perhaps 150 million, can be spared for export; but very high prices will be necessary to attract it from the farms, and, if the larger quantity is exported, it would leave us with a dangerously small "carry over" to the new crop.

Early in 1915 the export demand was such as to bring about very high prices, Chicago May reaching $1.67 in February, and as a result of these high prices the exports for the crop year reached the huge total of 333 million bushels, and our reserves on July 1, 1915, were drawn to the irreducible minimum of 37 million bushels; namely 29 million in farmers' hands and 8 million in visible supply. In other words, our reserves were less than 22 pounds per capita, or barely more than three weeks' supply. It was only because of the excellent crop prospects at that time that farmers swept their bins; and it was a wise move for we harvested over a billion bushels.

The volume of our exports will depend entirely upon the outlook next spring. If our winter wheat crop promises well and the price is attractive, the farmer will be disposed to sweep his bins as he did in 1915, and we predict that it will be only because of high prices and brilliant crop prospects being concurrent that so much as 150 million bushels of wheat can be exported during the year.

There must be considerable uneasiness abroad about the outlook for the coming year. The importing nations require over 600 million bushels for the twelve months ending August 1, 1917, and where are they to obtain it? Much will depend upon the crop in Argentina which will be harvested next December and the India crop which comes next April.

We must recognize the fact that while Europe needs a huge quantity of wheat during the next eleven months her present abundant supplies enable her to choose her own time to purchase and her demands upon North America will depend altogether upon how much she can obtain elsewhere. Our trend of prices here will depend largely upon whether this demand is steady or intermittent. There must be either a milling or an export demand to maintain prices at any level and at present the milling demand is very small because domestic buyers are holding off awaiting a reaction in prices.

European markets have not kept pace with our advance and appear indifferent, and if this attitude continues much longer our market will decline. But when the tide of orders for export commences to rise, which it surely will sooner or later, with millers and exporters competing for the comparatively small surplus we will have for export we may expect some very high prices.

The public must be prepared to pay more for bread for an advance is inevitable even with no further advance in flour. We are to have an era of high prices for wheat. It is as irresistible as the rising tide of the oceans.

Spices.

The market is more active. Trading is no doubt on the increase. At present it is confined mostly to actual needs, but the demand is becoming greater all the time. Spices for pickling and preserving needs are just beginning to move. The season is late. It looks to us like the oce n freight situation is likely to become a serious factor again. We can expect delays in the arrival of goods, due to shortage of bottoms.

Pepper.—The market is firmer here and sharply higher in the Orient. There is going to be a big demand for pepper this fall and indications really point to higher prices.

Red Peppers.—The spot supply is small. The demand here is growing. It is reported there is very little stock on the way to America.

Cloves.—Spot goods is now selling at a price less than that quoted for futures. The crop is short and prices are likely to go higher.

Pimento (Allspice).—Unsettled and somewhat higher. The demand is on the increase. The crop will no doubt be short.

Mace.—In fair demand, which is likely to increase. Prices firm but unchanged.

Nutmegs.—Low in price. Present prices we consider safe. Demand fair.

Gingers.—All grades are quiet and unchanged.

Green Ginger Root.—Is in active demand at firm to steady prices.

Tapiocas.—Steady and without any special feature to report.

Seeds, Herbs Etc.—Articles in the list are selling fairly well. Spot stocks of seeds are not large and any unsual demand will have a tendency to raise values. Caraway has been selling unusually well this week. Some large trading has been reported. Prices are likely to be affected thereby.

AMONG THE TRADE.

The paper houses have been compelled to advance the price of such paper products as toilet paper, paper towels, etc. Raw material has doubled in price and is going up all the time. The Scott Paper Co., one of the principal factors, says "we are approaching an acute crisis in the paper business." It is no longer practicable for the retailer to sell toilet paper for 5 and 10 cents. Average paper must be sold four rolls for 25 cents and high grade sells up to two rolls for 25 cents. Paper bags, cartons and all paper products of this sort are steadily advancing.

If you have something a little different from what others have—just a little better—you talk about it, your salesmen talk about it, you advertise it, satisfied customers will do the rest. Syrup is one of our specialties.

SYRUPS—Our sales on Syrups this month has surpassed the record; there must be a reason. Our Challenge Table Syrup is unexcelled in quality and always gives satisfaction. Our popular brands: Royal Table, Gilt Edge, Very Best, Starlight, Extra Amber, King "B," White Clover, Crescent, etc. We also have Fancy Ingleside N. O. Molasses in barrels and Cruiser Baking Molasses. A full line of Canned Syrups and Molasses.

FLUFFY WHITE WASHING TABLETS—Something new, will not harm the daintiest fabric, saves worry, labor, time and money. Six washes for 10c.; retails at 10c. a package. Single dozen 85c., three dozen in a box, at $2.40 per box. Try a box.

RED BEANS—Here is something to take the place of Red Kidney Beans, similar in style and flavor and almost impossible to tell the difference. Ladoga brand, No. 2 cans, 2 dozen in a case, per dozen, 90c.

CANNED CORN—We have a special lot of double cut Evergreen Corn, Watervale brand, immediate shipment, price 80c. a dozen. There is something doing in Corn. The pack will fall below early estimates, and the indications favor higher prices.

Court Says Packers Must Not Weigh Casing in With Meat and Must Put Weight on Label. Rumored Packing Combine Arouses Interest. Market Summary.

Special Correspondence of "Modern Merchant and Grocery World."

New York, August 25, 1916.

The long expected decision by the New York Courts, as to whether a meat packer can legally weigh in his casing and charge for it at the pound rate for ham and bacon, has been handed down during the week. The case was in City Judge Beall's court at Yonkers and the decision was that the packer had no such right. Counsel for the packers say that if the decision is upheld it will cost their elients $1,000,000 a year. The case was against Swift & Co. and the charge was that it compelled buyers of their meats to pay for containers at the pound price of the meat. A fine of $100 was imposed on Swift & Co., and Armour & Co. were similarly fined. The prosecution was brought by John D. Eylers, Sealer of Weights and Measures of Yonkers. He said that "Swift Premium" ham weighing 11 pounds, 6 ounces, had been packed in a container weighing 6 ounces and that the packer had charged the buyer for 11 pounds and 12 ounces of meat. The "Premium" hams sell at an average of 22 cents a pound, which means that he overcharge was 8 cents. The prosecution was indirectly for compelling the packers to stamp the net weight of hams upon the containers. The case will be appealed.

Following the decision, the City Bureau of Weights and Measures announced that it had been for eighteen months gathering testimony against not only packers but retailers and that it had twelve hundred cases to bring. The Bureau said that it would now bring all these cases. The action will be a criminal action for delivering less meat than is sold, and the Commissioner states that he will press for prison sentence.

The trade have been much interested by the receipt of information from the coast during the week that the J. K. Armsby Co., the Central California Canneries, Griffith & Skelley, the Alaska Packers Association and the California Fruit Canners Association were about to combine into a mammoth corporation to pack most California food products.

Summarized Market Conditions.

Tea in fair condition; light demand.—Coffee shows firmer tone, though without material change for the week. The cause is firmer feeling in Brazils.—Sugar easy. Raws have sold down to 5½ cents, and granulated, while nominally 7 eents, was said to be purchasable at 6.90. The tone is undoubtedly easier. —Salmon firm on the opening prices, although there is some talk of an advance. Tuna firm. Domestic sardines advanced on account of scarcity.—All canned vegetables are unchanged. Tomatoes somewhat firmer. Peas and corn still firm on rather high basis. Canned fruits steady to firm and quiet. Prunes said to be somewhat firme on the coast, but neglected in th East. Raisins also firm.—Wheat still soaring but the week close with a slight deeline; very stron undertone.—Flour very hig around $9 a barrel. The conditio of flour will be governed by th wheat market.

P. J. Larson's Store News

Vol. VI. BENSON, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, JUNE 2, 1916. No. 22

The Empire Builder: This space can only pay a faint tribute to the subject, and the writers words only in a small measure compared with what is deserved—express the reverent feelings of a mourning Great Northwest and we might say, Nation. But we must chronicle in the pages of our Store News that on May 29, 1916, marks the passing away of one of the most active lives and most remarkable persons that ever lived on the American continent, J. J. Hill, the Empire Builder. A busy man, a plain man, a common man, a man with common sense, a man with much brains and who used them; a man with courage and keen foresight. An example of thrift. A master of finance. A captain of captains of industry. He left more marks on the sands of time of good and lasting nature than many of the emperors of nations. The Northwest owes him a large respect and his memory should and will have a place in history in the highest of rank.

Decoration Day was properly observed and justly so. The memorial exercises touch the feelings that also, need to be exercised once in a while, and it is an aid to keep alive the patriotic feelings of the nation, and fitting in honor of the defenders of the Union. We are pleased to see the proper attention given to this national holiday.

Weather for several days has been good and favorable for progress of work and the growing crops. Small grains are well in and doing nicely, while corn planting is a little behind time in some localities. Rain is not welcome at this time if of volume. Moisture is too abundant on low lands. Favorable weather from now on, however, will make things come nicely.

Grape Smash is a nice non-intoxicating summer beverage, which tastes fine and is healthful and can be used in hot weather in place of coffee or tea or lemonade, for table use it is a thirst quenching drink. It is economical to use. We have it in 10 and 25c bottles.

Grape Juice is a well-known article, and very extensively used. We only wanted you to know that we have it in stock. 25c the bottle (Welches.)

June 7th Is Circus Day. Gollmar Brothers will bring their elephants here on that day. There are yet some who have never seen a circus, and some who like to see one again. The past record of the show is good.

Rhubarb has been plentiful of late and cheap. It is very healthful at this time of the year and the most tender. Those who wish to preserve any of this should do so now while stock is available and at its best.

Chautauqua will be here on June 24th to 28th. This is commendable entertainment, which we believe all should attend for real pleasure and actual benefit at a limited cost, especially when you buy a season ticket. Those tickets will soon be on sale and secures the cheapest admittance when bought in advance before the Chautauqua gets here. Do not miss the Chautauqua, at Benson on these dates.

Canvassars: Now and then there comes to the community canvassers and demonstrators for some products and take orders from house to house. Then they come to the merchants with the signed orders and if the goods in our idea are reliable goods, we accept the orders in a good faith, thinking that the trade wants the goods and it is up to us to fill the orders. We are always glad to do this when the orders are genuine, but occasionally we get orders with faked signatures and plugged orders and those are unpleasant. One canvasser of late played that game strong and we had a lot of fake orders. Those kind of orders are against our principles of doing business and we look less favorable on such method of soliciting orders.

Strawberries have been in plentiful of late, and reasonable in price. 15c the quart has so far been ruling price, except specials on over ripe or inferrior stock, which we closed out at less. We look for berries to be cheap and plentiful all thru this season.

Wyandotte Washing Powder is a good article at 10c per can.

New Cabbage in stock but very high at present. Quality is fine. Selling at 6c per pound.

Eggs yet 20c retail, 19c in trade and 18c cash, market. Market is weak, however, and we may have a decline most any day.

Butter is weaker and supplies heavier. 25c is about top price. Demand is much slower. But even that price is a good price when grass is abundant and compared with some years ago is large. We keep our table butter on ice and take special care at all times in filling orders.

Old Vegetables: Of these we still have a fair supply of carrots, beets, bagas, etc. The prices are low.

Potatoes: Demand has been good as long as planting was on. Now, however, both demand and supply has eased up and market is not as firm as it was a few days ago, on larger markets. However, we look for price to remain about where it is locally. About 50c is buying price and retail is from 50 to 65c per bu. That is a fair price for both buyer and seller.

Seed Buckwheat: We had considerable inquiry for this and finally succeeded in finding some nice homegrown seed and now have some on hand. We sell this at $1.40 per bu. which makes cheap seed considering that a half a bushel is all that is required for an acre. And it is a useful crop. It can be planted late.

Seed Corn: We have on hand a fair supply of good seed corn. Both for checking and for fodder. $2 to $5 per bu. One special lot at $6.

Soft Sole Shoes: Just received a new shipment of the neatest numbers in blacks, white and colors, of the little soft sole shoes. Also a number of other infants shoes. Also some little patent leather slippers for small children.

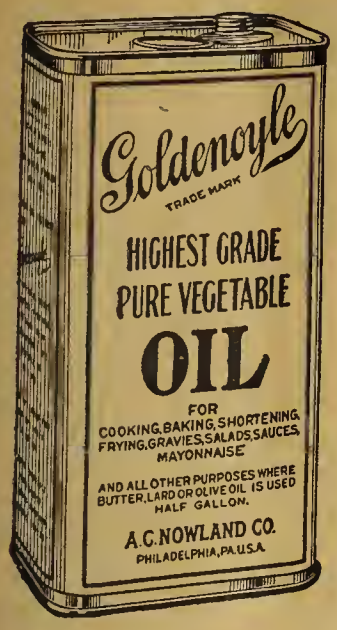
Wash Ties: We have a nice lot of wash ties, excellent values at 25c.

Wash Goods: We have a large selection of these at splendid values.

Hats: Still a large selection of the best values on the market. All fast color goods. No advance in prices. 50c to $3 each.

Speaking of advertising, here is a somewhat unique plan which has been used for six years by P. J. Larson, a retailer of Benson, Minn. He takes a space in the regular issues of his local paper and runs his own little paper in it. Mr. Larsen, in writing this paper about it, says: "We issue no regular paper but have for the period indicated by the volume number have run an ad. in the style shown by inclosed copy every week, changed each week. This gives you an idea of the substance in each paper. We have found it advisable to continue as we believe it has been of benefit to us."

Barley Up Like Everythin Else.



Present Quotation $3.85 Per O Hundred Against $2.50 a Ye Ago. Bushel Barley Also Mu Above Normal. All Barley Su stitutes Also High, So Public H Nothing Cheap to Turn To.

The barley situation is this ye more serious than for many yea baek, owing primarily to a cr shortage of 45,000,000 bushels, a we are advised that most of this in the territory that usually su plies the better grade. As th has been very little barley raised the other side in the countries t usually produced it, because of t disturbed conditions there, forei buyers will be looking to this cou try to supply their needs during t entire erop year, and their rep sentatives are busy competing w our local buyers and millers at t time for all the barley there is sight. Those mentioned use o the best grade of barley, which l advanced prices so that on l Tuesday barley grain sold in C cago at $1.15 per bushel of pounds, whereas the price on corresponding day of last year 65 cents per bushel for the sa grade.

Naturally, the price of Pearl b ley must reflect this higher gr value, so that No. 3 barley is day quoted at $3.85 per 100 pou as compared with $2.50 per h dred pounds a year ago. S higher prices naturally lead one think that the consumption of b ley will be curtailed, but as all b ley substitutes are higher than b ley, there may be just as much b ley used as ever.

The main barley substitutes which we speak are the follow and the prices quoted those o few days ago:—

Michigan pea beans,			$8 to $8.50 per
Scotch peas	5.80	to	5.90 per
Head rice	4.75	to	5.00 per
Fancy Rice	5.50	to	5.75 per Lentils (out of the market)
Farina	4.00	to	4.25 per

We Appeal to the Grocer— We Do Not Try to Force Him

When we started to put Goldenoyle on the market, we could have gone to the consumer alone and tried to persuade her to force you to handle it.

We don't believe in that. We advertised to you before we advertised to anybody else, because we had confidence, and still have, that you can judge good merchandise on its merits, and will meet a manufacturer half way on a worthy proposition.

Goldenoyle is a good proposition from any standpoint. It is the most highly refined vegetable salad oil on the market—we say that from twenty-five years' experience as oil refiners. You remember what Prof. Allyn, the Westfield chemist, said about it.

Packed 4 doz., 7-oz. bottles; 2 doz. small cans, 21¾ oz. each; and 1 doz. ½-gal. cans. On 3-case order we prepay the freight. Beautiful recipe book for retailers' customers.

Don't You Wish We All Had This Much Sense?

Say, I've just seen the most sensiblest man that ever was. He has more plumb sense in his sneeze than I have in my whole carcass. I didn't know anybody had as much sense as that man has—you see so much of the other thing.

I'll tell you.

He's got a good big retail store on the best corner of an Ohio town that I make about every three months. It's a good store—I think he has about six clerks in it and they all seem to be busy all the time. He moves a power of goods.

I go in there when I make the town and let him coax me into selling him my justly celebrated goods. Sure, I most always give in. And then after we're through the business I sit and chin with him a spell. He's a nice fellow—I like to talk to him, and as I only see him four times a year we have lots to chew on.

He treats me with respect, too, that's more than everybody does. I said that only last week to a customer that had said an awful rude thing to me, and he said it was because the other man only saw me every three months. Gee whiz, but if it hadn't been Monday I believe I'd have torn him apart.

Well, to get back, I and the Ohio man were talking about the cost of help.

"It costs me at least $15 a week more because I can't sell goods myself," he said. "If I could only go behind the counter myself and sell, I could cut down a good deal."

"Well, why can't you?" I said.

"I'm no good," he said, "people seem to like me well enough except when I try to sell goods to them, and then I fall down. I don't know what it is—I guess I rush the thing too much—but I've seen a good many times that customers don't like me to wait on them. So I took a tumble and don't try any more. But it costs something to fill my place."

Now that's why I say he's the most sensiblest man that ever was. How many fellows do you run across with gumption enough to see that, if it's true? They might see it, but it would make 'em sore, and they'd go ahead all the same. And maybe lose business by it. It takes a pretty big man to see it, and then swallow it and act on it. A great big man, believe me!

I've often thought that every fellow ought to know whether he can sell goods or not, but the fact is that some don't. They can't see it. And they go on trying to, and falling down except in the most picayune way—seems to me somebody ought to go tell 'em—"Old man, you're an elegant fellow, but you can't sell goods. You don't go at it right, or you talk too hard, or you do this or you do that. Now take my advice and try something else."

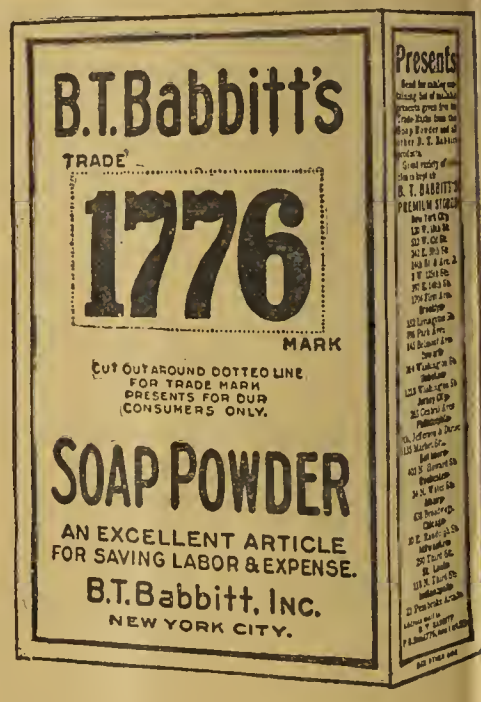
You could find people to tell that to on the road for wholesale houses, selling, or trying to sell other people's goods, and you could find people to tell it to behind the counter in retail stores, trying to sell their own goods. The fact about all of 'em is that they can't sell goods any more than a turkey can sing tenor. They don't know the first thing of how to go about it. When somebody asks for a pound of something they can wrap it up, but that ain't selling goods. A hand organ monkey could do that in three lessons.

Here's what I mean by selling goods. A customer comes in for one thing. Selling her that and then something on top of it that she had no idea of buying when she came in—that's selling goods.

Something else. The other day I was standing in a customer's store when a little peach came in.

"I'm going to have a lot of girls at the house to-night and I want to get something different from the old cakes and things. Everybody's had so much of them they're sick of them. What have you got that's new?"

Oh, what a lovely cinch that was for somebody that could sell goods! Eh? Gee! But I could have broke right down and bellered at the way it was handled. It was like slapping a pretty woman's mouth when she puts it up to kiss you.



To grab up a chance like that, and squeeze it dry—that's selling goods.

I'll tell you a funny thing I heard a fellow's wife say to herself r long ago, though she said it o loud and I got it. He had a bi ger store than the Ohio man's, a used so many clerks that he did need to wait on anybody himself all. But he thought he could han the carriage and auto trade bet than anybody else. He had qu a lot of it—there's a bunch of t kind of people on the outskirts his town and as he has the b store he gets most of it.

Now I know this man well, a I'll say to you right in your that he can't handle the carri and auto trade better than anyb else. He can't handle it as well the poorest clerk in his place. H got a little woman in there t could sell goods to that trade around him, if he'd only let her to it. But no, he had a hunch could do it, and when any of came in, he'd drop whatever he doing, go out and make a low b and start in not to sell goods.

One day I was in his store he left me do this. His wife h pened to be standing right there when she saw what he was do she said, really to herself, bu got it:—

B. T. BABBITT, Inc.
NEW YORK CITY

'Oh I do wish he wouldn't do it!"

Now she may have meant she shed he wouldn't be so impolite to leave me, but she didn't. She s on to something he couldn't himself. Wonder why she in't tell him. None of my busi-ss—I suppose she knew him bet- than I did and knew he wouldn't e it right. Maybe some day 'll get real drunk and tell him. forgive any woman for getting nk to tell me something that would help my business like I believe that would help his. She could even get sick at her stomach and I'd forgive her. That's right.

Here's the way I look at this selling game. The fellow who tries to sell goods when he can't do it, sells less than can be sold, and keeps somebody from selling that could sell more. Personally, if you ask me, I'll bet that Ohio man makes his $15 and more, just by not selling—letting somebody else do it who can do it better.

ational Presidents Differ as to Chain Store's Menace of Regular Retailer hitmarsh, of National Jobbers, Doesn't Think Chain Store Constitutes a Menace to Retailer While Schaefer, of National Retailers, Thinks Chain Store May Mean Extermination.

A very interesting difference of nion exists between Theodore F. hitmarsh, president of the Na-nal Wholesale Grocers' Associa-n, and John H. Schaefer, presi-nt of the National Retail Grocers' sociation, over the extent to ich the chain store should be aded by the ordinary retailer. esident Whitmarsh does not con-er the chain store much of a nace to the average retailer, ile President Schaefer thinks the in store may exterminate the rage retailer.

Here is President Whitmarsh's tement:—

Chief among the problems that eset the small, independent mer-hants of the country just now are 1) chain stores and (2) mail-order ouses. Both owe much of their uccess to methods that I believe onstitute "unfair trade practices," nd in the case of the mail-order ouse, at least, the Government, rough discriminatory postal rates, as aided very materially.

Our objections to the chain store nd the mail-order concern are not ctuated by any motives of envy or alousy, or by any fear that they ill displace us or our customers, ie independent retail grocers of the ountry, in the general scheme of istributing food products, for if it an be shown that the chain stores nd mail-order houses are the most conomical channels of distribution rom the producer to the consumer, eir existence is justified, but if ey are not the most economical hannel and they thrive at the ex-ense of the independent merchants rough unfair trade practices, then e do offer most serious objection the continuance of such trade vils, and believe they should be rought forcefully to the attention f our State and Federal Govern-ents.

The chain store I do not regard a serious menace to the small grocer. Wherever it has shown the way to economical management, to the elimination of waste, or how two blades may be made to grow where there was only one before, we are in its debt, and cheerfully make acknowledgment of our obligation. The chain store, and the large retailer, too, frequently purchase goods on the same basis as the wholesale grocer, and where they have so succeeded in securing goods nationally known they have, not infrequently, offered them to the public at cost or less than cost in order to lure trade to their stores, to sell them, not the particular articles featured, but such articles with such others that carry a profit that will more than compensate them for the loss sustained on the well known brands. Such a selling plan, I believe, constitutes an unfair trade practice; it violates a fundamental principle of good business, that all merchandise shall be sold at a reasonable profit only, and not at a loss or for an exorbitant profit. It constitutes an imposition on the purchaser who, when not buying the special items featured by cost or less than cost prices, is obliged to pay more than a fair margin of profit for such goods as he may purchase. Some may say, let the small man resort to the same merchandising trick of offering a few standard items at cost or less than cost and reimburse himself on other goods as to whose real value the general public is not so well informed.

But who would profit by such a course? The consumer? Certainly not, for if he pays 2 cents less for one item than it is worth, be sure he will pay 2 cents to 4 cents, and perhaps 10 cents more, for another than what constitutes a fair margin of profit. If the practice is wrong in the case of the chain store or the mail-order house its adoption by the smaller merchant would not make it right. Offering one article for less than its cost is never done except for the purpose of deluding the prospective purchaser and selling some other article or articles for more than they are worth. It constitutes an unfair trade practice, subjecting the merchant who does not resort to such tactics to unfair competition, and works to the disadvantage of the public, for the latter in buying such items as are not featured in this way is obliged to pay more than fair prices for them.

Incidentally, I might remark here that I do not believe that the manufacturer who sells direct to the chain stores, the large retailers and the mail-order houses is doing himself justice. It is, of course, his privilege to sell to any one he chooses, and at such prices as he may deem advantageous to himself. We do not attempt to challenge that privilege, nor even attempt to claim the right to challenge it. But I most earnestly believe that a manufacturer is preparing his own downfall when he sells to less than 5 per cent. of the food distributing agents of the country at the same prices he does to the jobbers, who are obliged to resell such products to the other 95 per cent. of the food distributing agents comprising the small merchants of the land.

President Schaefer's statement on the subject is as follows:—

To-day indications point to an extermination of the individual grocer through the large chain and mail-order corporation, to which all eyes are temporarily directed, and the millions of dollars are annually being milked from our rural communities to the highly commercialized centers of population. We find that we are surrounded by great organizations of capital who heretofore have been satisfied to specialize along their own individual lines, but recently not satisfied with the fair and reasonable profit derived from this special line, and crazed by the desire to reap more profits are directing their efforts to usurping the function of business of the small retail dealer. It seems to be the ambition of these business men to build up corporations of such vast magnitude that they are able to carry on and conduct the business of thousands of small retailers without benefiting the people.

No. 378.—Various Cases Brought Under Honest Advertising Laws.

In these articles I have several times discussed different phases of the honest advertising law, which has been enacted now in most of the States. In substance, all these acts are closely similar. They provide that anybody making false representations in any form of advertising as to the real value, or character, or brand, or origin, or quality of merchandise which he offers for sale, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and subject to fine or imprisonment.

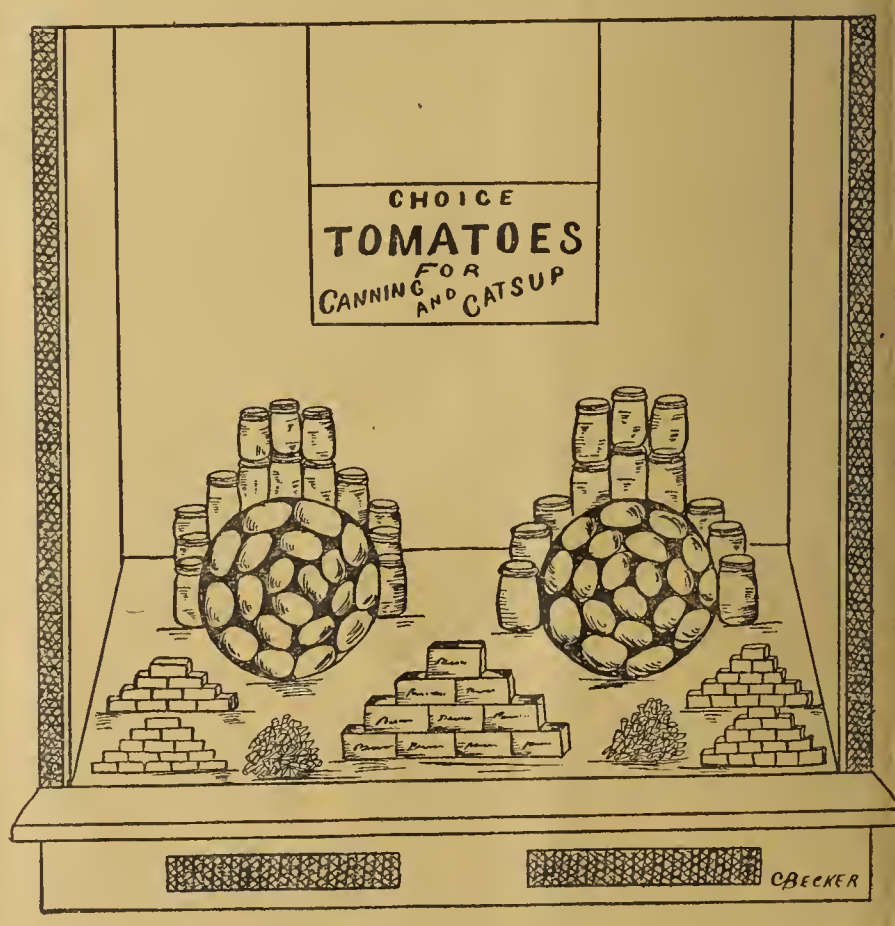
In some States the honest advertising law has been very vigorously enforced, in others it has not been enforced at all. In Pennsylvania, my own State, no effort worth the name has been made to do anything with it. The most effective campaigns which have been waged under advertising laws have been waged by associations of merchants formed for that purpose, or existing associations which added this as a new department.

When the States first began to pass honest advertising laws, I predicted that most prosecutions would be for false statements regarding the real value of a "bargain," or its former value. This prediction has not been entirely born out. There have been a great many such cases, but at least an equal number have been brought for making false statements regarding the origin of goods offered as bargains, usually for offering them as goods bought at bankrupt sales when they were merely part of the regular stock.

I have rather closely followed the enforcement of these most useful laws, and here present brief reports of several prosecutions brought under them in various places. One of the most interesting was brought in Spokane, Wash. Readers hereof will remember that when I predicted that most prosecutions would be for falsely representing a former or real value, where an article was offered for less, I admitted that this would be about the most difficult part of the act to enforce, because the actual value of an article was within certain limits a matter of opinion, and therefore it was going to be difficult to prove a given representation intentionally false. I showed by illustration how this could be done, however, viz., by producing testimony of expert witnesses that the article whose real value was given at such and such a figure, had never sold for that and never in the nature of things would be sold for that. Where this evidence was available the defendant would be held to have known the fact.

The Spokane case was against a piano dealer who advertised "Weiler pianos, regularly $400, on sale at the special price of $195." Prosecution was begun, based on the charge that the representation that Weiler pianos were sold regularly at $400, was false. At the trial it was shown that the Weiler piano cost $75 at the factory and $90 laid down in Spokane, and had never been sold at such a price as $400. The advertiser was found guilty and fined.

In a case brought in Milwaukee, Wis., a local advertiser had for a long time been particularly extravagant in his price comparisons. "Real value," or "former value," or "worth," so much. Here the matter was cured without prosecution. The local merchants' association induced the newspapers to go to the advertiser and tell him that if he didn't moderate his comparisons he would be prosecuted.



In Indianapolis, Ind., a department store advertised "$2 Medallions for 23 cents," and showed a picture of a framed medallion. The customer who went in after one found that the 23-cent price was for the medallion unframed, and the local association got the storekeeper to modify his advertising by stating that the medallions were unframed.

In another case which arose under the Indiana law, also in Indianapolis, an advertiser announced "the biggest sale of clothing in many years." The stock was represented to have been brought from a bankrupt sale. The fact was that only a small part of it had been; t balance was from the store's o stock. This concern was co pelled to change its advertising conform with the facts.

An exactly similar case tra pired in Los Angeles, Cal., wh a dealer advertised a bankrupt s of pianos—"the entire stock" o bankrupt concern—though he bought only eight pianos from bankrupt stock and the balance his own. This man was prosecu plead guilty and was fined.

A New York City retail dealer committed a fraud whic am told has been widespread ing the present season—he ad tised for $2.85, a "genuine Pan hat, value $5, $6 and $7.50." local association took the case and brought prosecution. "genuine Panama" hat was pr to be a cheap imitation from Ja The defendant was found gu and fined. His only defense nswer.—You may not be able to ect all the profits that you will through having to stop selling, but you can undoubtedly collect some damages from the manufacturer. You do not say what sort of a contract you have with him. It may be a contract prepared by him, containing all manner of protective provisions which would let him out of a situation like this. Or it may be simply an order blank containing no such provisions. If it is anything like the latter, you can collect damages from him, and the measure of those damages would be the value of the business which you lost by reason of his default.

Question: * * *, Pa.—With re- d to a recent article in the Legal partment of your paper, on hen the Seller of Merchandise s Down in Filling Contracts," se give me specific information this case: We made a contract eral months ago with a certain nufacturer to pack for us, under label, a chemical preparation ch we handle quite extensively. contract was similar to that ch we make every year and e has never been any trouble n it before. The manufacturer now written us, however, that the time being he will not be to make shipments, for owing he war he is not able to get any e supplies of a certain ingredi- which comes from the other . The preparation depends ely on this particular ingredi- and is not practical without it. herefore means that we must ontinue selling the goods. This involve a considerable loss of it, and the question is, have we way of collecting this loss from manufacturer?

A man who contracts without reservation to supply certain goods will be compelled to supply them, or account in damages for his default. No excuse like "I can't get the raw material," or "I can't afford to buy the raw material at the present price," will serve. The law will force him to make the fulfillment of his contract as certain as he made his contract.

To Make Stock Food from Fish Waste.

Nearly 120,000 tons of valuable stock and poultry food high in protein can be produced annually from the wastes of the salmon and sardine packing industries, and of the menhaden fish oil and fish scrap factories on the coasts. This is exclusive of additional wastes from the tuna packing companies and does not include a large additional tonnage of valuable stock food that could be made from dog fish, now the bane of the market fisherman. This statement is made in United States Department of Agriculture Professional Paper No. 378, Fish Meal: Its Use as a Stock and Poultry Food, which was issued jointly by the Bureaus of Chemistry and Animal Industry after they had completed experiments in making a stock feed from fish waste and had tested it at the Government farm at Beltsville, Md., as a food for dairy cattle, pigs and chickens. According to the conclusions reached by the investigators a vast amount of fish waste, which now is being used wholly for fertilizer and fish oil, can readily be made to yield a better quality of fish oil and a vast tonnage of a highly concentrated feedstuff.

A Nation Wants SUN-MAID Raisins

We are conducting a smashing advertising campaign to make the nation understand and appreciate the great value of raisins as a true fruit-food as well as a delicacy. A page a month in The Saturday Evening Post, colored pages in The Ladies' Home Journal, and local newspaper advertising, is making millions of people think about raisins who never thought of them before. And they are all thinking about just one brand now—the Sun-Maid brand.

Three Varieties—Sun-Maid Raisins come in three varieties: Seeded (seeds extracted), seedless (from seedless grapes), and cluster (on stem, not seeded).

I have from the Warrick Grocery Co., Washington, Pa., a copy of the Washington "Daily Reporter," in which a 6-inch single column advertisement of theirs appears. They have also marked the advertisements of two other local grocers, so that the paper gives a little picture of the local grocery advertising as done in that town. I mean of course the local newspaper advertising. The paper in which these advertisements appear is a well printed, newsy little sheet, evidently with standing and influence in its field. My heart warms to a local newspaper that is conducted with energy, enterprise and pride. It is a credit to any community, a benefit to everybody and a fine advertising medium. But the slack and careless sheets that come in here sometimes are abominations in the sight of Lord and man. They have no excuse for existing and benefit nobody.

The only one of these which I think calculated to get any traceable results is the Warrick advertisement. I suppose that delicacy led them to eliminate toilet paper from the heading, but the advertisement would have been improved with a heading like this: "Summer Toilet Paper Sale—Buy a Year's Supply." Even with the original heading, however, I should expect this advertisement to sell some toilet paper.

The Paul advertisement I believe to be almost innocuous. I should not expect it to get any business or to have any effect whatever. It makes no suggestion and arouses no desire to buy anything at this particular store or anywhere else, for that matter. Of course everybody

Grocers of One Town Join in System to Get Back Tea and Coffee Business from Peddlers

Go Straight to Consumers, Through Local Papers, With Arguments That Regular Merchant Can Undersell Peddler. Sample Argument Which, However, is Not as Strong as it Might Be.

The coffee peddler is beginning attract attention from the trade over the country, for it is now cognized that he is the main fac- r in the decline in the regular tailer's tea and coffee business in e last ten years. The retail gro- rs of Terrell, Texas, have mapped t a systematic fight to get their ade back from the peddlers, and e going straight to consumers th their arguments. We repro- ce below a part of an argument inted in the local Terrell paper om the pen of one of the local ocers:—

In discussing this subject I will make the statement in the beginning that most any reputable retail merchant can and does sell coffees and teas cheaper than any peddler or mail-order house that ever asked for your patronage. If the merchant depended upon these lines alone he could not remain in business. Why? Because there isn't enough profit when good goods are given. By making a little profit on each of hundreds of other lines the merchant is enabled to handle each on a smaller margin than otherwise.

It is all bunco about the big foreign houses being able to sell goods so much cheaper than the retail merchants. In their case there are as many middlemen, twice as much red tape and accounting expense charged against goods as in the case of a given item coming from the retailer. Practically all of the great manufacturing institutions of America, firms which are known nationally and internationally and whose resources are unlimited; yet I will say practically all of them, 95 or 99 per cent. of them, have figured it that the cheapest and most economical method of reaching the American home is through the jobber and retailer.

These big concerns, many of them as solid financially as our Government itself, could and would put out hundreds and thousands of wagons and solicitors of their own to get your business, but they know that it would cost them as much or more than it costs the merchant; in other words, they know that the merchant is earning his money that he makes off their goods, otherwise they would replace him mighty quick. Being as they are as big as the Government itself, they have studied these problems, and they would not permit any stumbling blocks or economical misfits to remain in the path their goods follow on their way to the consumer.

There are thousands of these manufacturers in our country, yet one wholesaler handles all their lines, thus doing it for less than if each maker had to maintain his own agent on the ground. One jobber in the city of Terrell handles practically all these lines. Suppose each big manufacturer had to have his own salesman here. What do you suppose the overhead expense would be? As it is, under the retail-jobber plan, nearly all these car lots or train lots through central goods are ordered by wire or letter in broke s. and thousands of dollars in freights and selling expenses are saved. No concern which ships small lots of goods through irregular channels and sends men around to your door to sell small items can ever make cheap rates. His salesmen and overhead expenses cost more than the goods themselves.

If you think the retailer-jobber system of distribution is cumbersome or expensive, let me give you an ilustration. Do you know that in many cases you could not afford to pay the freight charges from point of origin if the goods themselves were to be given to you? As an illustration, if a friend in California were to give you a sack of potatoes your transportation costs would then be more than it would cost you to buy at any store.

On last Christmas our bookkeeper, who has an uncle living in Winterhaven, Fla., received from his uncle a box of oranges gratis, but the express charges were $5.80, and at the very time we were selling oranges at $3.25 and $3.50 per box. In the case of the oranges we were selling, the grower had received his part, the railroad its part, and the jobber and retailer each a small profit. You could not afford to pay the transportation costs on a case of canned goods from Baltimore to Terrell if the packer up there gave it to you. Do you think our system is bad?

Now, it is a fact that some mail-order houses do make cheap rates on some items sometimes, but usually then you are getting a cheaper grade than you are accustomed to, and when the freight or express charges are added it usually figures out about the same as the merchant would have charged. The peddler never makes cheap rates, and he and the premium man generally have to practice some kind of a scheme of deception to get by.

If these fellows sold goods so much cheaper than any one else it would not be necessary for them to employ men and wagons nor to argue their case before the housewife for a small order; they could sell in $10,000 lots to big jobbers, who would pay them through their banks, and it would not be necessary to send a salesman, neither a collector, to get the money.

We do not believe many consumers were convinced by this. Would not actual proof, by quoting comparisons between grades sold by peddlers and grades sold by grocers, have been more convincing?

The Subscribers' Bargain List

Have you got any goods you don't want? Anything—canned goods, groceries, hardware, dry goods, anything at all that's in good condition, but won't sell for you.

If you will make a price on it we can possibly sell it for you in a hurry. Write us about it, stating the quantity, condition and your best price. You might give the original cost, too. We will give it a key number and offer it to our 4,000 subscribers. Your name will not appear unless you want it to. All sales ought to be on a cash basis.

The point is that what won't sell for you may be in everday demand for somebody else, who will be glad to get your stock of it at a bargain.

There will be no charge for this service anywhere—we do it to help along.

THE VALUE OF BRIGHT STORES

¶ The difficulty of making a sale—whether it be dry goods or vegetables, jewelry or shoes is increased tenfold in a poorly lighted store. Other things being equal, the Electrically lighted shop will do more business than the store which uses other illuminants. "Indoor Daylight" can only be obtained by the use of Mazda Electric lamps.

MODERN MERCHANT AND GROCERY WORLD

ESTABLISHED 1885

VOL. LXII. PHILADELPHIA, September 4, 1916. No. 10

There has never been one number of even a bad trade paper issued, that didn't contain something which could be adapted with profit by even a first-class merchant.

A Clear Explanation as to How the "Trade Acceptances" Just Now Being Introduced, Will Affect Retail Merchants.

Heinz Vinegars

now bottled and sealed in the Heinz Establishment

Everywhere in the United States Heinz street car and magazine advertising is telling the consumer that he can now buy the celebrated Heinz Vinegars in original sealed packages.

Heinz Bottled Vinegars mean much to you, too, Mr. Grocer. They mean convenience, a broad guarantee of vinegar of aroma and flavor, relief from the losses always connected with bulk measurement and compliance with pure food laws.

The bottles make a fine window display and our travelers will be glad to supply posters, window cards, envelope inserts, etc., to link your store with our advertising.

Let the Figures Talk

¶ When you get a minute figure up the retail profit on Wheatena in comparison with the retail profit (or loss) on other wheat cereals.

¶ We haven't spent a dollar advertising Wheatena where other concerns have spent a thousand. But it is astonishing what widespread distribution we have gotten from it. You will find Wheatena easy to sell. The hearts of selected wheat.

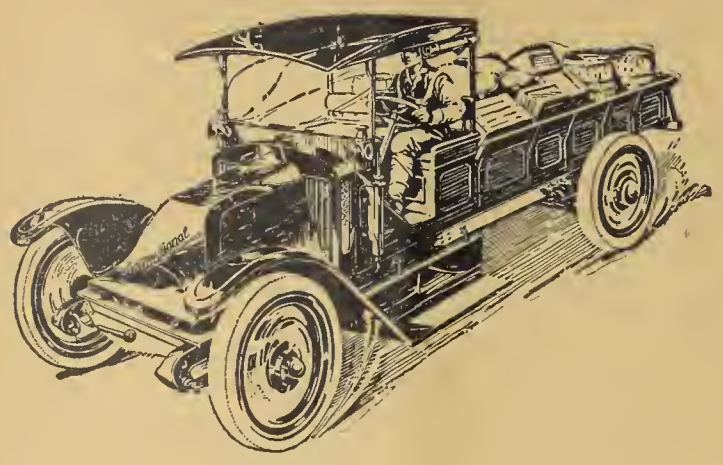
One Man's Way Before the Specialty Stamp Came—and His Way Now



"Before the specialty stamp came along," said a retailer the other day, "I signed a lot of specialty orders that I didn't expect to take, knowing that my jobber wouldn't ship a lot of them—I could always get out of it when I wanted to.

"The worst of that was that the jobber sometimes wouldn't ship the order that I wanted. So I thought it over, and now I sign fewer orders, confine myself to those that I want, and don't sign any at all unless they have a stamp on. I get all I sign now and get them promptly. It's better all around."

We couldn't preach a better sermon on the advantage of the specialty stamp if we tried for a week.

Now Is the Time to Buy

If your business keeps two or more horses busy, there's just one reason why you are not using an

International Motor Truck

You don't know what it will do for you!

That's true. If you knew how much actual cash it saves, you would buy an International Motor Truck, because you could hardly make a better paying investment. If it added only twenty-five cents a day to your net profits—that would be better than 8 per cent. interest on the price of a Model E.

That is not all it does, by any means, but that should be enough to interest you, a business man. Write for our complete figures on motor truck saving, or, better yet—see the trucks themselves. There are three good models at the lowest prices ever made on trucks of this quality and capacity.

E —1500 pounds capacity, with express body, complete . . . . . $ 950
H—1500 pounds capacity, internal gear drive (chassis) $1225
F —2000 pounds capacity, internal gear drive (chassis) $1500

Is it any wonder that over 13,000 successful business men use and boost for the International Motor Truck? It makes money for them. A line to the address below will bring you figures showing what you may expect an International to do for you.

How the "Trade Acceptances" Just Now Being Introduced, Will Affect Retail Merchants

They Are a New Form of Negotiable Paper, Which All Retailers Who Do Not Discount Will be Asked to Sign. They Are Written Acknowledgment by a Retailer That He Owes a Jobber a Certain Sum, and a Promise to Pay That Sum at a Certain Time. This the Jobber Discounts With His Bank Like a Note.

Very few retail merchants are familiar with the new financial system that has grown up in this country during the last two years, thinking that it does not affect them in any important way. There is one phase of it, however, which very directly affects them and it is that part of the Federal Reserve Act which creates what are known as "Trade Acceptances." A "Trade Acceptance" is practically a new form of negotiable paper which, undoubtedly, a large number of retail merchants will be asked to sign, particularly after the system gets under way a little more.

We are reproducing herewith a form of "Trade Acceptance." In form it is somewhat like an ordinary draft. The method of using it is as follows: A jobber sells a retailer a bill of goods. The ordinary terms upon such a transaction would be 1 or 2 per cent discount in 10 days, net 30 days. Up to now the entire transaction has consisted of sending the buyer a notice and charging the bill to him in the seller's books. If the buyer was one who did not discount, the seller would have to go without his money for 30 days, perhaps longer, or sell the account to one of the commercial credit agencies or trust companies who make it a busines to buy Accounts Receivable from wholesale dealers. The use of the "Trade Acceptance" introduces an entirely new method. When the jobber makes the sale he sends to the buyer an acceptance form similar to that which is reproduced herewith. In a sense it is an agreement in writing by the buyer to pay the bill on a certain date. Of course, no agreement was necessary in order to bind the buyer to the seller, because the order which he had given for the goods bound him to pay for them. The object of the "Trade Acceptance" is to furnish something in writing which the seller can have discounted. The buyer merely signs the "Trade Acceptance," agreeing to pay his bill on a certain date, and sends it back to the seller. When the time comes to pay, the buyer is given notice.

With the written acceptance in his hand the seller can go to his bank and discount it just as he would a promissory note. Before he does so he must endorse it so that the bank is perfectly safe in advancing money upon it. Not only does it bear the name of a responsible retailer, but it also bears the name of a responsible jobber. Thus there is double security. The bank discounts the "Trade Acceptance" just as it would a note and then goes to the Federal Reserve Bank and itself pledges it there or rediscounts it.

It is expected that the new idea will very greatly benefit both the seller and the buyer. It benefits the seller because it gives him practically cash in hand for all of his accounts receivable. He can discount "Trade Acceptances" at his bank a good deal more cheaply than he can sell the accounts to a commercial credit house. It will benefit the buyer because the retailer who signs "Trade Acceptances" is benefiting his jobber almost as much as if he discounted his bills, and he will, therefore, be apt to be regarded as a customer to be preferred. The Federal Reserve Banks are so anxious to popularize this class of paper that they authorize banks to discount it at a preferential rate o ½ of 1 per cent. less than the regu lar rediscount rate for single nam commercial paper.

There is one phase of the subje which has not been touched upo A retailer should be very carefu not to sign a "Trade Acceptance until he is sure the account is righ If he signs a "Trade Acceptance and afterwards finds that the a count which is covered by it is i correct, or if some of the goods a missing, or wrong in some way, l will still be bound to pay the amou covered by the "Trade Acceptance in spite of that.

Will There Be a Railroad Strike?

The Question Will Be Answered by the Time These Word Are Published. Means Freight Tie-up, Depleted Stock All Markets Depending on Spot Stocks, Advanced Price for Some Products and Reduced Prices for Others.

By the time these words are published, we will all know whether the mammoth railroad strike, which has been threatening for several weeks, will be a fact. If it comes, it will undoubtedly be the most colossal labor conflict ever waged. It is remarkable how many people are misunderstanding the causes of this strike. It is not a strike for an 8-hour day at all. If the railroad men win the strike they will work precisely as long as they work now. But they will get paid as much for eight hours of labor as they now get for ten hours. This would increase the railroads' expenses $100,000,000 a year, which must of course come from somewhere.

If it comes, the strike will affect both freight and passenger traffic. The freight service all over the country will be tied up to a greater or smaller degree. Markets will have to depend on their own spot stocks. When those are exhausted, the situation may become critical. Of course some goods will be moved, but probably nowhere near enough for the demand. We produce on spot only a small percentage of the goods we consume.

Prices on various commodities which can no longer be adequately brought in from outside will undoubtedly advance, though there will be the usual public protest, probably accompanied by committees of investigation, which w have the usual result—nothin There will probably also be slump prices, where manufacturers ha stocks on hand which they w have to dump on their local marke

Few of the trade have any co ception of the extent to which strike like this can tie up busine for everybody, even the small i land storekeeper. More indeed f the latter than the city dealer, f he is more dependent on freig service. Trolleys will undoubted carry some freight, and automobi freight service will be organize Without doubt we will get alo after a fashion.

A pinch may be felt next we even if the strike is called off, f the railroads have put an embar on perishable freights which cann be delivered before 7 o'clock Monday A. M., when the stri starts.

The merchant who has a big sto on hand—no matter what it is- may be given by the strike an o portunity he could not otherwi have of cleaning it out quickly at profit.

How to Increase Your Business With the Telephone*

An Expert Shows Retailers How They Can Get More Customers and Sell More to What They Have, by Cultivating the Telephone. Considers the Telephone a Gold Mine if Properly Worked, Though Many Dealers Treat It as a Mere Convenience for Themselves.

To-day there is within easy reach of every merchant a modern Aladdin's Lamp, which, when properly used, would surely make Aladdin jealous were he living in this country to-day. It is about the retailer's Aladdin's Lamp—the telephone—that I want to talk to you, and its many possibilities for building business and for winning friends.

To-day the lifting of a telephone receiver in an instant places at your elbow a system of gigantic size, which says, "What wouldst thou have? I am ready to obey thee as thy servant and the servant of all other subscribers to this system."

For years the telephone has been looked upon as an extremely useful aid in the business management of every retail merchant's establishment. However, its use in dealing with your problems has been, in my opinion, more casual than systematic, more occasional than regular. So, in this belief, I am going to try to tell you how the courteous, systematic and persistent use of the telephone—your Aladdin's Lamp, not only will help to build up your business generally, but will also mean for you increased net profits, through increased sales, at decreased selling costs.

First, I want to tell you something about what your telephone will do for you in building or boosting business, and if I suggest some impossible methods, please forgive me, for I am not a retail merchant, only a telephone worker.

Every retailer knows that sales can be made over the telephone just as they can be made in person. Mr. Retailer knows it, because he has made sales this way himself. Yet a good many able retailers still regard telephone service chiefly as a convenience to customers. Busy with other details they have overlooked the fact that the telephone cannot only be used to serve present customers better and sell them more goods, but can be used to make new customers. It is probably true that your telephone inquiries and orders are referred to some competent employee, and to that extent telephone selling has been developed as a convenience to customers. But from my observations telephone selling in your business has seldom been developed systematically, aggressively or intelligently through telephone advertising and sales solicitation. Has your telephone service—your Aladdin's Lamp—ever been developed into a distinct business getter in itself? Is your telephone reaching out and securing to you new patrons, valued "repeat" orders, cutting down your selling costs, or is it merely the time-worn convenience, just satisfying the urgent inquiry, of a customer? What I want to suggest is a practical plan for using your present telephone facilities to increase your business effectively and economically. And by "practical," I mean some methods now in use which are "bringing home the bacon" to grocers, jewelers, clothiers and retail merchants in general.

Have you ever considered the possibilities for an expert telephone salesperson, and by expert I mean one familiar with your business, who is also well versed in the art of courteous talking over the telephone. And you must not confuse the duties of such a specialist with the position of your private branch exchange operator, provided you have one in your store. The duties of this employee are clearly defined as that of a clearing house whose job is to keep incoming and outgoing calls running with courtesy, speed and accuracy. To add "selling" duties to her present activities will spell disaster to this plan, for she "cannot serve two masters."

The duties of this expert telephone salesman or saleswoman are manifold and I shall enumerate some of them as follows, and give suggestions for each case.

1. To obtain regular orders by telephone from your present customers. The adoption of this plan will do away with considerable lost motion on the part of your employees. For this work your telephone specialist should be equipped with a card record, giving your patrons' names, addresses and telephone numbers. After each call the orders are jotted down and filled at once. A telephone call to each patron at an approved hour will mean increased business at decreased costs and may help to do away with certain wagon calls and may help to arrange more systematic routings for your wagon deliveries. As I understand it, every retailer is endeavoring to reduce the cost of taking orders, and the telephone certainly offers a cheap and speedy method for this solicitation work. Time was when the butcher and the grocer feared that business would suffer with the inauguration of the delivery wagon. Actual experience soon dissipated that bugaboo, and the old stock argument of getting the customer into the store received a puncture. And the same thing is true of the telephone situation.

I know of one butcher in a suburban town who was forced to compete with the high-class meat markets to be found in the adjacent city. To persuade this suburban trade to buy their meats from him he determined upon the policy of delivering as good steaks and chops on orders received by telephone as upon the personal call of the patron. This policy was announced by card notices mailed to every telephone subscriber within his delivery radius, mentioning the telephone "honor" scheme which would be maintained by this shop and a cordial invitation to order by telephone, including of course, his telephone numbers.

2. To obtain new customers. Instruct your telephone expert to obtain and maintain a complete card record of prospective customers. Every day a certain amount of time should be devoted to the calling of these people, inviting them to your store and to establish business relations with you. This is a cheap and satisfactory method of advertising which, when properly done, means considerable new business. If I asked you why a merchant who doesn't advertise is like a man rowing a boat, someone might answer, "Because he goes backward," bu that is not the correct answer. Th proper answer is, "Because he ha to get along without sales."

In this "new business" work you employees should prove most valu able, and when you give these sug gestions a trial, be sure to make i a fair trial.

3. To win back former patrons In most telephone solicitation you specialist at first should be equippe with a prepared talk. This sugges tion is offered on the basis that you salesperson would deliver your mes sage better if a prepared talk i available, not to be memorized fo parrot-like delivery, but with th important facts always in mind Again, a card record should b maintained, and after the telephon conversation is completed, the fact jotted down, and in this way a car record of your relations with ever household is maintained. I predic that you will not only win back number of customers by thi method. but that you will uneart a number of interesting complaint which you will welcome as aids t improving the service of your store A displeased customer is your wors advertisement and a few kind word from your telephone employee wil work wonders, not only in bringing back business, but in winning friends. If any of your regular cus tomers haven't ordered at thei usual hour, the expert should cal them and ask them why. "Delivery wagon just coming up your way—do you want to give your order now?" If to-morrow is a holiday she might help close the store early by getting orders in by telephone the night before. When new fami lies move into that neighborhood this salesperson should call them by telephone, introduce herself as the "telephone saleswoman," and assure them that she will give personal at tention to all orders sent regularly or in an emergency. The same pro cess is followed whenever a new wagon covering some outlying neighborhood, is put on. Your store can draw trade from every point within its delivery limits and reap the "velvet" of emergency orders.

4. In addition to these practices, isn't it desirable to obtain all the re tail business from your present cus tomers? If this is true, why not have your specialist call up present customers about this or that article and suggest their buying other goods, which you have to offer. The onvenience of doing business with it one store is an excellent talking oint. It is likely that your tele- ione salesperson will take dozens orders daily from regular cus- mers. She knows them all and ey all know her. Why not in- ruct her to interest customers in lditional goods after they have lephoned their lists. This is a mple matter of suggestion: "The rst strawberries came in this morn- g, Mrs. Jones, and they're fine— ou want a couple of quarts, don't ou?" Again and again, she will revent loss by selling off remain- ers of perishable green stuff while ustomers are sending in their din- er orders in the afternoon.

5. Many retailers send out, from me to time, advertising literature nd letters and the suggestion is ffered that your salesperson follow p such literature by telephone, with view of obtaining additional busi- ess from such people. While on he subject of literature and letters, on't forget that every letter writ- en in a business house costs some- where between 15 and 25 cents. This may seem a bit startling, for deas on correspondence costs are enerally bound up with the 2-cent tamp. But if the items of station- ry, postage, stenographer's time, ling copies, principal's time and so orth, are faithfully set down, it vill be found that business corre- pondence costs a good deal more han most people imagine. The cost of sending out the simplest sealed printed circular to a list of several undred of prospects is about five ents per piece.

Add to this "manufacturing cost" he delay of correspondence and the valuable time of a busy man taken from more profitable work, and it becomes well worth while to weigh each letter against the telephone service and decide whether a tele- phone message would not be cheaper than writing. Investigation of the mail that comes into the aver- age office will show that many writers are in your local telephone area. Why not have your specialist reply by telephone to many of your letters—it's the quickest way—and the cheapest—even at toll and long distance points.

6. Possibly your telephone spe- cialist can speed up collections via the telephone, and thereby keep cus- tomers as boosters instead of knock- ers. A customer who owes a bill is a poor asset, and there is special

WILBUR'S COCOA

You'll find Wilbur's Cocoa so well known and well liked that customers are practically waiting to buy it, and all you need to do is remind them of it. Wilbur's Cocoa has been extensively advertised for many years, and once tried its superior flavor has always given satisfaction.

Our booklet "Cook's Tours Through Wilburland" shows consumers 60 ways to use Wilbur's Cocoa—as a food as well as a drink. Wilbur's Cocoa can be made into delicious cakes without the use of butter, which is only one of our recipes; it makes the most delicious Iced Cocoa, and our recipe for that is the only successful way of making it.

To make a long story short—once you start a customer buying Wilbur's Cocoa it means steady repeat sales at a good profit to you and satisfaction to her. That is the kind of articles you want to sell, because they build up permanent trade.

It will pay you to keep Wilbur's Cocoa displayed on your counters and in your windows at all times.

WITH THE EDITOR

No Mail Order Money for the Old Settlers' Fair.

A writer in a Western paper is lambasting the mail-order houses, particularly Sears, Roebuck & Co., because the latter house refused to contribute to a town fair. The promoters of the enterprise went out among the local retailers and collected considerable, and then sent to Sears, Roebuck & Co., who sell thousands of dollars worth of goods throughout that district. The promoters were foolish enough to believe that a mail-order house has the slightest interest in a community merely because it sells goods there. They know different now. Sears, Roebuck came back with the following letter:—

> We have your letter and would like very much to help the Old Settlers' picnic, but we have so many requests of this kind that it is simply impossible for us to help you. This you can readily appreciate, since we have customers in nearly every one of the 60,000 post offices in the United States. We have to feel unable to contribute to picnics or otherwise, much as we would like to.
> Yours truly,
> SEARS, ROEBUCK & Co.

I don't know that I altogether blame the mail-order house for not helping the Old Settlers' picnic. There is a lot of picnics, and fairs, and other things that nobody ought to help. They are public nuisances. But the fact remains that the local merchants helped it. The local merchants always help such things. Does that fact alone entitle them to the preference of the consumer? Certainly it does, if the local merchant can supply equal goods at equal prices. The trouble is that many retailers lack the energy to wade in and convince consumers that their proposition is as good as the mail-order proposition. When they fail to say a single word for themselves, the consumer can hardly be blamed for taking the word of the mail-order house to the contrary.

Getting a New Brand In.

The money that it costs to get national distribution for a new food product to-day is illustrated by the campaign which the Jiffy-Jell people are putting up for that product. There is nothing especially new or novel about Jiffy-Jell. I am told that several exact counterparts of it are already in the market and have been for several years.

The market cannot be said to be crowded with preparations of this sort. There are only a few, comparatively, but the market will only take a few. That it had all it needed without Jiffy-Jell cannot be doubted.

The Waukesha Pure Food Co., who make Jiffy-Jell, saw that big measures were necessary, and they have sent a quantity of their product to every wholesale grocer in the United States. The freight alone ate up much money. Then they sent a bulky letter to every retailer in the United States. The postage on that stunt took several thousand dollars more. Advertising in the "Saturday Evening Post" is also being done—$5,000 every whack. And so far the goods have not even begun to move, yet many thousands of dollars have been tied up. Of course, some will be moved. Such a campaign would move anything—some.

I expressed the opinion recently that if there was no room for a new product, the manufacturers might spend all the money in the mint, but they would not get very far in forcing it in. And I illustrated this with the story of a soap powder which a manufacturer spent $200,000 on in the way of advertising without result. It literally got nowhere at all, because there was no room for it. Perhaps the Jiffy-Jell people may succeed in demonstrating that there is room for them.

A Word to the Jobbers' Organizations.

I respectfully submit to the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, and incidentally to the Philadelphia Grocers' and Importers' Exchange, that a legitimate part of their activities could be watching for impositions on the trade like the sale of yellow tail fish as "the same as" tuna. This was reported in this paper last week. It was charged to a Philadelphia jobber and all the facts were given. Up to the time of going to press, the jobber in question, B. S. Janney, Jr., & Co., has made no defense and no reply.

If the facts published in the case referred to were correct, a gross imposition was practiced not only on the retail trade, but on the wholesale trade as well. The whole trade, or the honest part of it, is much worse off for every such case. Why could not the two jobbers' organizations go after such matters with perfect propriety and with profit to their members?

The "Modern Merchant and Grocery World" can supply evidence of other cases like this in the wholesaling of merchandise if the above organizations are interested in it. Cases of repeated and long-continued exaggeration regarding the quality and value of grocery merchandise, so gross that they amount to grievous fraud. Moreover, I shall be glad to see that the prop legal services are given for t prosecution without charge. suggest that it is clearly the pla of these organizations to act in t matter, and that such a situation just as important as anything th are doing.

Making Public Brands of Jobbers' Private Brands.

Wholesale grocers are gradua coming to admit that the chief arg ment against th private brands almost ever wholesale groc has private brands—is that they not sell at retail as well as adve tised brands. A jobber's priva brand of cocoa may offer the r tailer twice as much profit as the a vertised brands like Baker's a Wilbur's, but if it doesn't sell, t double profit isn't forthcoming, it?

Therefore some wholesale gr cers are taking their brands out the category of private brands, a are seeking to make them pub brands. The Steele-Wedeles C of Chicago, for example, are no regularly advertising their Sav line to consumers. They expla the move thus:—

> We are using advertising as a feature of our service to make the future sales of our dealers more permanent. We all know the story of the difference between advertised brands and the brands of the jobber. Every retailer knows that among other things, the manufacturer's specialty salesman will tell him the jobber's brands will not sell as rapidly as those which are advertised. Quite logical, of course.

Certain of the New York jobbe are doing the same. As they do the main objection to priva brands—"they are unknown"—d appears, and it then becomes straight competition between o advertised brand and another.

If You Have a Horse, Read These Rules.

The following comprehensive rules relative to the care and attention wrich a delivery horse should receive during hot weather will interest the trade generally:—

1. Load lightly and drive slowly.
2. Stop in the shade if possible.
3. Water your horse as often as possible. So long as a horse is working, water in small quantities will not hurt him. But let him drink only a few swallows if he is going to stand still. Do not fail to water him at night after he has eaten his hay.
4. When he comes in after work, sponge off the harness marks and sweat, his eyes, his nose and mouth, and the dock. Wash his feet, but not his legs.
5. If the thermometer is 75 degrees or higher, wipe him all over with a damp sponge. Use vinegar water if possible. Do not turn the hose on him.
6. Saturday night, give a bran mash, lukewarm, and add a tablespoonful of saltpetre.
7. Do not use a horse hat unless it is a canopy hat. The ordinary bell-shaped hat does more harm than good.
8. A sponge on top of the head, or even a cloth, is good if kept wet. If dry it is worse than nothing.
9. If the horse is overcome by heat, get him into the shade, remove harness and bridle, wash out his mouth, sponge him all over, shower his legs and give him two ounces of aromatic spirits of ammonia, or two ounces of sweet spirits of nitre, in a pint of water; or give him a pint of coffee warm. Cool his head at once, using cold water, or, if necessary, chopped ice, wrapped in a cloth.
10. If the horse is off his feed, try him with two quarts of oats mixed with bran, and a little water; and add a little salt or sugar. Or give him oatmeal gruel or barley water to drink.
11. Watch your horse. If he stops sweating suddenly, or if he breathes short and quick, or if his ears droop, or if he stands with his legs braced sideways, he is in danger of a heat or sunstroke.
12. If it is so hot that the horse sweats in the stable at night, tie him outside, with bedding under him. Unless he cools off during the night, he cannot stand the next day's heat.

BURK'S Meat Loaf

SEASONABLE THROUGHOUT THE YEAR

Composed entirely of fine selected meats—contains no flour or cereals. Baked fresh daily in loaves of about six pounds.

Makes a quick and delicious breakfast sliced and fried in a little butter.

Can also be served cold for luncheon, cut in thin slices or warmed in the oven in one piece to take the place of a roast.

BURK'S Lunch Roll

(Copyrighted)

SUBSTITUTE FOR BOILED HAM

Composed of lean, tender pieces of pork, mildly cured, stuffed in linen container and boiled.

Far superior and more delicious than boneless boiled ham, being juicy, mild and sweet; also less expensive and not near so wasteful—in fact no waste at all. Much finer in texture and just as easily sliced, or more so, as this can be done in a slicing machine.

The cover is readily removed by cutting the seam and then stripping off the sack as the roll is consumed. This prevents it becoming dry and is a sanitary feature that appeals to the consumer, as it keeps the product clean while displayed on the counter and untouched by hand while slicing, a vast improvement as compared with handling the greasy, unprotected boneless boiled ham.

MEAT LOAF and LUNCH ROLL were originated by us, now imitated by others, but none equal to Burk's, which are prepared from only the choicest materials.

Unusual Stunts to Get a Store in the Public Eye

Under this heading, from time to time, we will report clever things that retailers have done to impress themselves and their stores on the minds of consumers. In a recent issue we published the experience of a retail grocer who gave a most successful reception to mark the completion of his new refrigeration system. The experience published this week is somewhat different, but it would have the same advertising value to the store.—Ed.

How a Retailer Celebrated His First Birthday.

A little over one year ago O. M. Paterson, a retail grocer, established a store. It was successful, and when one year had elapsed, he resolved to advertise it into still greater success by giving a birthday party. So he sent to all his customers and to those whom he wished to become such the following letter:—

Dear Madam:—Next Saturday is our birthday. We are one year old on that date. It is just one year ago since we started in business, and it certainly has been a year long to be remembered.

In spite of the war, the enormous increase in the price of all goods, and the unsettled conditions generally, our business has grown enormously—almost double what we dared to hope for a year ago.

We have two purposes in writing this letter. The first is to thank you for the confidence you have placed in us, shown by the liberal patronage you have accorded us during the year. We intend to increase that confidence during the next year, if pure goods, proper store service and prompt delivery, coupled with courteous treatment and fair prices, will do it.

The second is to extend to you and your friends an invitation to our birthday party on Saturday. We are going to celebrate by giving every man, woman and child who comes to our store on that day a birthday present. We have a big assortment of very useful presents. Every one of them is worth coming a long distance for. And they won't cost you a cent. We don't even ask you to buy anything from us, except, of course, you happen to need something in our line. All we want is that you come to the store and get your present.

In case some of your neighbors or friends should not hear about our party and be disappointed, will you do them and us a favor by telling them about it and asking them to come.

To add to the fun we are mixing the presents all up in our window, so that every one will be a surprise. Come early and avoid the rush.

Yours (one year old),
O. M. Paterson.

It was calculated that over 1,000 people visited the store that day. And incidentally, more money was taken in on that day than had ever been taken in before. Most of the presents were obtained free from manufacturing concerns and consisted of samples of soap, candy, cocoa and many other things. These were parcelled up, generally two samples being placed in a package. Among these were scattered about six dozen of regular 25 and 50-cent articles from the store's stock. Each person visiting the store was given a draw from this big assortment of gifts. Customers did not have to buy anything to secure a draw. Every gift was worth coming to the store to secure, especially the 25 and 50-cent articles, and the chances of securing such articles stimulated interest in drawing to a marked extent.

To each child who came to the store one of the Mother Goose books issued by the Wrigley Gum Co. for advertising purposes and containing a one cent stick of gum was presented. Every child was presented with this gift, the merchant even going out on the sidewalk to give to some of them. Every youngster making a purchase of 10 cents or more was also given a draw from the regular assortment.

Good publicity was given to the scheme beforehand—an important factor in the success of the affair. The local paper for the district was used for the two weeks previous to advertise it. The first week there was a general announcement and the second week it was put in the form of a formal invitation, "requesting the pleasure of your company at our birthday party, etc." In addition to this 1,600 circular letters were sent out to the residents of the district.

Mr. Paterson said after the scheme was over that he didn't think more than four or five dozen of the people who came to the store failed to buy something.

Trade Agitated by Railroad Strike Talk. Police Will Look Into All Advances. Cold Storage Egg Ruling Modified. Premium Men Begin National Campaign. American Specialty Manufacturers' Association Perfects System of Handling Specialty Orders. Convention Retailers Want to be Told About Adulterated Food. Market Summary.

Special Correspondence of "Modern Merchant and Grocery World."

New York, September 1, 1916.

The trade here are much agitated at the prospects of a railroad strike. While there is considerable stock in most lines on spot, New York is an enormous consumer of everything in the food line, and if compelled to support itself from the spot stock, undoubtedly prices will sharply advance on almost all lines. Certainly on almost all those which come from a distance, such as California products and Chicago meat products. The embargo which the railroads have put upon perishable food products not delivered before September 4th has excited the market, and almost everything is showing a strong undertone.

The police department has announced that it expects some dealers to take advantage of the situation by advancing prices. It is reported that the department will make an immediate investigation where anything like this develops and will make an example of the perpetrators.

The ruling of State Commissioner of Markets Dillon that after September 1st all cold storage eggs sold out of their original package must have the words "cold storage" stamped on their shells is to be modified. The State will be satisfied if the case itself, and not each egg, is marked "cold storage."

The National Premium Advertising Association, whose headquarters are in this city, has issued a statement during the week that it is about to institute an educational campaign throughout the entire country for the purpose of bringing the truth of the premium industry to the attention of the public. The association claims to represent a gross annual business of over $100,000,000. It proposes not to wage a fight in the interest of any particular class of premium, but to organize constructively throughout the country in defense of the general principle that premiums are legitimate and useful adjuncts to modern business. The secretary of the organization is Harry B. Haines, a well-known newspaper man.

Advertising in the local financial papers confirms the statement previously published that a combination is in progress among the California Fruit Canners' Association, the Central California Canneries, Griffen & Skelly Co,. the J. K. Armsby Co., and the Alaska Packers' Association. If this goes through it will represent one of the most enormous combinations that has ever occurred in the food trades.

The American Specialty Manufacturers' Association has issued during the week what it calls "The Perfect System," to be used by jobbers in handling specialty orders. The following is the substance of it:

1st. Treat American Specialty Manufacturers' Association specialty orders in the same manner that you treat your own orders.

(a). Immediately make out a separate house order for every accepted American Specialty Manufacturers' Association order, stamping same "specialty order."

This means that jobber's salesmen will have nothing to do with the filling of the order, and that specialty orders will not be held up to be added to the next regular order, which so often causes delay, misplacing or loss of order.

(b). Register the order.

(c). Send order to the shipping department with instructions that—if in city to deliver on first delivery in neighborhood, irrespective of any regular order—if in country and order is not large enough to ship alone, to ship with next order.

2d. Do not hold up any American Specialty Manufacturers' Association specialty orders for credit reasons. If you cannot ship promptly do not accept the order.

3d. If retailer refuses delivery, notify our member or write this office, giving all particulars.

Jobbers adopting the system outlined will have a cleaner stock and less tag-ends at inventory time.

Goods That Are Being Advertised to Your Customers

"Modern Merchant and Grocery World" Makes Compilation of Products for Which Demand is Being Created Through Leading Periodicals. Papers and Magazines Used as Basis Cover Entire Country.

[The compilation which appears below is the result of more thinking along a line which was given some discussion several months ago, viz., the advantage to the retailer of keeping posted as to what products are being advertised to his customers, so that he may get the benefit of such advertising, if the product is for other reasons a desirable one to sell. The list here presented includes practically every leading magazine and periodical, and products that are not advertised in at least some of them are hardly advertised in this way at all, although they may be in newspapers or in direct ways, such as sampling, demonstrating, etc.]

ONE of the heaviest advertising campaigns in the world has put "Wrigleys" into the mouths of millions of citizens of the United States—it has joined every retail merchant in the United States to our organization as a partner—it has proven him to be an important half of the partnership. We have endeavored to make this partnership—what every partnership must be to succeed—pleasant and profitable to both sides. We believe we have succeeded.

We have joined the PENNSYLVANIA PLAN because it is a movement on the part of the retail merchant who is already our partner; because we appreciate the important factor which his good will and co-operation have been in our success—because we consider it a privilege to reciprocate and be a partner in his organization.

Our ability and resources are at the service of Pennsylvania merchants and are constantly directed toward securing bigger business and greater profits for us both.

merit in expediting collections by this method, which is a cheap and pleasant one when properly handled. Whether you employ a salesman or saleswoman in this work depends on your own preference. Personally, I should vote for the saleswoman, for the same reasons that we have women operators instead of men operators, as they are more polite, patient and tactful when using the telephone. Then too, telephone service can be utilized to fill in the dull hours of retail trade and take the pressure off the "peak." By leading the public to read the store's advertising, with telephone orders in mind, much profitable patronage might be shifted to the morning.

In your advertising literature, the suggestion is made that you include your telephone number, with a footnote explaining the telephone selling service, this footnote to appear on every advertisement, bill and price-list. There is good suggestive value in this idea, because many people are thereby persuaded to go into action at once before their interest has died down. And interest in your goods does die down occasionally, when it is necessary to make a personal call, to write a letter or look up the telephone number in the directory. Possibly you are wondering if a telephone campaign of the character suggested in this paper would become objectionable to the public. My answer is emphatically "No," because every retail merchant has a real message of value for the people or he wouldn't be in business. With the proper telephone specialist in your employ you should be able to convince every person that, in hanging up their receiver, he or she has listened to a talk of real value. In my opinion people should welcome this telephone plan most heartily, for it helps to reduce overhead selling costs, which ultimately means more favorable prices for the customer.

Your telephone salesman or saleswoman will also be responsible, so far as possible, for handling incoming orders. However, it is necessary that all employees be trained to handle telephone orders properly and promptly in the event your specialist is busy. The famous Aladdin's Lamp had two sides for rubbing purposes—and so, many retail merchants will find two telephone lines necessary to obtain the best results. One line for solicitation work, the other for incoming orders. You know a "busy" report too often means a lost sale. I know one retail merchant who has a single telephone shut away in a little cubby hole where he posts his books every night. He thinks of that telephone only as a convenience for himself when he wants to order goods from downtown in a hurry. Incoming calls are regarded as a sort of necessary evil. Answering the telephone is of secondary importance to attending to the wants of the proverbial "bird-in-hand" customer, be the latter sale ever so small. Tired of waiting, the prospective telephone customer "hangs up" and the order is lost. But that telephone sale might have amounted to ten times as much as the "bird-in-hand." Of course, it is quite the proper thing to finish waiting on customers, but the little shop's organization should be such as to make it unnecessary to drop anything or neglect anybody to take an order over the wire. This retailer only does business with people who shop in person and who are drawn from a radius of not mo than ten blocks because he neglecting his telephone opportu ties.

Now, just a few words on t subject of how to win friends telephone, for yourself and yo business. Friends are usually w or lost by our actions toward o another. Anything we say, and t way we say it, has an influence reflecting our personality. Wh we talk over the telephone t smallest inflection of our voice sent out to the person to whom are talking—our personality h been put upon the wire, and it pleasing or otherwise in proporti to the attention we give to maki it so. And what I am saying a plies to you, Mr. Merchant, as w as to your sales people.

)ne of the surest ways of losing regard of a person to whom we talking is to be inattentive to at he is saying. Concentrated, ırteous attention given to a tele›ne conversation is a mark of pect paid to the talker that will appreciated in most cases. Short, upt answers or curt and impo: questions, such as "Who are you ing to talk to?" etc., are lapses in ırtesy that every telephone user ›uld avoid. In practicing cour- y over the telephone several ints may be kept in mind that will found helpful. You cannot see : person to whom you are talk-; but the telephone reflects your :ents and inflections so perfectly ıt you must be yourself. You are t face to face, but you are voice voice, and that is even more im- rtant. Learn to speak clearly and stinctly over the telephone.

You wish to be treated th politeness by others. Be polite, erefore, to them.

Telephone users should familiar- e themselves with the general ›ints to be observed in making a lephone call and in answering lls. LIPTON'S TEA is therefore the easiest tea for the Pennsylvania grocer to sell. No other tea has been advertised so extensively and persistently as Lipton's Tea. Not only have we advertised it in magazines, newspapers, street cars and billboards, but, it has been advertised from home to home by thousands and thousands of satisfied consumers.

The sealed air-tight package gives Lipton's Tea an individuality that becomes fixed in the minds of consumers. It preserves the tea in its original strength and aroma and guarantees a satisfactory brew. We pack ten different blends, so no matter whether your customer prefers Ceylon and India Black, English Breakfast, Black and Green Mixed, Formosa-Oolong, or Green Tea, you can give her the kind she likes best and be sure it will please her.

Lipton's Tea has all the time-saving advantages of the ready-to-sell package.

SUPPOSE you had to buy every article in your stock, Mr. Grocer, from a different manufacturer? You'd be so busy writing letters, studying catalogues, and sticking on postage stamps and explaining the changes to your customers, you wouldn't have time to sleep. And how much dependability would your customers have in your changing stocks? Take Matches for instance—the grocer who wants his customers to have confidence in what he sells them has no need to carry more than one line. There's a DIAMOND MATCH for every purpose, and at any price—that's decent—and every match backed by the reputation of the largest and oldest match manufacturers in the world.

Pettijohn's Flour

A Modern, Scientific Flour for Use in Place of Graham

Pettijohn's Flour differs greatly from so-called whole wheat flours. The white part, which forms 75 per cent., is ground separately. It is a very fine grade of patent flour.

The bran part, which forms 25 per cent., is specially prepared and added, largely in flake form.

The result is a delicate product and a scientific health flour, ready for use without further mixing.

Pettijohn's Flour is now advertised in all the women's leading magazines and is fast becoming a staple household product.

It is packed in large round 25c. tubes with removable cover—20 packages to the case.

We ask your co-operation particularly in filling customers' first orders. We will guarantee the sale on a trial case.

The Grocery Markets

Tea.

The tea market shows no change for the week, although Ceylon Indias are feeling a little firmer on the other side, and so are Moyunes. The market on this side is not materially changed, in fact it is hardly changed at all, but if the advancing tendency continues on the other side it probably will be changed before very long. August has been an exceedingly dull month for tea, and here and there holders are still willing to make concessions in order to move stock. The railroad strike, if it comes, will undoubtedly find a considerable percentage of the trade with low stocks.

Coffee.

The coffee market has been taken in hand during the week, so far as Rio and Santos are concerned, by a group of New York speculators, and without much trouble they have advanced Rio and Santos grades ¼ to ½ cent. There was no reason for this whatever, as the market conditions are entirely unchanged. The demand has been rather fair. Mild coffees are very dull and entirely unchanged in price, as are Java and Mocha.

Sugar.

The sugar market is decidedly weak. Raws have gone off again and have sold down to about 5¼ cents. All refiners are now asking 7 cents for granulated, with the general expectation that the price will decline very shortly. Of course the railroad strike is to be reckoned with and if it comes that may retard the drop. The consumptive demand for refined sugar is still very poor. September is usually the best month of the year, but not so much is expected of it this year.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose remains unchanged since the last reported advance. Compound syrup is very dull and will be for some weeks to come. Prices on that and on sugar syrup and molasses are all unchanged.

Fish.

Mackerel continues very high and comparatively scarce. Shore mackerel have made no change since the last report. The supply appears to be fair, but on account of the scarcity of other mackerel the market in a jobbing way is around $23 per barrel, and in Gloucester is about $1 above that. Summer Irish mackerel are available at prices around $18 a barrel. This is at least $7 above normal. There is practically no old Norway mackerel about except a few 1s and 2s. It is expected that we will get about 15,000 barrels of new Norway mackerel in this country this year. This is probably about one-third of what might come over in a normal year. New fish is now being offered from the other side at prices which are almost prohibitive. Cod, hake and haddock are unchanged at the recently quoted prices. Every buyer who bought new Alaska salmon subject to approval of the opening price has confirmed at the prices at which the market recently opened. In addition to that, the sockeye situation is very firm. The opening quotations are $1.40 in a large way f. o. b. coast, which is the highest price for a long while, but even at this price nowhere near enough can be furnished to supply the demand. One reason for this is that the spot Alaska market is in exceedingly good shape, the stock being well cleaned up at very high prices. Domestic sardines show no change. The price is comparatively high on account of scarcity. Imported sardines are about unchanged. New Norwegian sardines are being offered but at prices way above normal, and American buyers are not willing to take hold of them. Some of the advertised brands of Norwegian sardines have gotten so high that they are almost out of the 20-cent seller class. As a matter of fact, the ordinary brands can hardly be sold with any profit to the retailer at 15 cents.

Canned Goods.

Since the last report tomatoes have advanced 5 cents and were quoted at 90 cents in a large way f. o. b. factory. Trade did not respond and the price is now down again 2½ cents. It is a little hard to understand why any advance was justified, as the crop outlook was very fair. Corn shows no change but is still very firm. Deliveries from several sections will be short. There is a demand for a moderate priced pea, which is not easy to get. Some packers have announced that they would not deliver more than 75 per cent. of fancy peas. Altogether both corn and peas are firm and bid fair to rule at high prices throughout the season. Of course all this may be knocked in the head when the pack figures come out. Apples show no change but are firm. Some packers are holding for an advance. California canned goods are unchanged and quiet. Small Eastern staple canned goods are, in most lines, very firm on account of scarcity. This applies particularly to blackberries, cherries and strawberries. Naturally the threatened strike will affect the canned goods market temporarily.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are a shade firmer from the lowest point reached during the recent decline, but there are still those who predict that the price will have to go lower on account of the expected good sized crop and poor probabilities for export. Nobody is paying any attention to prunes in the East, although the coast operators are reported to be firmer on account of the organization of another growers combination out there. Prices on new raisins, meaning loose Muscatels and seeded brands, were named during the week on a basis of 7½ cents in a large way for fancy seeded. This year's prices are ½ to ¾ of a cent above a year ago. Peaches, apricots, currants and the balance of the list are all unchanged and dull.

Butter.

The butter market is firm but unchanged for the week. There is a fair supply and heavy demand. Considerable butter is still coming out of storage and more will come out if the railroad strike occurs. Already the railroads, in expectation of the strike, have put an embargo on butter coming from Western markets and this is exciting the market to some extent, although there is plenty of butter in storage for a long time.

Eggs.

The egg market is very firm at an advance of 1½ to 2 cents per dozen. The receipts are light and the consumptive demand is heavy. The fresh receipts show no improvement in quality as yet, and withdrawals from storage in August are heavier than for years account of the light receipts a large consumption. The railro strike will affect eggs just about it will affect butter.

Beans and Peas.

No change has occurred in p beans during the week, nor in ma rows. The demand is modera California limas are unchanged rather easy prices. Green a Scotch peas dull at ruling quo tions.

Cheese.

The cheese market is very firm an advance of 1½ cents a pou The advance appears to be gener In the Western markets the pr has advanced 2 cents and in Ca adian markets about 1 cent. T cause is the continuation of the e port demand and the heavy dom tic consumptive demand. T strike will not affect cheese ve much as it can easily be dropp out of the situation.

Provisions.

Smoked meats are firmer a show an advance of ½ cent p pound. This applies to all cuts a is caused by the good consumpti demand and the light supply. C account of the continued high pr of hogs, pure lard has advanced cent. Demand is active. Railroa have also put an embargo upon la and meat products. Compou has advanced ¼ cent in sympat with pure. Cottonseed oil is abo unchanged. Barreled pork is about 50 cents in sympathy wi hogs and is in fair demand. Supp is light. Dried beef is firm and u changed with a good dema Canned meats firm and unchange

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORT

Wheat and Flour.

There is an old proverb, "When y do not know what to do—wait," and t is about the attitude of the flour buy to-day. He has been awaiting patien for a reaction which, under ordina conditions, would be as sure as th night follows day. It is quite reasona to expect a reaction of 10 to 15 ce a bushel after an almost perpendicu rise of 50 cents. But are these or nary circumstances? And can we s that wheat is not worth its prese price?

Prices are always relative. Some s that wheat at $1.50 a bushel is too hi yet at that price it is only 2½ cents pound. Coming across on the ferry t other day we saw a lot of old ro frayed and ragged and put aside to s to the junk man, who cheerfully is pa g 6 cents a pound for it, because of e shortage in paper stock. Take your ily newspaper and glance over the arket page and see if you can find ıything half so cheap as wheat that is mparable to it in nutritive value.

No—wheat is not high. It looks high hen you compare its present price with at of a few weeks ago, but as a matter : fact it has been too cheap. And ow that the European crops are short, id the crop of North America has suf-:red a calamity, the price of wheat is sponding to the natural laws of supply id demand. The spring wheat crops of anada and our own Northwest are less ian half of last year's production and ie quality woefully poor. Millers say iat it will take an extra bushel to ake a barrel of flour, so not only is iere a quantitative disaster, but a qual-ative one as well.

We are told that the bulk of the heat will test about forty-five pounds) the bushel, so that the flour content iust be greatly reduced. Mr. Snow ays that the spring wheat crop will not xceed 143,000,000 bushels, against 356, 00,000 bushels last year, and authori-es in Canada say that 160,000,000 bush-ls will be their maximum, compared ith 336 million bushels last year. Now, ist for the sake of illustration, let us ssume that harvesting returns prove iese forecasts to be correct and we find his striking comparison:—

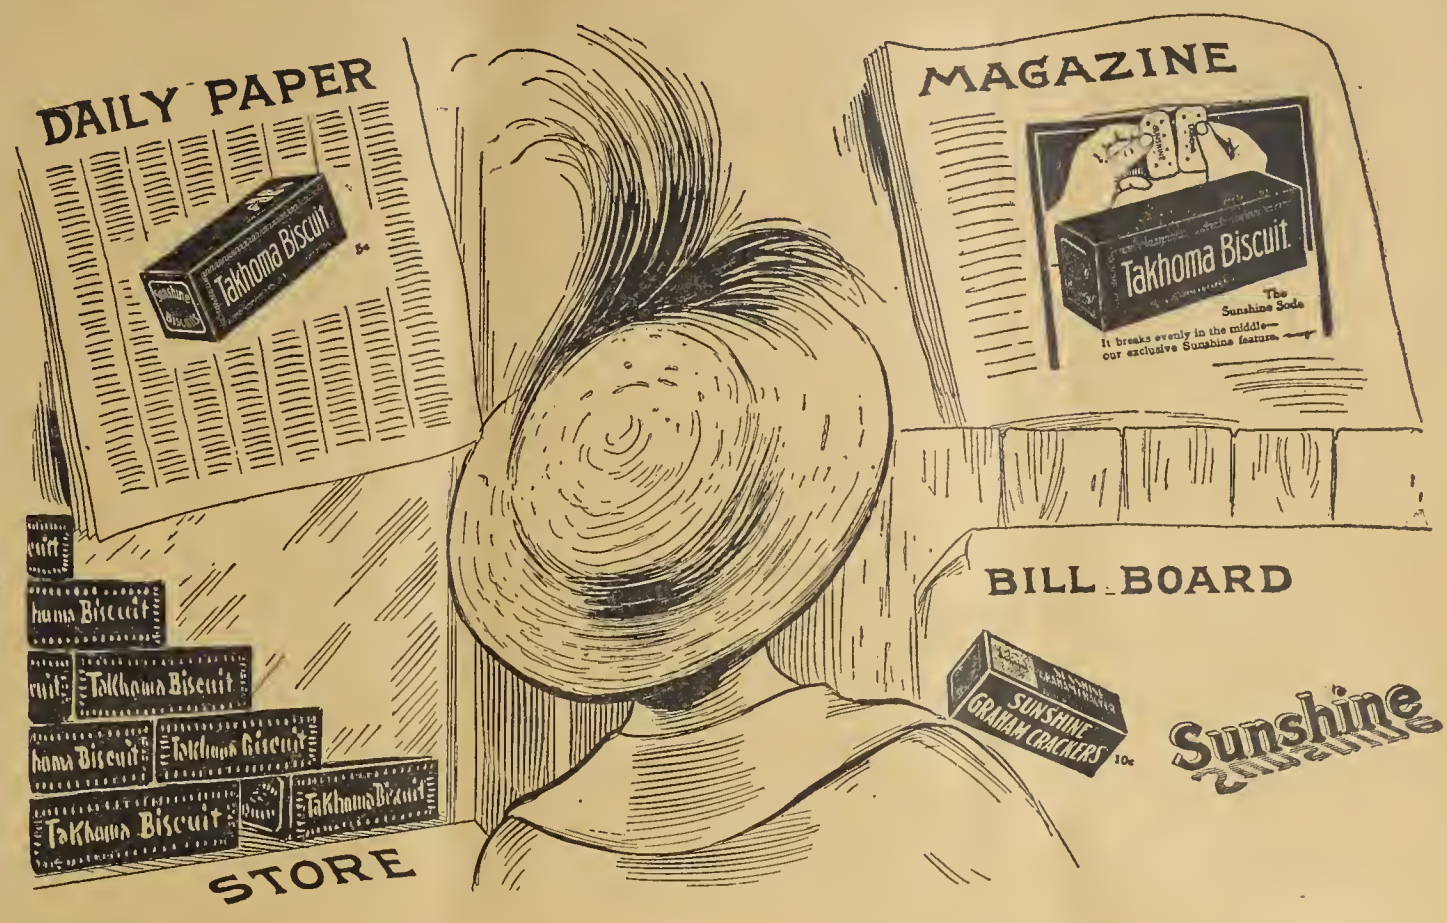
That in 1915 the spring wheat crop n the United States at four and a half ushels to the barrel would yield 79,000,-00 barrels of flour, as against 29,000,000 arrels this year. The Canadian crop vould yield only 32,000,000 barrels this ear, compared with 75,000,000 last year. Our winter wheat this year would yield nly 96,000,000 barrels, as against 138,-00,000 last year. In all the above we alculate spring wheat this year at five ushels to the barrel, although some illers say that it will take five and a alf bushels.

Here is the summary:—

Comparison of Flour Equivalent.

	1915 Million bbls.	1916 Million bbls.
J. S. spring wheat crop	79,000,000	29,000,000
Canadian spring wheat crop	75,000,000	32,000,000
J. S. winter wheat crop	138,000,000	96,000,000
	292,000,000	157,000,000

The shortage in wheat is not con-ined to North America, but is world-vide, for the world's production is ,341,000,000, against 4.454,000,000 last ear and is the smallest crop since 908.



Here is the comparison:—

World's Wheat Crops in Millions of Bushels.

909.....	3,590,000,000	bushels
910.....	3,613,000,000	bushels
911.....	3,576,000,000	bushels
912.....	3,838,000,000	bushels
913.....	4,009,000,000	bushels
914.....	3,759,000,000	bushels
915.....	4,454,000,000	bushels
916.....	3,341,000,000	bushels

The world h-s had seven years of ountiful crops, and it brings to mind he biblical story of Joseph, who fore-saw that the seven years of plenty would be followed by seven years of crop failure.

The outlook for the next year is not promising, for the Canadian and our own Northwest will require 50,000,000 bushels of good wheat for seed and it will be very difficult, if not impossible, to obtain it. Do you realize that im-porting nations require more than 600,000,000 bushels by August 1, 1917, and that they are counting on Argen-tina harvesting a big crop next Decem-ber and on the India crop, which comes next April? The situation is serious. Do not make the mistake of trying to Foreign Grocery Specialties.

Just had quotations from our people in France on this season's pack of French peas. Prices are so exorbitant that we could not possibly think of importing them. They also say that mushrooms continue just as scarce as ever and high. They are scarce in this market as well.

As we have reported lately, garlic has been selling in this market below European parity of prices. Consequently, shipments have fallen off very materially, which has stiffened the market to some extent. The demand is still not up to the standard, but it is getting somewhat better.

Since our last report we are sorry to say that we have received news from Europe that the next olive crop does not promise very well. Of course, it is rather too early to judge, but all the same, prices have advanced very materially in Italy and in other primary markets. The demand for pure olive oil continues excellent in all parts of this country, and our cables from Italy also say that the best qualities of edible olive oil, the only grade that we import, are getting very scarce and hard to obtain.

Imported Fish Specialties.

The salt fish situation continues unchanged since our last report. Business is good in a hand-to-mouth way—nothing startling, of course, during the hot weather, but herrings are selling very nicely and the trade seems to have gotten reconciled to the idea that lower prices are not to be expected in the near future.

Whatever imported sardines we are receiving from Portugal, as well as from Norway, are finding ready sale; prices, of course, are high, but those who want good sardines simply have to pay asking prices. From France we are getting but very small lots, and they cost a lot of money, and they are selling very freely.

Rice.

The demand for the week, while showing improvement, has been somewhat irregular—buyers taking only as required to cover their special needs. The general trade appear somewhat indifferent for the most part, as the feeling prevails that lower prices may ensue shortly. There is a diversity of opinion as to the course of the market for the time being, at least, as the pessimistic claim a big crop is in sight—ignoring possibilities of storm damage before harvesting—and, therefore, the natural tendency is towards a lower range of values. On the other hand, the planters, through their association, have so far been able to maintain their control and until there is an accumulation of rough, it looks doubtful that any material concession would be allowed below present prevailing prices, which naturally forces a steady market for the cleaned product.

Advices from the South along the Atlantic coast report practically no change over last week. If anything, trade has fallen off somewhat, supposedly on account of delayed cotton crop.

At New Orleans the market for clean continues active, with a good demand. Strictly fancy river rices are very scarce and command a premium. Japans and Blue Rose are nominal, due to light offerings, there being no new crop harvested.

In the Interior, Southwest Louisiana, Texas and Arkansas, harvesting is being delayed by rainy weather, which may have a tendency to hold the market firm.

Spices.

The market is quite active. There has been urgent demand for goods during the week and many inquiries are in the market. During the next few weeks we will see an active demand for many articles throughout the list.

Pepper.—The market is more active. Grinding demand is large at present Black peppers are low in price, present import cost considered. There is likely to be a large demand for all grades of pepper during September.

Red peppers are quiet at present and unchanged in price.

Cloves are now reported much firmer in England. The crop in Zanzibar is unquestionably short. We expect to see advances in price this fall.

Pimento (Allspice).—Is very much firmer and has advanced fully ½ to ¾ cent per pound. We hear of violent hurricanes in Jamaica, which have had a tendency to excite the market and raise prices.

Mace.—At present in very good demand. Values, however, are unchanged.

Nutmegs.—Are only in fair demand at present. We look for an increase in demand during the next two or three weeks. Present prices are certainly safe.

Cassias.—Saigon grade quiet and fairly steady. Batavias firmer. China grades unsettled.

Gingers.—Are almost entirely neglected and generally unchanged in price.

Green Ginger Root.—Is in fair demand at generally steady prices.

Tapiocas.—Somewhat firmer. Demand fair, season considered.

Paprikas.—The assortment in stock at present is narrow. Prices are slightly firmer. Hungarian grade continues out of stock.

Seeds, Herbs, Etc.—Caraway is very much firmer. Cummin, coriander and anise all higher. The crops of some grades of mustard seeds are reported short. Celery is higher.

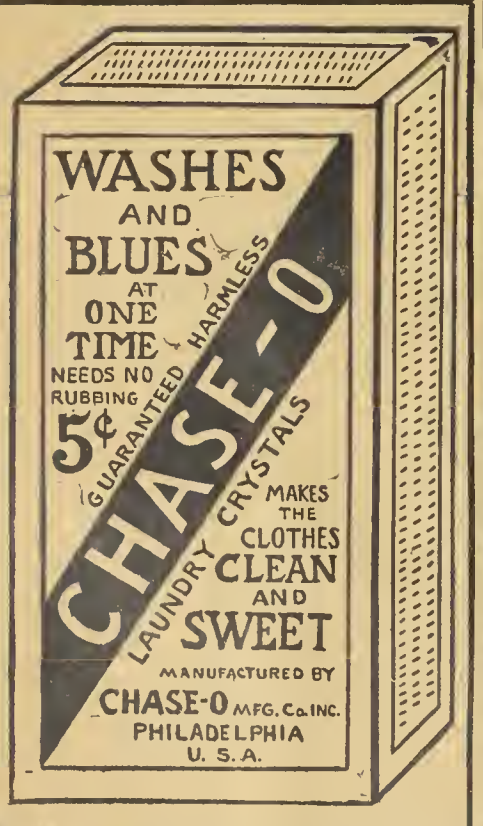
A Unique Attempt to Push a New Brand In in a Minute.

The Very Expensive and Unusual Campaign Which Is Being Waged for Jiffy-Jell and Its Probable Results. Every Jobber in the United States Has Goods Consigned to Him. No Calls Yet.

The Waukesha Pure Food Co., manufacturers of Jiffy-Jell, a new patent gelatine preparation which is being extensively advertised to consumers, has adopted one of the most enormously expensive methods of getting its product in quickly that the trade has ever seen.

The company has consigned to every wholesale grocer in the United States a certain number of cases of Jiffy-Jell. Some got one case, and so on up to five cases. In addition, every retail grocer in the United States has received a four-page letter, telling of the product and the advertising that is being done for it.



None of the jobbers who have been spoken to about the matter have as yet received any calls for the new product, though the advertising and the circular letters have all been out for several weeks. The trade appear to believe that the brand will have a very hard time to get in on account of its price—15 cents to consumers. All of its competitors, which have the advantage of being in and well established, are 10-cent sellers, and only a few of those are prospering.

The attempt to get in with one stroke, as it were, will be watched by the trade with much interest, particularly as the one stroke must have cost a very large sum.

A New Official Standard for Maple Syrup.

The State of New Hampshire has adopted a standard for maple syrup and all that is sold in or sent from that State must now conform to the following:—

Maple syrup is syrup made by the evaporation of maple sap or by the solution of maple concrete, and contains not less than 35 per cent. of water and weighs not less than eleven pounds to the gallon.

Aunt Mary and Larkin Again.

You've heard me tell of my Aunt Mary. She lives in a little town of 4,000 people, and she knows everybody in it and calls 'em by their first names. And everybody knows her.

Aunt Mary is all right. She's all wool and pretty near a yard wide.

I ain't going to tell you where the town is. I don't want a big bunch of sight seers running there, blowing their old Ford smoke in Aunt Mary's face.

Well, I stopped there one night last week. I don't get there half often enough, but when I do they kill a couple of fatted calves and go the limit.

You know Aunt Mary worships the Larkin people. I've told you about her and the Larkins before. Been buying of 'em for years. She's been in a Larkin club ever since I can remember and if you say anything against 'em she gets red in the face and won't give you any pie.

All the same I have the time of my life kidding her about it.

"Well, auntie," I said last week, "you and the Larkins still eatin' together?"

"Now don't you begin on that," she said. "You know we always fight on that and that's why you pester me."

"I ain't pestering you at all," I said. "I'm always hoping you'll turn over a new leaf. Are you still buying their stuff?"

"I sure am," she said. "Going to keep on doing it, too."

"What are you getting there now?"

"Oh, you don't want to know," she said, "you're just trying to start a fuss."

"No, honest, Aunt Mary, I ain't," I said, "I feel plumb interested."

At last it come out she was buying a lot of her groceries there.

"I always get my vanilla there now," she said.

"In Heaven's name, why do you have to send to a Buffalo soap house for vanilla!" I said, "you've got three good grocery stores here."

"Because it's better," she said. "I know it's pure, and it tastes better than grocery store vanilla. Spices, too. I suppose you'll have a fit when I tell you I get all my spices there now. Why they're just as different as can be from the spices I get around here."

"How different?"

"Why they look different. The pepper's cleaner. The last pepper I bought in town here was all full of stuff. Everything you get of Larkins is pure—I know it.

"I did buy some prunes there, but I didn't like them as well," she said. "They weren't large enough. So I buy them at home now. You can't say I'm not fair. I'm willing to buy at home if I can get just as good goods."

She went on to tell how these clubs worked. She and some other women put in a dollar a month and ordered that much stuff every week. Anything they wanted. That was on the premium deal. Every month they'd draw lots for who got the premium. There were ten of 'em all told and every woman was sure to get a premium inside of ten months when all of 'em would have paid in $10. After they'd made out their $1 order they could order whatever else they wanted at half the regular price. Get that. There wasn't any premium in the over part of the order, so they sold that at half price.

When I asked her if that didn't show her she was paying for the premium, she got mad.

I didn't say it to Aunt Mary, but I'm going to say it to you—that there's something dead about the grocers of that town when they let the Larkin crowd get away with a thing like that. They've let Larkin train Aunt Mary into thinking that his spices and his vanilla, and a lot of other stuff, is better than can be bought in that town. Now maybe it is, I don't know that, but it ain't any better than could be bought there.

Just think of her sending to Buffalo for prunes, because she thought she could get 'em better. She found she was wrong about t but that didn't change her al the other stuff. Holy gee, but they must have been laying d on their job, when they let so body from Buffalo come in ther mail and steal a customer from around the corner from 'em!

No Such Thing as Fancy Nut

The Federal Government admits porary defeat in its efforts to d grades in food products. A New importer was recently proceeded ag for selling mixed nuts in bags la "Fancy Mixed Nuts." The Govern claimed that the nuts were not f but the court ruled with the imp that there was no legal standard the quality of nuts, and that the "Fancy" was a matter of opinio long as the product was not delete to health. This decision is likely of considerable importance on products.

Weekly Window Display Suggestions

Pickling Time.

This is a good time to make a display of your vinegar and green tr if you handle any. First cover the bottom of the window with green cr paper. Place two strong boxes, one at each side of the window, to the r and place a strong board across on them. Then make a slant of boa from the edge of the long board to the bottom of the window, and place sm strips of wood to hold the vegetables in place. Cabbage, hot peppers, onio cucumbers, cauliflower, etc., may be displayed. Place large mangoes on strips of wood that separate the vegetables and also place a row of th along the bottom. In front place some jars of pickled cucumbers, ch chow, onions, etc., which may be borrowed from a customer. Across the of the window, at the rear, run a piece of muslin, lettered as shown illustration. If convenient, you can sell the vinegar direct from the wind nt to Expected Large Production f 160,000,000 Pounds, Against stimated Home Consumption of 0,000,000 Pounds.

Experts Expect Drop in Prune Market.

Observers of the prune market m to think that the outlook is ık and that prices ought surely come down. Readers of this ıer know that future prunes have n very high. They did reach 6 ts per pound basis price, f. o. b. st, which is fully twice what ıld be considered a normal price. ey later dropped to around 4¾ ıts, same terms, which is per- ɔs a third higher than the trade ık prices ought to be, consider- conditions. Later they ad- ıced about ¼ cent, where they now, with a premium asked for ge sizes.

The current crop of California ınes is now estimated at around ɔ,000,000 pounds, and the crop of egons at 30,000,000 pounds. This kes a very large production, re- mbering that this country con- nes only 90,000,000 pounds and t the outlook for export is very ɔr.

So far the future sales of prunes ve been almost unprecedentedly all—only about 24,000,000 ınds, about 25 per cent. of nor- l. Here is what an expert on ed fruit conditions says about s phase of it:—

The future sales of prunes, as re- orted early in June, were about ,000 tons and from what we have een able to learn since, from the ther markets and from the coast, robably 3,000 to 4,000 tons addi- ional have been sold since that time. Ve estimate now, and think it rea- onable, that sales to date would be 2,000 tons (24,000,000 pounds).

Foreign selling has been light, ut reliable advices give 1,000 tons t least in foreign sales, making in ll 13,000 tons. This would indi- ate that some short selling, which ıas generally been admitted, though his in itself is not important, ex- ept insofar as the shipping season s near; but on this account it is vorth some thought as a factor on his fall's market.

I Have Sold Them for Years

It is a pleasure for the grocer to sell Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk and Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Milk because they are such lively sellers and always prove so satisfactory to the customer. Established reputation for purity and quality, together with steady advertising, keep Borden's Brands of Milk moving rapidly from the grocer's shelves. You can handle Borden's Milks with perfect confidence, knowing that every can in every case will sell and give satisfaction.

There are brands of condensed and evaporated milks which do not give satisfaction because of inferior quality, or they will not keep until sold, owing to unscientific, careless, or unsanitary methods of manufacture, causing many complaints from customers. You can avoid all these complaints by handling only Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk, Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Milk, St. Charles and Silver Cow Brands of Evaporated Milk, All Borden's Brands, whether sweetened or unsweetened, are made from the highest grade raw milk, by the most modern method of manufacture, and are guaranteed absolutely pure. No. 379.—What Recourse Has the Addressee of a Bungled Telegram Against the Company, Where He Makes a Loss Through It?

Here is a legal problem that many will be interested in:—

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Please tell us whether the telegraph company is liable for our loss in this case. We are handlers of the above California products, and we do considerable business with a house in Los Angeles, Cal. We communicate with them more by wire than we do by letter, usually by code. Not long ago the market in a certain Philadelphia product was on the verge of an advance and we wired asking for lowest price on two cars of futures. Back came a code telegram telling of firm and advancing market and advising us to buy at $5.25 per bushel, which price we had told them was being offered by another house. Following the words advising us to buy at $5.25, they had addcd the following code words "we guarancante," meaning "we will not sell at this price." The telegraph company bungled the word, and made it "we guarantee," making us think that they too were willing to sell at $5.25 and were moreover guaranteeing this price against decline. Accordingly we wired out an order for two cars at $5.25. In due course the Los Angeles house advised us of our mistake, but by that time the market had advanced to $5.75. We had lost our chance to buy of the other house at $5.25, because of the telegraph company's mistake, and were compelled to pay $5.75, making a loss of $500 on two cars. Have we any recourse against the telegraph company?

Respectfully,
J. T. & CO.

I believe you have, and while I am discussing this I can say some things which may be interesting about the law of liability in such cases.

Any suit against a telegraph company bristles with complications, because telegraph companies have worked all the ingenuity which was theirs, for years in order to relieve themselves from the consequences of their own negligence. These efforts have caused continual warfare between the companies and their customers, resulting in many court decisions, by no means uniform as between the different States. The courts have held them back all they could, some more than others.

On the back of every telegraph blank will be found the following, or a very close modification of it:

ALL TELEGRAMS TAKEN BY THIS COMPANY ARE SUBJECT TO THE FOLLOWING TERMS:

To guard against mistakes or delays, the sender of a telegram should order it repeated, that is, telegraphed back to the originating office for comparison. For this, one-half the unrepeated telegram rate is charged in addition. Unless otherwise indicated on its face, this is an unrepeated telegram and paid for as such, in consideration whereof it is agreed between the sender of the telegram and this Company as follows:—

1. The company shall not be liable for mistakes or delays in the transmission or delivery, or for non-delivery, of any unrepeated telegram, beyond the amount received for sending the same; nor for mistakes or delays in the transmission or delivery, or for non-delivery of any repeated telegram, beyond fifty times the sum received for sending the same, unless specially valued; nor in any case for delays arising from unavoidable interruption in the working of its lines; nor for errors in cipher or obscure telegrams.

2. In any event the company shall not be liable for damages for any mistakes or delays in the transmission or delivery, or for the non-delivery of this telegram, whether caused by the negligence of its servants or otherwise, beyond the sum of $50, at which amount this telegram is hereby valued, unless a greater value is stated in writing hereon at the time the telegram is offerd to the company for transmission, and an additional sum paid or agreed to be paid based on such value equal to one-tenth of 1 per cent. thereof.

3. The company is hereby made the agent of the sender, without liability, to forward this telegram over the lines of any other company when necessary to reach its destination.

4. Telegrams will be delivered free within one-half mile of the company's office in towns of 5,000 population or less, and within one mile of such office in other cities or towns. Beyond these limits the company does not undertake to make delivery, but will, without liability, at the sender's request, as his agent and at his expense, endeavor to contract for him for such delivery at a reasonable price.

5. No responsibility attaches to this company concerning telegrams until the same are accepted at one of its transmitting offices; and if a telegram is sent to such office by one of the company's messengers, he acts for that purpose as the agent of the sender.

6. The company will not be liable for damages or statutory penalties in any case where the claim is not presented in writing within sixty days after the telegram is filed with the company for transmission.

7. No employee of the company is authorized to vary the foregoing.

8. The above provisions shall be binding on the addressee of this message as well as the sender.

This goes about as far as human language can to hold the company blameless for its faults, but happily the courts have held that considerable of it was against public policy and invalid.

The case submitted involves four main questions:—

1—As the contract to send this message was between the company and the sender, can the addressee, who had no contract with the company, sue the company for damages for violation of the contract?

2—If the wording on the back of the message is a good contract between the sender and the company, is it binding on the addressee?

3—What is the company's liability for errors in transmitting code messages? Is a code message a cipher message?

4—If the addressee can sue for damages, what damages can he get?

I assume that the sender of this message wrote it out first on the company's message blanks. If he wrote it on plain paper, neither he nor anybody else is bound by the stipulations on the back, even though the company's employee took his memorandum and copied, or attached it, to a blank bearing the stipulations.

Answering No. 1, the addressee can sue, practically in every State in the Union. Different State courts give different reasons for this attitude, but I need not go into them, as they all come to the sa thing.

Answering No. 2, the law is n settled as to whether the address of a message is bound by the stip lations on the back. Obviously shouldn't be, for he never agreed them and did not see them bef the message was sent. Some Sta say that he is bound, others (cluding Pennnsylvania, this cor spondent's State) say he is not, the reasons I have given abo Perhaps the majority opinion is t he is bound.

But the stipulations on the b are not always a good contract e with the sender. Some courts h held these stipulations to be r sonable, but even these courts hold the company responsible wilful misconduct or gross ne gence. Other courts say all s efforts to dodge responsibility against public policy and void wh the company has been guilty even ordinary negligence.

This also applies to the stipu tion confirming the company's bility in damages to the amount p for the message, or to ten ti that, or to $50—making any li tation of damages under full c pensation.

Answering No. 3, a code cipher message means, I take it, combination of words which t telegraph company would be me ingless. In a straight message "Will sell for one hundred dolla it is one thing for the company make the mistake of saying " not" for "will." In a code mess like "orange lemon oscar pr funnel," it is quite another th for the company to make it tu instead of funnel, of course c pletely changing the meaning. many States an addressee can collect more than nominal dama when the message was such that agent could not understand it its meaning was not explained. in some other States (a fewer nu ber) the company will still be h responsible. But in all States courts will examine all the fa and will hold the company respon ble even on a code message, wh ever they can. Where the messa is obviously a business message, instance, between a buyer and seller, where prices are named in the company is put on notice, a even where some code words used, many courts will hold company responsible for plain n ligence.

Where a message plainly said arancante" and the company te it guarantee, I believe almost court would hold this to be neg-nce, because it was not especially cure. Admittedly telegraph panies should not be held so ctly responsible for translating gs they cannot understand, but e seems no reason why they uld not have understood "guar-nte."

Answering No. 4, the measure of nages, where damages can be ined, is the real direct loss. In case submitted, it would be the erence between the price at ch the addressee could have ght, and the price which he fin- had to pay.

Question: M. & Co., Philadel-a, Pa.—Please answer this ques-n in your Legal column. We e a contract with a certain ker for fancy future peas. The tract was entered into several nths ago, before the seed was n planted, and of course before ould be told what the quality of 1916 pack would be. The con-ct does not say anything about peas being fancy "for the cur-t pack," but simply says "fancy." ey have not yet been delivered, we have reason to believe that peas which will be tendered to will not be fancy, but a consid-ble notch under fancy, and that packer will endeavor to plead t they were the best of the year's ck and are therefore fancy. Is s position tenable?

Answer.—I should think not; ways provided you can prove that word "fancy" has an abstract aning. In other words, that it s such a fixed and established aning that you can demonstrate any time what a "fancy" pea is. that is the case, and I understand it it is, my judgment is that the cker could not deliver peas which re the best of the current pack d call them fancy if they were t. If he could do that, the stand-l would change every year, and no standard at all. If some un-vorable growing condition caused the peas packed to be so poor ey were practically seconds, it ould follow that the second of a rmal year would become the ncy of this year. I am sure there nothing to that at all. My under-anding is that a fancy pea means pea with certain characteristics, ear liquor, no split peas, and so i. That being so, the packer who ntracted to deliver "fancy" peas would have to deliver peas conform-ing with those specifications.

Question: H. C. D., Philadelphia, Pa.—Please give me your opinion on the following case: About four years ago property next to mine, separated by an alley, was leased to a neighbor for bakery purposes. In rear of same he built a shed entirely of wood which does not allow a proper amount of clear space. It has a felt paper roof, and a flue run-ning through, and connected to frame bay window from bake shop in basement to carry excess heat therefrom.

A building inspector visited my house on business about one year after and volunteered to have same removed if we made complaint, say-ing it had no right there according to law. We did not comply, advis-ing him of our desire to avoid hin-dering our neighbor in his start and not wanting his ill will, although the shed was annoying.

About two months ago the tenant stopped business, and we thought it a good time to have the shed re-moved while the property was vacant, since the man did not take it down himself.

I advised the inspector of my de-sires and he said he could do noth-ing unless we swore to affidavit as to age of shed, etc., and lack of per-mit to build same, together with usual complaint, all of which would probably cost $10.

I visited City Hall and complaint was filed, costing nothing, and when he made report on same to headquarters he reversed his views, saying the shed was all right.

The shed is a menace to my prop-erty as to fire and an eye-sore to the neighborhood, and I would like to have it removed if possible. It looks like graft to me, although I may be mistaken. Any advice you will give me will be gratefully ap-preciated.

Answer.—If the Bureau of Build-ing Inspection has already refused to order the shed removed, nothing more can be done in that direction. I should not rest with the simple statement of the district inspector, however, who as you say has re-versed himself. I should go to the City Hall and lay the matter before the Chief of the Bureau.

It would also be a good idea to have an inspector from the Board of Fire Underwriters call and see the shed. This will cost you, I think, about $1.50. If it is a men-ace on account of fire you can have it removed, although not merely because of its appearance.

Secure the Customer's Confidence

NEVER recommend an article which does not stand up and meet every claim you make for it.

An article may appear very attractive the first time because of cheap price, but no customer ever developed an enthusiasm for such an article which reacted favorably upon the dealer who sold it. Good merchandise, fair prices and no overstatements will soon build up for any dealer a confidence in his honesty and his goods that compels growth.

Any grocer can recommend, without fear of overpraise, any product of National Biscuit Company. We use only the best of materials, employ the most up-to-date methods and exercise the greatest care in the making of every article we bake. The N. B. Week's Dry Goods Report.

Marshall Field & Co., in their weekly review of the dry goods trade, say:—

Wholesale shipments of dry goods for the current week show a good increase over the same period of last year.

The total volume of road sales is continuing to run ahead of the corresponding week of 1915.

Notwithstanding the splendid future business which has been booked, wholesalers are gratified at the very heavy volume of house sales which have been made throughout the market season.

Collections for the week have been above normal.

The market on domestic cotton goods is strong, with an upward tendency.

I have another mimeographed letter for criticism this week. It is from W. L. Burd & Co., general merchants at Swengel, Pa. Judging from the circulars that come in here, retail advertisers are coming to use the mimeograph to print their advertising more and more. I have discussed this several times. The point is two-fold: 1, cheapness, although cheapness alone is not usually much of a recommendation for advertising methods; 2, increased effectiveness, for the reason that advertising can be produced which has much of the appearance of a typewritten and therefore personal communication. An enormous lot of sloppy trash is issued, however, under the name of mimeographed advertising. Years ago I used to operate a mimeograph myself, and I know by experience how easy it is to do smudgy work. Some mimeograph advertising has some to this desk which I should have been ashamed to send out. Don't use a mimeograph at all unless you are willing to take the necessary pains to be clean.

Very truly yours, W. L. Burd & Co.

IF OUR GOODS PLEASES YOU, TELL OTHERS. IF NOT, TELL US.

This is first-class advertising and I feel sure that it got results. It rather petered out toward the end, however, and got down to the simple mention of the goods, which I always hate to see, because it is seldom or never good advertising. If I were Burd & Co. I should put less matter on a sheet, and then it would not be necessary to give inadequate attention to anything. I feel absolutely confident that the sort of advertising embodied in the first six paragraphs on this sheet will pay handsome dividends. Reasons! Reasons! Reasons! The better the reason you give people for buying, the better the advertising. This seems simple and easily understood, but almost all the advertising that fails, fails because it is not followed, in my judgment.

NOTE.—This department is devoted to the criticism of advertising matter sent in, to the devising of new advertising ideas for special occasions, upon request, and to the suggesting of original advertisements when data is supplied. All communications sent for this Department should be addressed to the Editor of Science of Advertising. They will be taken up in strict rotation.

Pennsylvania Organization Notes.

The Minersville Association will be the host to the merchants of Schuylkill County on September 7th. The event will be a combination convention and an interesting programme has been prepared. The speakers include Mr. Albert Kain, president of the Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association, who will address the convention on the subject, "The Retailer's Opportunity," and Mr. William Smedley, who will talk on "Co-operation." The convention will be called to order at 1.30 P. M. It is expected that there will be a large attendance and a cordial invitation is extended to all business men to attend.

Selling Talks With Clerks

BY A MAN WHO HAS BEEN ONE

Conducted by W. E. SWEENEY, Manager for L. Lehman & Co.'s Department Food Store, Dover, N. J.

Sell Canned Goods?—Yes, sir, and this is the very time to push them. Have you noticed how the big city stores are advertising them? Do you know why? It's to make room for futures. It's to clean up old stock. Peas, especially, need pushing, so does your California fruit. A man went out the other morning and sold five cases in a retail way extra fancy peaches. The store was "long" on this grade.

You know, along in the fall, when people begin to buy this kind of stuff, the question is nearly always asked, "Is this new fruit?" or, "Are these new tomatoes or peas?" and it's mighty fine to be able, truthfully, to say, "Positively they are." So the more effort you put into your clean-up line now, the more "push" you can put into your sale later.

* * *

That suggests the word "truthfulness" in selling. When your word becomes absolutely reliable you have done a big piece of constructive work for your firm.

To illustrate—a customer approached the clerk and asked this question, "Did this cream come in to-day?" He answered, "No, ma'am, it is yesterday, but I guarantee it sweet." She bought the cream, but not without complimenting the management on the "unusual candor" of his employee.

It is just such little things as that help, more than anything else here, to build a successful business. In word and deed we must deal always absolutely on the level with the public. Your profit is the smallest part, to be sure. The principle must be established and encouraged and sustained at the fountain head, but unless you work in conjunction with the fountain head, any principle, any ideal, will surely fall flat.

* * *

Paper.—Once again we want to refer to the importance of being careful with your paper and bags. Paper is higher in price than it has ever been in your time or ours, and by practicing economy in the handling of this article you can surely save your firm money.

* * *

Mayonnaise.—While eating lunch the other day the writer overheard banon (Pa.) Business Men's Association Opposes Stephens Bill.

opts Resolutions Declaring That roposed Measure, Giving Manu-acturers Right to Fix Resale Price, Would Impair Competition.

The Business Men's Association Lebanon, Pa., has adopted a reso-ion opposing the passage of the ephens bill, which would give nufacturers of trade-marked rchandise the right to fix the olesale and retail selling price. e Lebanon organization says it uld destroy competition.

Here is the resolution:—

Resolved, That we, the under-igned, believing that the measure ntroduced in the House of Rep-esentatives, known as the Stephens Bill, and a similar measure intro-luced in the Senate known as the Ashurst Bill, each providing for price maintenance, are contrary to he interests of the greatest number of the consuming public, retail mer-chants and the manufacturers, herefore we submit this brief in opposition to their enactment into aw.

We further believe that these measures are unconstitutional, and are contrary to decisions both State and national based on property rights of purchasers or owners of personal property to dispose of their property at will.

We are further of the opinion that these bills would destroy com-petition and obstruct channels of trade; and that they would increase the cost of living by giving to the manufacturers, who seek it, legally the right to determine the price of commodities to the manufacturer's benefit. Furthermore, that these bills would take from the retail merchant his long-established right to act as intermediary between the manufacturer and the public, par-ticularly in the matter of prices for necessaries of life.

Wherefore, we should like to go on record as opposed to the passage of the Stephens-Ashurst Bill.

Copies of the resolution will be ent to Pennsylvania Senators and embers of Congress.

Franklin Carton Sugar Is Ready to Hand Out to Customers

When you have slit the top of a CONTAINER of FRANKLIN CARTON SUGAR with your pocketknife (and that's easier than taking the head off a barrel), the CARTONS are ready to hand out to the customers with no more work than if they were cans of tomatoes.

FRANKLIN CARTON SUGAR saves you all the work of putting sugar in bags, saves the cost of the bags, the cost of twine, saves time, prevents loss by overweight. The CARTON is a neat, tight, strong package that will not burst like a paper bag and let the sugar out. It keeps the sugar clean and dry and your customers will appreciate those features. FRANKLIN CARTON SUGAR pays you a profit because it costs you nothing to handle; bulk sugar does not pay you any profit because of the cost of handling. You can make a profit instead of a loss on all your sugar trade by handling FRANKLIN CARTON SUGAR as we pack all fast selling grades in the FRANKLIN CARTON, including FRANKLIN GRANULATED, FRANKLIN CUBE, FRANKLIN DESSERT & TABLE, FRANKLIN XXXX CONFECTIONERS' and FRANKLIN POWDERED.

You can buy FRANKLIN CARTON SUGAR in the original CONTAINERS of 24, 48, 60 and 120 pounds

WHAT TO TELL CUSTOMERS

"We know you'll like Franklin Carton Sugar because it's cleaner and better quality than other sugars, and the Carton keeps it clean and dry as well as being a handy package for your cupboard."

This is one of the firms the sale of whose products helps organize the Pennsylvania Retail Merchants

The Subscribers' Bargain List

Have you got any goods you don't want? Anything—canned goods, groceries, hardware, dry goods, anything at all that's in good condition, but won't sell for you.

If you will make a price on it we can possibly sell it for you in a hurry. Write us about it, stating the quantity, condition and your best price. You might give the original cost, too. We will give it a key number and offer it to our 4,000 subscribers. Your name will not appear unless you want it to. All sales ought to be on a cash basis.

The point is that what won't sell for you may be in everday demand for somebody else, who will be glad to get your stock of it at a bargain.

There will be no charge for this service anywhere—we do it to help along.
